YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Wealth and friends are two of the gifts which most of us would like the Fairy Bountiful to bestow upon us. According to an old Hindu belief, friendship can be secured by those wearing a garnet—today's talismanic stone—on this day.

Today's natal gem is the aquamarine, which exerts its powers most successfully when the wearer is in good health. An old legend asserts that it insures its wearer freedom from small cares and worries.

White should be worn today. Those who wear it are likely to be entrusted with the handling of affairs of vital importance.

The blue larkspur is today's flower and is particularly meant for women, since it is believed to bestow on them the power of charming the opposite sex.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

THOMAS H. HUXLEY AND HENRIETTA HEATHORN

Balanced Against His Love One of the Greatest Scientists in the World Found All His Hopes and Ambitions of Lesser Importance.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

That the great biologist and populariser of science, Thomas Henry Huxley should have been ready to give up the work that was to be of such extraordinary value to the world, for the sake of his love, is a powerful revelation of human nature and the best proof that all things sink into subordination before "the greatest thing in the world."

"Sometimes I am half-mad with the notion of bringing all my powers i a surer struggle for a livelihood. Some times I am equally wild at thinking of the long weary while that has passed since we met. There are times when I cannot bear to think of leaving my present pursuits, when I think I should be guilty of a piece of cowardly desertion from my duty in doing it, and there come intervals when I would give truth and science and all hopes to be folded in your arms. . . .

"I know which course is right, but I never know which I may follow; help me . . . for there is only one course which is either hope or peace for me. . . ."

Fortunately, Miss Heathorn showed Huxley the right course and in doing so she became eventually the wife of a great servant of the world. Mrs. Huxley was known as her husband's chief help and his keenest critic.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

(By Alma Whitaker.)

John H. wants my ideas about a young man recently appointed to an important State commission for research work in connection with the narcotic problem.

John says he heard this young man at a meeting of criminologists and psychiatrists and was most favorably impressed by his serious mind and his responsible capacity. But two hours later he and his wife dropped into a fashionable hotel for supper and to his horror he saw this young man win a dance competition in company with a girl who looked like an actress. Could such a young man be trusted with such an important commission?

Well, John, I can understand a young man needing an antidote to such serious and seamy-sided work. And, besides, good dancing calls for a quick co-ordination of brain and muscle. And even if the girl was an actress, she might be an entirely worthy young person. I am not at all satisfied that it is more sinful to drop into a hotel to dance than to eat a midnight supper at that!

Edith says she has fallen passionately in love with her friend's husband. She thinks he returns her romantic passion, but is too loyal to his wife to express it. She says his wife doesn't appreciate him and is a selfish, self-centered young woman.

No sympathy from me, Edith. Wives never do seem to properly appreciate attractive husbands in cases like that. And one has to believe that they are selfish and self-centered and saddle them with a lot of other faults to justify one's own feelings. If you really love man, you will wish to help him be loyal to his wife and not go trumping up mental disloyalties for him which he probably doesn't feel. You are probably just a silly, infatuated girl.

Claudia says she is a stenographer but wants to write. Will I please tell her how to become a writer?

Claudia, dear, you are not a good stenographer—three spelling mistakes, poor punctuation and careless typing mark your letter. And it is too discursive and long-winded into the bargain. You have to be a pretty good stenographer to become a writer in these days of busy editors. After that it might be a good idea for you to secure a job in the business office of some newspaper or magazine, where you would be on the scene and know when there were any vacancies and familiarize yourself with the tastes and policies of the editor. More depends on pleasing an editor than you might suppose. And they are all interestingly different. In newspaper work, a good exclusive news story usually proves irresistible. Signed editorial articles come a long time after. An attractive feature story about some topical subject is a good way to break in. But in any case the way to become a writer is to keep on writing—and to know a lot about your fellow human beings.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

In suburban and country communities where almost every woman or her next-door neighbor has some sort of car, there is less excuse now than formerly for the shopping bag. But in cities where one really must be well-to-do to keep a car and where parking is so difficult that even if you have a car you don't use it for shopping—there is still much need for some sort of bag in which to carry home small purchases.

During the war almost every woman carried an enormous knitting bag. There probably was a sock on the needles somewhere within its depths but there was quite likely also to be a head of lettuce for luncheon, some letters to be posted, a library book, and a dozen little bundles—things that in those war days it didn't seem quite patriotic to have sent. But with the passing of the war passed also this convenient and inexpensive carry-all.

In almost every suburban or small town community nowadays you will find one or two or three women who make quite a show of carrying a market basket—usually a very nice market basket—about with them when they go to buy the daily provisions. The well-to-do wife of a suburban rector carries such a market basket as she makes her daily visits to butcher, baker and candlestick-maker—and you rather suspect that she does so in order to give an impression of thrift, frugality and simple living.

One thing apparently that the up-to-date woman does not like to do and that is to carry loose bundles. In France and to some extent in this country, handbags are assuming enormous proportions. There is something quite attractive about these large bags that somehow tend to make the skirts of those who carry them seem shorter. At the races earlier in the season women were to be seen carrying bags as large as over-night bags, and they looked really smarter than the small bags that have been fashionable for several seasons.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Variety is still the watchword of the makers of handbags who are ever on the lookout for new materials. The practical purse at the top is of antelope outlined with gold. In the center is a pouch bag of calf and alligator and below a purse and handkerchief scarf both made of printed foulard.

Accessory ensembles—that is what they call them, but they take a few words of explanation. The original idea of an ensemble—or rather the idea when ensemble became a popular fashion term in this country—was a costume consisting of frock and wrap, or skirt, bodice and coat to match. The idea was that the wrap should match or go with the frock beneath. We have got so used to this idea that it is hard to think that only a few years ago it was considered quite original.

The new idea seems to be that the ensemble effect should be achieved by matching accessories. That so desirable effect of unity should be achieved by the linking up of hat with bag, shoes with gloves, hat with umbrella—or by means of any two or three or four accessories to match. The effect of unity is pleasing to the eye. Moreover it indicates a certain premeditation in dress that is gratifying to the beholder.

A short-cut way to achieve this effect of accessory ensemble is to buy one of the sets already assembled for you. You may prefer to buy the different matching accessories separately, feeling that the effect is more subtle when there is nothing too obvious about the matter.

You may get the effect merely by means of color, only you must be sure that the colors really do match. Not all cherries are the same shade and there are wine reds that swear at other wine reds. But with patience and a good eye for color you can get the accessories to match. You buy a cherry-colored felt hat. Very good. Cherry-colored felt hats go well with black or beige or gray costumes. But your task is not over. You pick up that note of cherry in some other part of your attire. You may choose tan suede gloves with garrow cherry cuffs—or you may buy cherry-colored patent leather shoes—with stockings of beige with a cherry cast—or you may buy a cherry-colored handbag. In Paris—possibly in this country too—one may buy leather hats with leather waistcoats to match.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S QUESTIONS.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1927

Astrologers read this as rather a threatening day, for many stars appear to frown on the planet Earth.

It is a day in which the aged are likely to be crabbed and critical of the new order of things and it is well not to take them too seriously.

Early in the morning it may be lucky to seek employment, for later there may be unusual disappointments.

Labor may be dissatisfied and critical of public policies while this planetary rule prevails.

This may be a menacing sway for mines and mining. Accidents may be easily precipitated, it is believed.

For intellectual men and women there appears to be indication of fine opportunities. Universities are to expand and great artists are to multiply.

Under this direction of the stars there may be much intrigue, deceit and double-dealing. An unpleasant international incident is foretold.

Late to-day women should benefit, at least so far as amusement and romance may be concerned.

Rumors of wars and much turmoil in many corners of the Earth are foreshadowed and the United States will have many tests in its diplomacy.

Lack of self-control and extreme nervousness may be more evident than usual at this time when there will be numerous maladies that affect the mind.

Suicides among persons of prominence are on the increase, the seers declare, because of the peculiar aspects of the stars.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be connected with great buildings such as hospitals and educational institutions.

Children born on this day probably will be intensely artistic. Many mystics are torn under this sign.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

ALTHEA

One of the most confusing names in feminine nomenclature is Althea. Extraordinarily beautiful and belonging absolutely to the aristocracy, it is constantly jostled and confused by a host of other names. Althea, be it said, is an individual. The name means wholesome and not true as is generally believed. The latter significance is generally given because it is confused with the name Alathea, sometimes known as Letty.

The real Althea, which comes from the Greek word, meaning healthy or wholesome, belonged in ancient times to the unfortunate mother of Meleager. It persisted as a feminine name in ancient Greece, but is now more often used to designate a genus of mallows, or rather to allude to their healing power.

It comes to us through literary channels and maintains its somewhat isolated state, never having descended to anything like common usage.

As Althea is a rare name, so is her talismanic gem, the star sapphire. It is a jewel which promises her great achievement along artistic lines and protects her from evil. Saturday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

FOOD AND HEALTH

THE DIGESTIBILITY OF FOOD

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

Like so many other words, the term digestible is relative. When the nutrition specialist thinks of it, it is usually in terms of the length of time during which the food remains in the stomach. This is all to the good, and is the natural way for the scientist to estimate. The housewife, however, should take a slightly different method. She must think of a good many factors that enter into the planning of a nourishing diet. Dad, for example, is not going round with a stop watch in his pocket in order to make intricate calculations as to how long the food remains in one part of his anatomy!

On the other hand, mother may keep quiet within practical bounds and study carefully what contributes to the digestibility of our ordinary foods.

Before she begins to study along these lines, mother must remember the oft-repeated advice about suiting the diet to the age. Again, using dad as an illustration, mother knows that his favorite dishes are those usually described as hearty or spicy.

Spice baked ham is the favorite of a good many men, but 'mother must not think of giving it to six-year-old Susie. Even twelve-year-old Dickie will be the better if he has a plain broiled chop.

So this element of simplicity is perhaps the first point on which to judge the digestibility of foods. Dad may have ham, his mince pie and his deviled tongue with stuffed cucumbers and be happy and well-fed at the same time. But the children would be neither, for indigestion would probably lay them low.

Then digestibility is sometimes determined by the season. A dish of pork and beans added to a hot lunch or supper when one is camping or tramping would be the last thing in the world to be cheerfully entertained by a stomach that was tired from the heat of August.

With these two suggestions perhaps my readers will like to think out for themselves other factors that enter into deciding whether or not a food is "digestible."

Her Little Boy Caught Cold While Out Playing

Mrs. F. Cade, Elmwood, Man., writes:—"My little boy caught cold while out playing in the snow. He coughed incessantly all that night and the next day, and nothing I gave him seemed to relieve him. When my husband came home he brought a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup with him. After the second dose my boy was greatly relieved and after the third dose he went to sleep and slept the whole night through without any coughing. I am never without it in the house, and whenever any of the children get the slightest cold it's the first thing I give them."

With the score standing 3 to 3 at the end of the final period the Peterborough Juniors were nosed out by the Lindsay team who bulged the net for one goal in the first overtime fixture. The overtime was played under protest as the local junior management claim that it is goals that are to count in the double schedule with Lindsay, so the matter is being left in the hands of the O.H.A. executive to give their ruling.

The ice was very soft and playing was heavy but both teams are made up of very fast players and the fans will be treated to real hockey when these teams meet on hard ice. The locals scored in the overtime but it was called an offside.

With the ringing of the first bell the Petes started an offensive play and carried the puck right into the Lindsay defence and only for a little bit of hard luck they would have scored several times in the early part of the first period. The remainder of the period was about even with Lindsay scoring one in a mix-up in front of the locals' goal.

The second period was Peterboroughs' with LeBarr scoring on a fluke goal which struck the boards behind the Lindsay goalie and on the rebound it struck Golden's shoulder pads and dropped into the net.

Lindsay played a four man forward in the final period and scored two well earned goals to the one scored by LeBarr which really showed the best hockey of the night when he worked through the Lindsay defence and scored unassisted.

Both teams had plenty of speed and with the sticky ice they overskated the puck often. Combination was impossible but what little was shown the Petes had the best of it.

As an exhibition of hockey it was good but many penalties were handed out with Lindsay being the worst offenders. The Lindsay team are a fast, hard checking lot but they lacked finished and combination both of which should be overcome with a little more practice. The Petes were strong in every position last night but left wing and before the end of the season the locals are certainly going to be heard from.

When the three periods were up the Petes thought the game was over but after some debating they went back onto the ice after protesting against the proceedure. The deciding tally came very unexpectedly as the Petes were going strong and had kept the play in the Lindsay territory but it was on a long shot which beat Mein.

LeBarr and Kenneally were the outstanding stars on the local team with the former the star of the game and who always had the Lindsay defence worried. Forbert for Lindsay was the best forward player on the ice and he was at all times dangerous to the local goaltender. Mein played a good game and the shots which beat him were hard to handle.

Next Tuesday night the Lindsay boys are going to be down here and the locals will be seen in action for the first time this year. The hockey shown by these teams last night should ensure a capacity crowd for this occasion.

Gold Mashie Tournament Will Be Held Aug. 5, 6, 7

NEWPORT, R.I., Jan. 5.—George Von Elm, national amateur golf champion, has been invited to play in the fifth annual Gold Mashie golf tournament over Ocean Links, the private course of T. Suffern Taller, the dates of which were announced tonight. The tourney, which is expected to attract fourteen of the leading amateurs of the country, will be held here on Aug 5, 6 and 7 and will be over seventy-two holes. Francis Ouimet, Jess W. Sweetser, Max R. Marston and Chick Evans are expected to be among the contestants.

Move For Federal Control Of Baseball Gaint Impetus

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—The movement for Federal control of baseball gained momentum today as the result of Swede Risberg's new scandal charges. Representative Kelly of Pennsylvania began drafting a bill through which Congress would set up a commission of ten members, similar to the old railroad labor board, with the public, players and management represented. Senator Capper of Kansas, who has been collaborating with Kelly, said the Risberg charges emphasized the need of some legislation. The subject was discussed by several other congressmen also.

QUEEN'S PARK ARE VICTORS

United and Aberdeen Succumbed To Hibs—Dundee Beaten.

MOTHERWELL LEADS.

Not only was the scoring exceptionally heavy in the tail end games of the New Year's festival in Scotland, but there were several surprise results. No one dreamed that Queen's Park would take the feet from Celtic at Parkhead, but that is what happened, the amateurs winning by 3 goals to 2, and preventing the Celts from sharing top place with Motherwell, who split six goals with Falkirk at Fir Park. Rangers took second place by defeating the 'Jags' at Partick, but the team with the "sore head" to-day must surely be Dundee, who lost to their local rivals United at Tannadyce Park by the lone goal, and by the same token Jimmy Brownlie and his gang must feel supremely happy. Aberdeen playing at Pitoddrie met a hollow defeat with the coming of Hibernians, and for once, both Edinburgh clubs finished on the winning end, Hearts beating Cowdenbeath 4 to 3. St. Johnstone was another home club to take a bad dose of the New Year medicine, the lowly Clyde scoring 3 against their "orphan." The 11 score of the day was Airdrieonians 7, against Hamilton. Academical's one, another result not quite in keeping with the season's performances by the respective camps.

A composite picture that is to include over eleven hundred poftraits is nearing completion. The picture, the work of Mr. Guy Neville, comprises a complete record of all the players who have taken part in the finals for the Football Association Cup since 1883. The gigantic task of collecting the necessary photographs was started over four years ago. The Wembley Stadium Royal box form the background from which the players are shown stretching away on either side. Eighty six teams as well as the directors and officials of the Football Association are included in the picture.

SAYS STORY IS UTTERLY FALSE

Bill Jones, "Pay-Off Man," Denies Black Sox Story.

KEPT DIARY.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 5.—(United Press).—"Big Bill" James, alleged "pay off man" in the latest major league baseball scandal, said in an exclusive interview here yesterday afternoon that he would face Judge K. M. Landis in Chicago and prove that the story told by 'Swede' Risberg was false.

James denied that he or any of the members of the Detroit ball club received money for "fixing" a game or series with the Chicago White Sox, during the pennant race in 1917.

He acknowledged being paid a sum of money by Risberg and Arnold "Chick" Gandil, former White Sox fire baseman, but he will testify he said, that this money went to Detroit pitchers, and perhaps other members of the club for their showing against the Boston club, which was racing the White Sox for the American League pennant that fall.

"They told me I could do as I pleased with the money," said James, who has been summoned east by the baseball commissioner.

"Big Bill" said he had kept a diary at the time and that this will assist him in relating his story to Commissioner Landis.

FREE SUSPENDED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 5.—The executive of the Town Hockey League have suspended Murray Free of the Bear Cats for unbecoming conduct to a gatekeeper at Monday night's game. A meeting to deal with this case will be held at the rink before the games tonight at 7 o'clock. All the executive are asked to be present promptly at 7 o'clock.

AUTHOR PAYS FRENCH PLAYER HIGH TRIBUTE

Lenglen is "Calmest, Wilest" Star He Has Ever Seen.

SHOTS MASKED.

No Women's Game in History Is Within Comparison.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4. — Miss Suzanne Lenglen more resembles the first great woman player I ever saw than any of the moderns. Sears was champion, and racquets had just stopped being lop-sided. Speed and net play had not been invented. Otherwise Miss Nellie Lent had everything—chop, top,celestial steadiness, diabolic accuracy a little feet which covered the whole court without hurrying. She never missed. And yet if her beautiful, tireless game still existed I think that Miss Lenglen would give it thirty.

Why? Because Miss Lent would have to hurry now and would be forced into weak returns, which Miss Lenglen, not without malice, would put to sleep.

Miss Lent would not be able to anticipate the direction of Miss Lenglen's shots, which are beautifully masked, and the French girl's infinite variation of peace would upset her dreadfully.

Since Miss Lent's day America has produced no other woman player with a perfectly balanced game, unless it is Miss Wills, whom I have not had the good fortune to see at work. Nearly all of them as may be said of the most of our men players, have been weak on the backhand.

Against Miss Browne the other night—and Miss Browne is and was a very great player Miss Lenglen seemed like a teacher winning as she pleased from a brilliant pupil. Miss Browne perhaps scored more often by brilliant placements, but most of the time she was digging hard and soft ones out of the corners, and she must have run at least 1000 yards at top speed. And often when she had an easy chance to kill she missed.

Best in History.

No woman's game in history has been good enough to beat Miss Lenglen's. But I think that if Miss Sutton's backhand had been as good as her forehand, and the two, both at their best, could meet, there would be a great battle. The will to victory counts for something. Of our men champions, Bob Wrenn had the most, and of our women, Miss May Sutton.

How does Miss Lenglen's game compare with that of a first class man? Tilden has said in print that he would give her thirty. I think that he could, but not every time.

She is good enough to make points even against Tilden and Johnston. One man as great as these, Whitman, would have had even less trouble with her.

She is the calmest, wiliest, easiest, loosest-jointed, most diabolical and debonair woman tennis player that ever lived. She has only one real weakness. She isn't a MAN.

CURLERS PREPARE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Contest of Prairie Clubs Will Provide Representatives For Final.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 5.—Winnipeg this year will be the scene of a Western Canadian championship curling series, the first of its kind to be staged, if present plans materialize. Saskatchewan and Alberta rinks will be asked to send representatives to Winnipeg to play Manitoba champions, the winners to travel to Toronto to play in the Dominion finals for the MacDonald Curling Trophy, emblematic of the Canadian championship.

Eastern Provinces will stage a play down, and it is expected that the Eastern and Western champions will play in Toronto about March 1.

At a meeting of the Manitoba Curling Association, John T. Haig, veteran Winnipeg curler, was appointed Western Trustee of the MacDonald Trophy.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 5.—Following its usual custom, the local curling club began play for the season on New Year's Day, the competition being between the rinks listed on the side of either President or Vice-President. The opposing rinks, and results were:

T. H. Collins	P. Stinson
L. H. Winslow	T. H. Bradley

ST. PATS WIN FROM DETROIT

Two To One Scores Rule in N.H.L. Games Last Night.

OTTAWA BEATEN.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 5.—Toronto St. Pats climbed a bit in their group of the National Hockey League but sent Detroit tinkling to the cellar of the American section last night. The Irish won a ragged game, 2 to 1. Both of the invaders' goals were scored in the second period by Day. His second bouncing into the net from the skate of Sheppard, Detroit's wing, who scored the Cougars' lone goal in the first twenty minutes.

The St. Pats seemed able to penetrate the Detroit defence at will and only the magnificent work by Holmes. Cougars' goalie, kept the score to two goals. Roach also made several brilliant stops but the men ahead of him were kind and did not so often let the Cougars get set for shots.

Late in the second period the Detroiters swarmed about the Toronto goal, but could not net. The third period was practically all Toronto despite Detroit's desperation. There were eight penalties in all. Brydge receiving the three chalked against the Irish.

Pittsburg 2, Chicago 1

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—The Pittsburg Pirates defeated the Chicago Black Hawks here last night in a slow and listless National League Hockey game by a score of 2 to 1. McCurry scored the winning goal for Pittsburg in the third period when a shot from centre ice struck Goalkeeper Lehman and bounded back onto the ice from where McCurry, following in the shot, drove in the winning marker.

Milks scored the first goal for the Pirates. McVeigh evened the count temporarily in that period, following pass from Dye.

BOSTON, 2; OTTAWA, 1.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 5.—The Boston Bruins defeated the Ottawa Senators, headliners of the National Hockey League, by two goals to one here last night in a fast, rugged game that went to overtime. On last night's showing the Bruins were the better team as Connell, Ottawa goal-tender, was under fire during most of the engagement.

Ottawa went into the lead in the second period, when King Clancy went on one of his rampages down the ice and fooled Doc Stewart, Boston net guardian. The King's unaided effort ended the Senators' exception for the evening. As they played defensive hockey in the third period, Herberts and Cooper, Boston's scoring duo, got loose and the latter's shot equalized the affair. The game went to overtime, and after eight minutes and twenty-three seconds of torrid action, Herberts counted the deciding tally on Oliver's pass.

A crowd of about eleven thousand, the largest of the present season, witnessed the game. Frank Nighbor, picturesque poke-checking centre, was missed from the Ottawa line-up.

AMERICANS, 6; CANADIENS, 3.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Ten thousand spectators saw the New York Americans slide into second place in the international section of the National Hockey League by administering a 6 to 3 defeat to the Canadiens, of Montreal, here last night. The New Yorkers scored a well-earned victory, their dashing combination play overshadowing the individual efforts of the visitors. Eleven penalties were meted out, Morens drawing a major for starting a fight with Himes immediately following Hart's goal in the third session.

Captain Billy Burch and Normie Himes obtained two goals apiece for the locals, Reise and Red Green getting one apiece. Gardiner, Morens and Hart scored Canadiens' three counters.

The sytematic team play of the Yankees featured the contest, their following in of rebounds especially proving effective. Gardiner, Morenz and Gagne showed brilliant individual flashes for the "flying Frenchmen," but found the star spangled defence too strong to penetrate. Morenz showed some hard shooting, but marred his work with some unecessary rough work in the final session.

A third major league is being planned; and we suppose, for the sake of the game, there will be no grandstands for the boys to get under.

FOHL DISCUSSES PLANS WITH THE LEAFS' OWNER

Maple Leaf Manager Has Couple New Deals in Prospect.

MAKES HIT.

Has Had Wide Experience Both as Manager and Player.

TORONTO, Jan. 5. — Lee Fohl, the Leaf's new manager, arrived in Toronto yesterday morning and immediately went into conference with President Loi Solman and Vice-President Jim Dunn of the Toronto club. It is not likely that anything of much importance will come out of the initial get-together session of the trio of magnates for a while at least. Mr. Fohl was decidedly non-committal in the premises. He realizes that there are several big gaps in the local club to patch up before next spring, and it is his intention to get down to business at once with that end in view. The Clevelander has one or two deals in prospect, one of which involves Wally Stewart, but as he says it takes two to make a trade and until something definite is arrived at he will keep his own counsel.

Mr. Fohl has been through the mill both as a player and a manager. He caught for the Columbus club of the American Association when that club defeated Toronto in Joe Kelley's time, so that this is not his first visit to this city. He was also here with the Cleveland Indians for an exhibition game when he managed that club some season's back.

This game was played at the Island, which was a great plant in Mr. Fohl's opinion, but not to be mentioned in the same breath with the present park on Fleet Street.

"That is a real plant," said Mr. Fohl. "There are few better in any league, certainly none in the minors."

It is a certainty that the new manager will be a great favorite. Quiet, affable and a fine conversationalist, he made a splendid impression on all of the fans who met him yesterday. That he was as much impressed with his surroundings generally as those who came into contact with him was assured.

"Toronto," he said, "had a fine reputation as a baseball centre with players and managers alike. Dick Rudolph told me what a fine town it was and I am prepared to believe him, judging from what I have seen. I know that I will get on well here."

Mr. Fohl appreciates the fact that he has a big undertaking on his hands following in the footsteps of Dan Howley, but he is not alarmed over the prospect. He built up a champion club for Cleveland before he gave way to Speaker and was in a fair way to give St. Louis a near pennant when he was supplanted by Sisler.

At Boston he didn't have much luck but that wasn't to be wondered at considering the conditions. In this connection Mr. Fohl pointed out it is easier to wreck a ball club in the majors than to build one up, and before he took over the reins at Boston the club had been virtually dismantled. He hopes to have better fortune here. In the minors players can be bought who will be of help but it is different in the big leagues. He is optimistic regarding the local situation and if the Leafs are not at the top again it will not be because of any lack of ability on his part.

In regard to the baseball scandal Mr. Fohl had little to say. In his opinion the Risberg charges will peter out. There is nothing new in the matter. Everything that has said has been common property for years. Why credence should be placed in anything that Risberg or Gandil have to say in the question is inconceivable to him. As for Cobb's statement, he says that the Browns were slipping at the time and were fair prey to any club. He was not the manager of the St. Louis club at the time, having severed his connection with it in favor of Sisler a month previous to Labor Day. When he had the club it was battling for second place, but after that it slid down the ladder.

Mr. Fohl will remain in Toronto for several days. It is not his intention to bring his family to Toronto. His children, four girls and a boy, are pretty well grown up and prefer to remain in Cleveland.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

RUPERT'S LAND

Q.—Where was Rupert's Land?

A.—Rupert's Land was the original name of that part of the Canadian Northwest now known as Manitoba. In 1869 Rupert's Land and the Northwestern territory were purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company for £300,000 The rich natural resources of this large area as discovered since, especially in timber, minerals and soil, made this purchase a bargain one for the Dominion.

OSHAWA LOOKS FOR HARD GAME

LOCALS READY

That Oshawa Intermediates are not very optimistic about the game tonight when they play against Peterboro at Brock Street rink is shown by the following from Jack Nott, well known sport authority of the motor town:

"OSHAWA, Ont., Jan. 5.—Manager Walter Lett of the Oshawa Immediate O.H.A. team had fourteen players out at Bradley's Arena from 6.30 to 7 yesterday evening in their final "prep" for the opening of their group number four schedule with Peterboro Wanderers in the Eastern City this evening. Local rail birds who were over to see the lads go were "tickled pink" to see Jack 'Nick' Carter on the blades for the first time since he was hurt in the Oshawa at Port Hope game of a year ago. Jack is carrying considerable excess baggage around the middle of his diaphram owing to the long layoff but will be used as sub on the defence in the Peterboro game and hopes to be in shape for a regular position for the opening of the Oshawa home series on Monday evening next when Ginger Edger brings his Bowmanville puck chasers to the motor city.

"Manager Lett and his tribe have defeated North Toronto seniors in an exhibition game by 5-3 and held Eddie Wright's Peterboro seniors to a 3-2 score on Lift Lock city ice. Although Port Hope defeated Peterboro Wanderers in the only game played in the local group the locals are not underestimating the Pete intermediates and are taking their regular cast leaving at four o'clock Wednesday afternoon by bus so as to be on the spot when Referee Norman Alberts of Toronto rings the bell for play.

"Manager Lett will send the following team over the boards:

Manager Perks is pinning his faith to the lineup which he used in Port Hope. Constant practice during the past week has ironed out the defects shown in the opening game and the Petes are hopeful of beating "Dick" Smith, Oshawa's veteran goal tender, much oftener than they beat Micks of Port Hope.

FRISCH'S SALARY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Frankie Frisch, who became the property of the St. Louis Cardinals in the New York-St. Louis deal which brought Rogers Hornsby here, has announced that he will demand a two-year contract from President Breadon at $20,000; he is asking $3,000 more than the salary he received as a Giant. Breadon traded Hornsby to the Gotham club when the latter insisted on a three-year contract at a salary of $50,000 annually.

HYDRO DEFEAT CLERKS IN FIRST GAME OF CAMPB ELLFORD LEAGUE

Champions Showed Better Form Throughout Game For 7-1 Victory.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Fox and Saunders Prove Stumbling Blocks To Clerks' Efforts.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 5—Displaying mid-season form before a large opening night crowd, the champion Hydro team handed the Clerks a 7 to 1 drubbing at Covert's Arena Monday night.

It was the opening game of the Town League hockey season, and his Worship, Mayor Kingston, dropped the puck between the sticks of Atkinson and Cowell to send the teams away on their long grind.

The champions were practically intact from last year and if anything they played better hockey than they did at any time last year. The front line of Cowell, Watt and Johnston went at top speed all night, and they kept up a withering attack that had the Clerks gasping for breath. The shooting of Cowell and aWtt was hard and accurate and kept goalie Fox busy protecting his cage. Brown and Beattie are a heavy, hard checking defence and Saunders was the last stumbling block to the Clerk efforts. While not called upon as often as Fox he averted what looked like sure scores many times. The Clerks presented a lineup of veterans and untried youngsters. While the veterans lasted they gave the champions a tough argument and held them scoreless in the first period. Fox in goal gave a fine exhibition of net minding especially in the first period, and it was no fault of the stocky little goalie that the Clerks were beaten so far off.

Labrash went good till he got a few jolts that slowed him up somewhat and the Hydro knowing his weakness of never passing the puck could concentrate their efforts on him when he was in possession. Wood and Atkinson went good as long as they lasted, but both tired badly indeed. McArthur couldn't get going right at any stage of the game and the ex-Outlaw is due to show vast improvement. He got the Clerks lone tally on a nice individual effort down the right boards.

"Doug" Runions made a fine showing in his first chance in the big series and was given plenty of opportunity to make good. When he adds a litle size and develops more speed the youngster will be a star of the first water.

It was a fast and strenuous game from the start with play ranging up and down the ice. The Hydro had the most shots but they were firing from any place inside the blue line and Fox turned all long range shots aside with ease. It was not till the second period was well advanced that Brunelle picked up a loose puck right in front of the Clerk goal and slammed it past Fox for the first score of the game. Cowell blazed one between Fox's legs shortly after and Brunelle came back with another on a pass from Watt making it 3 to 0 at the second rest.

The Clerks started at a fast clip in the third period and McArthur reduced the margin to two goals, shortly after the period started but the merchandise peddlars couldn't keep up the pace they had cut out and the Hydro came on with a rush. Cowell rustling the twine for three and Watt one to make it 7 to 1.

While strenuous it was quite free from intentional rough play. Watt and Labrash staged a slight imitation of the lumberjack and both were given the air for five minutes by referee Weston who handled a fast game in fine style.

The Midget game preceding the big clash was won by Tommy Stuart's Bear Cats by a 3 to 2 score. The youngsters put up a fairly good exhibition, and while they are not all stars, or yet the makings of stars, given the opportunities, such as they are at present enjoying, their chances of developing are improved 100 per cent and that was the object of the executive in catering to the midgets.

Rossmore, Dunk and "Doug" Runions were the best of the Bear Cats, while George Runions and E. Wilks were the stars of the Tigers.

ALL SAINTS' JUNIORS WIN FROM SENIORS

Exhibition Game Ends With Score 5-2 For Younger Boys.

The game was well played and clean, the two penalties issued going to Ashby, the Senior defence man. The Junior sextette started the scoring in the first period and in a very few moments scored three markers. The Seniors with a pretty combination down the ice scored one, Louden passing in the disc.

The second period started off at a fast clip. The Seniors played harder and their rushes gave the Junior forwards lots of work. The Juniors scored again and a few moments later Louden again shot the rubber past Jones for the Seniors' second marker. The Juniors scored again. In the third period both teams went scoreless.

The Juniors have a fast, formidable team. The forwards, Frost, Dunkerley and Goodson team up well and their attacks are always dangerous. Griffen and Worsencroft make a fine background for the forwards, while Jones in the net is a dandy.

The Seniors with a little more practice will shape up well. Lundy, Louden and Hope have a nice combination. Parrington and Ashby, the defence, are strong and rival forwards will have a hard time to get past. Murphy, the goalie, had a day's work cut out for him. The subs of both teams took an active part and played well.

Line-ups:

Juniors — Goal, Jones; defence, Worsencroft, Griffin; wings, Goodson, Dunkerly; centre, Frost; sub, Young.

Bill Cripps refereed satisfactorily.

HOW TO SKI

To turn to the left: Advance the right ski until your right ankle is opposite the bend of the left ski. Raise the heel of the left foot off the ski, and bend well down with both knees, especially the left. At the same time throw all the weight forward onto the right foot. Slant the right ski so as to make it run on the inside edge, crowding the ski outward by pressure from the heel. At the same time, use toe-pressure to force the point of the ski inward. While making this swing the skiis are pointed at an angle to each other. Allow the left ski to follow the curve, putting very little weight onto it. While making the "Telemark" swing, carry the weight forward, facing inward and to the left. This swing is used on the level, or at the end of a ride. In other words, for turns at moderate speed.

The "Christiania Swing."

The "Christiania" may be used when desiring to make a sharp turn when in full descent. It is a turn made on the outer edge of the leading inner ski. As you start down the hill, to swing to the right, advance the right foot slightly, shifting the weight to the heels of the feet. Press hard on the heels and tilt the skiis slightly, so that the right edges of both cut into the snow. At the same time, face in and throw your weight to the right. You should feel that you are forcing the heels of the skiis to make a deliberate and well-defined skid. To stop the turn or straighten out, bring the skiis flat on the snow again, and face ahead in a comfortable riding position. This swing is specially adapted to steep hillsides and great speed.

This work has been accomplished when most building activities are at a standstill as a result of frost, a steam boiler with one hundred pounds pressure having been kept in operation for heating purposes since the contract was first commenced.

GOVERNOR URGES LAW MODIFICATION

But Says Volstead Act Must Be Enforced in New York.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (Canadian Press) — While Governor Smith in his annual message to the New York state legislature, to-day urged that Congress be memorialized to take action to the end that the "harmless beverages which our people have enjoyed for more than a century may be restored to them," some of the leading commercial users of industrial alcohol which has been blamed for many recent deaths, came to the defense of the existing denaturing formula for the protection alike of governmental and lawful business interests. While advocating modification of the Volstead Act, Governor Smith said that until such modification is effective the federal liquor laws are as much the laws of New York State as any state statute and must be enforced.

Meanwhile, prohibition discussion continues to expand as plans go forward for the annual meeting here tomorrow of the citizens' committee of one thousand for law observance and enforcement, at which the dry issue is expected to figure prominently in the discussion.

OBITUARY.

MRS. GEORGE CURTIS.

A familiar figure that will be sadly missed from St. Luke's Church is that of the late Mrs. George Curtis, Robinson Street, whose death occurred last week. The late Mrs. Curtis was a valued member of the congregation of the church, and was foremost at all times in every good work undertaken in the parish. Her untiring efforts during the past four years have been responsible in a great degree for the success of the work of the Women's Guild, of which she was president, and she was also a splendidly helpful member of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Luke's. She was a woman of widely charitable impulses, always ready with a helping hand and quick sympathy for those in trouble and distress, and her quiet, inspirational influence was an encouragement at all times in the furtherance of good works of every type. She will be greatly missed by all who knew and loved her.

About eight months ago, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Ada Brown, passed away, and her death was a great shock to her mother. It was a bereavement from which she never fully recovered, although she bore the loss with uncomplaining fortitude and resignation to the will of God.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Curtis took place on Friday afternoon last, with services conducted by her pastor, Rev. G. J. Bousfield, and was one of the largest funerals ever held in St. Luke's Church, which was filled with friends of the deceased lady. The many beautiful floral tributes also testified to the esteem and love in which she was held by a large circle. In the absence of the organist, Mr. W. C. Thomson, the funeral music was played by Mrs. E. D. Storey, and the hymns were "On the Resurrection Morning," "Now the Laborer's Task is O'er," and the favorite hymn of the late Mrs. Curtis, "Fight the Good Fight."

Placer Gold Is Found In Prize Turkey's Crop

TIMMINS, Jan. 5.—William Glover, a local druggist, is busily engaged tracing the pastures of his Christmas turkey, which he won at the turkey stag in December. After getting the turkey home, Mr. Glover discovered a number of stones in the crop of his prize, and one yellow nugget that this week was proved to be gold of the placer variety, weighing 18 grains. It is believed the fowl pastured in Manitoba prior to being shipped to Timmins, and local prospectors are already packing their kit bags in preparation for the coming gold rush over the Provincial border.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 5 (Canadian Press). — One man is dead, three missing, and thirty-six injured as a result of an explosion in the pitch-filled hold of the French barque Richelieu, of 3,000 tons, that transformed the trim four-master into a seething inferno. U. S. OFFICIAL WOUNDS MAN

Detroit Police To Investigate Shooting—No Evidence of Law Violation.

VICTIM NEAR DEATH.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 5.—Lawrence Campeau, 24, of River Rouge, was found in a drifting rowboat on the river yesterday near death from gunshot wounds which had been inflicted by a Federal Immigration Officer.

The drifting boat was discovered by employees of Great Lakes Engineering Company, off the foot of Great Lakes Avenue. A tug put out from the dock and Campeau was found, semi-conscious, with bullet wounds in his abdomen. He was rushed to Delray Industrial Hospital where his condition was reported critical. The boat contained no liquor, and there was no indication of any law violation, the crew of the tug declared.

Sheriff's officers and representatives of the prosecutor's office started an investigation of the shooting. They went to the hospital in hope of getting a statement from the wounded man. Campeau was identified by papers in his pockets. On the way to the hospital several unsuccessful attempts were made to get him to explain the shooting. Campeau was unarmed. He is believed to have been wounded half an hour before he was found.

Major Ruel Davenport, in charge of the Federal Immigration Office, said he received a report that one of the immigration officers had shot a man, and that he had sent three men to investigate the shooting.

Two other United States immigration officers are out on bail pending trial for manslaughter in similar shootings.

Don't Fry Beef Steak Advice Of Royal Cook

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (United Press).—Never fry beefsteaks, is the advice of Mrs. Rosa Lewis, Great Britain's "queen of cooks," who has made her first trip to America after preparing meals for more than half a century for the Royal plates of Europe.

There are only two ways to cook meat, the "Queen" told the United Press upon her arrival here. They are roasting or grilling. Boiling should be reserved for hens that have outlived tenderness.

In her hotel in London, Mrs. Lewis serves champagne in quart goblets. Wine is the centre of a dinner, she thinks, but stronger drinks should not be taken with meats. She does not approve of prohibition, but thinks the Government should certify the quality of liquor sold.

RISBERG DELAYS HEARING OF CASE

Landis Receives Call Saying Accuser Will Arrive at 1.30.

NO EXPLANATION.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5 (Canadian Press).—The hearing of the charges made by Charles A. "Swede" Risberg, accusing the White Sox and the Tigers of a crooked series in 1917, was postponed to-day until 1.30 p.m. due to the failure of Risberg to appear.

A half hour before the hearing was to have been opened, Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis received a mysterious telephone call purporting to have come from Risberg. The voice at the other end of the line said:

"Risberg will not be there until 1.30."

Thereupon the receiver was banged.

Commissioner Landis could offer no explanation for Risberg's failure to appear as the former White Sox shortstop had assured him he would be on hand promptly.

The Commissioner's office was jammed to capacity with baseball stars of past and present, awaiting an opportunity to face Risberg, who was supposed to have left Rochester, Minn., last night.

"Swede" arrived in town at 7.30 a.m., and when he failed to appear the rumor spread quickly that he had been kidnapped by a Chicago newspaper for the purpose of questioning him. The Commissioner was unable to add any light to the rumor.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5 (Canadian Press).—The Baseball Laundry gets into operation here today. "Swede" Risberg is in town to hang some ten-year-old frayed baseball linen on the line in the office of Commissioner Judge Landis and will defy more than a score of the game's greatest exponents to deny that it was dirty and in need of washing.

And while "Swede" is digging deep into the old basket and hauling into light some of the rags of 1917, Chick Gandil, another of the Chicago White Sox players who was ironed out of baseball in the grand laundering of 1920, is Chicago bound from New Mexico, presumably shouldering another bundle of soiled linen for Landis to decide if it requires washing.

Risberg faces the players of the Chicago and Detroit teams of 1917 in which year, he charges, Detroit players "sloughed" a four game series to help the White Sox to win the American League pennant.

Before leaving Rochester, Minn., last night he said he could tell "a lot of things I heard about during the four years I was with the White Sox, but most of it was hearsay, and I am not going to talk about anything that came second-hand."

Clarence Rowland, manager of the Sox in 1917, who Risberg alleges instigated the scheme to fix the series, believes that the box scores of the games will exonerate him. He says, "No one seems to have given a thought to the fact that if I was on any kind of a deal as Risberg declares, I certainly would not have used about every good pitcher I possessed."

PREMIER BRUCE AT HAMILTON

GUESTS AT LUNCHEON.

HAMILTON, Jan. 5.—(Canadian Press.)—A right hearty and enthusiastic was the welcome accorded to Rt. Hon. Stanley M. Bruce, Premier of Australia, and Mrs. Bruce, who arrived in Hamilton this morning for a short visit.

The distinguished visitors were escorted from the Canadian National depot to the City Hall, where Premier Bruce spoke in reply to an address of welcome from Mayor Treleaven in the City Council Chamber. Afterwards several prominent local citizens, including some former Australians now residents here, were introduced to Premier and Mrs. Bruce, following which they were taken for a drive around the city.

At noon Premier and Mrs. Bruce were the guests of honor at the Canadian Club luncheon.

CHINESE DEMAND APOLOGY FOR DISTURBANCES

Representatives Of Various Groups in Hankow Formulate Letter.

WANT INDEMNITY.

Meanwhile All British Women and Forces Have Boarded Ships.

HANKOW, China, Jan. 6. Canadian Press. — Representatives of laborers, farmers, merchants, students and soldiers of Hankow have formulated demands to be presented through the Nationalist, or Cantonese government, to the British consul, including a demand for indemnity for Chinese alleged to have been killed and wounded in the disturbances of Monday, withdrawal of the gunboats, and an apology to the Chinese government.

Three hundred armed Chinese troops and 200 Chinese pickets occupied the British concession here last night, after all the women and children were put aboard ships in the Yangtze River.

The British sailors, marines and volunteers left the concession, and boarded British warships. Chinese troops dispersed the mob of coolies and restored order. The streets immediately became quiet and were cleared of all the Chinese except the troops and pickets. All the British police were withdrawn from the streets, and the Chinese were in complete control.

MACNEE RESIGNS.

Kiwanis Club of Kingston Loses Secretary—Was Charter Member.

KINGSTON, Jan. 6. — W. Kent Macnee has tendered his resignation as secretary of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, and the position has been filled by the appointment of Edgar Lockett. Mr. Macnee was a charter member of the local club, having been a member since it was organized in 1920. Since the first meeting of the club he has only missed one meeting, having perhaps the best record of any member of Kiwanis in Ontario, if not in all Canada.

LONDON REFUSES TO ALTER POLICY IN THE FAR EAST

Britain Not Overly Alarmed By Tense Situation in China.

GIVE SQUARE DEAL.

Trust Naval Forces Will Be Able To Control Hankow Mobs.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—In spite of the keen anxiety created here by the bad news from China during the past few days, which has caused increased demands upon the government from the diehard section of the Conservatives, backed by big business interests in China, the British government has not the slightest intention of changing its present policy for the conciliation of Cantonese Nationalists.

This important declaration was made to the British United Press today by a foreign office official of the highest standing. Sir Austen Chamberlain is firm in his belief that public opinion and the majority of parliament is in favor of the new British policy of fair treatment of all parties in China, as embodied in the memorandum recently issued to the powers.

Expect Improvement

While the government is without exact knowledge of conditions in Hankow this morning, officials believe that the situation will become easier now that the anti-British feeling fostered by the Russians, has definitely overflowed into mob violence and has been definitely checked. They point out that in yesterday's disturbance only three feet of space separated the mob from the thin line of marines who, under the greatest inducement to use their rifles, exhibited marvelous restraint. The custom house, round which the struggle raged, is not exactly within the lines of the British concession and was at the time flying the Cantonese flag, in accordance with the understanding between the British and Nationalist forces which allows the Nationalist flag to fly wherever the Cantonese are in control.

No Reply Expected

If the mob should actually invade the concession, it is believed the task of evacuating British residents, including several women and children, from Hankow, will be easy because of the presence of British and American warships. Meanwhile if the concession is seized there will be no difficulty in feeding the residents from outside. No reply has as yet been received from the United States to the British memorandum in regard to Chinese policy, but the government declares it never expected any formal expression of general approval. It merely issued the memorandum as a kite to test international opinion and to stir up feeling throughout the world with regard to China in order that British policies might eventually be carried into effect.

INDIANS' STATUS TO BE DECIDED

U. S. Authorities Seek To Deport Iroquois To Quebec.

HAS NO PASSPORT.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—A legal battle to determine whether an American Indian is a "foreigner" starts in Federal Court today. Application for habeas corpus is to be filed in the case of Paul Diabo, an Iroquois of the Caughnawaga Reservation in Quebec Province, and the whole "Six Nations" are said to be deeply interested in the outcome. A fund to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court is said to have been raised by the Iroquois.

Diabo was arrested in March, 1926, charged with entering the country without a passport. He was reported to be earning $70 a week as a structual engineer, but immigration authorities ordered deportation. Counsel for the Iroquois argued the case before the Secretary of Labor's Board of Review in Washington last week. The Board held Diabo was an alien. Until 1924, counsel said, Iroquois Indians had been permitted by a treaty from the earliest days of the nation to cross the Canadian border at will.

THE COUNSELLOR

Come with me, friend and brother
Away from the things that mar,
And let us speak together
A word to carry afar.

As you have to live with them,
And harken to all they say;
The memories of tomorrow,
Are the things you do today.

And, so I'm testifying—
Of the happy days you'll know,
If you will place your footsteps
In the way they ought to go.

Norman "Red" Ryan Says He Has Nest Egg of $120,000 Deposited Awaiting His Release In About Thirty Years

OTTAWA, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—The Journal carries the following front page feature:

"Norman (Red) Ryan, of Toronto, Canada's most famous bank robber and noted international crook, who is serving a life sentence in Kingston Penitentiary for his crimes, claims to have a nest egg of $120,000 distributed between ten Canadian and American savings banks and drawing interest.

"Ryan, with George Courtney, who is now incarcerated in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, Montreal, robbed several banks in Canada and the United States, making off with $237,000 loot. Ryan has said that he has $120,000 hidden away.

"He estimates that if he survives 30 years of prison life, he may be released and figures that his gains will have increased to $500,000 through the compounding of interest.

"Ryan is now 33 years of age and is the father of four children. By trade he is a baker. The Journal learned that the desperado has a warm spot in his heart for a younger sister who has been stricken with tuberculosis. Ryan, accordingly, has arranged to have certain money sent to his sister in her fight for life."

MUSSOLINI ONLY FIGUREHEAD FOR REAL RULERS

Italian Professor Says He Is Mouthpiece of Combine of Powerful Men.

DEATH IMMATERIAL.

Fascism Would Continue To Rule Italy Without Him.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6. (United Press and Canadian Press.) — Premier Benito Mussolini is nothing more than a figurehead for the real rulers of Italy, according to a learned Italian expatriate.

Professor Gaetano Salvimini arrived in New York Wednesday from England. Until he was jailed by the Fascists in 1925, he held a chair of history at the University of Florence. Since then Professor Gaetano has remained an interested student of Fascism from a distance, and he declared unhesitatingly that should an assassin succeed in eliminating Mussolini, Fascism would continue to rule Italy with an iron hand. "Mussolini is nothing more than a very clever propagandist; he is far from a second Caesar," Gaetano said.

"If Mussolini is killed, he will go down in history as Caesar; if he lives he will become another Emperor Wilhelm in eclipse."

The historian said that the Premier was the mouthpiece for a combination representing the higher military, industry, extensive land owners, and "war profiteers," who had entrenched themselves with a system no mere assassination could efface.

His books and documents—all the property he owned—having been confiscated at the time of his arrest, the 53-year-old professor has been supporting himself by lecturing at English universities, and is here on a similar errand.

His Italian citizenship was revoked during the stir after Matteoti was shot, and he fled Italy when he was released from jail.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE SERVICE ACROSS ATLANTIC OPENS FRIDAY TALKS LIMITED TO 12 MINUTES

Calls May Be Made Daily From Eight-Thirty To One P.M.

NO PRIVACY.

Service May Be Extended If the Present System Works Well.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The trans-Atlantic wireless telephone service between New York and London, preparations for which have been going on for some time, will open on Friday, Jan. 7. The announcement was made yesterday by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company with the declaration that the rule of first come, first served will be in effect.

All anyone will have to do after that is to call "Long Distance" and give the number of the telephone wanted, and then wait for the connection to go through, just as is done now with long distance calls in this country. If the telephone number in London be busy, the call will be completed as soon as it is possible, and in the meantime others on the waiting list will be taken care of in the order of their applications.

The service will be available daily

AMONG HIGHEST IN HEALTH WORK

FORMED NEW IDEAS.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—"I have learned a great deal through this European experience, but it is gratifying to find that Canada stands shoulder to shoulder with the five foremost nations of the world in her public health methods and her vision of preventive medicine," said Dr. F. W. Routley, director of the Ontario division of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who has returned to Toronto after spending four months on the secretariat of the League of Red Cross societies in Paris, France.

By request of the League, Dr. Routley was placed in charge of the health division of the Red Cross secretariat to take the place of Dr. F. Humbert, the permanent incumbent who was absent attending world health conferences in Washington and Tokyo.

"In the world federation of Red Cross societies," said Dr. Routley, "there are fifty-five countries represented and it takes a staff of one hundred at the headquarters in Paris to handle its world-wide activities.

"Three unique contributions Canada has made to Red Cross peace work and the science of world health, are our outpost hospitals for remote settlements, our visiting housekeepers' centre and the Junior Red Cross. Since Miss Phillips of Montreal, in 1914, formed the first Junior Red Cross group, the idea has spread throughout the world until there are now ten million juniors and I found in Europe the most intense interest in this development as one of the highest value."

Dr. Routley said the International Red Cross work impressed him as being of the first importance. Nations and populations unable to assist themselves were being put on their feet; knowledge indispensable to the health of nations was being collected and disseminated and a new kind of world brotherhood and sisterhood was being established which would be of definite usefulness as a means to world peace.

ENGLAND TURNS TO DAIRYING AND BEEF RAISING

Cultivated Land Becoming Scarcer Every Year, Says Writer.

GROW LESS GRAIN.

British Farmers Find Use as Pasture More Profitable.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Cultivated land is becoming scarcer every year in England, according to Sir Herbert Matthews, for 25 years Secretary of the Central Chamber of Agriculture, London, who arrived in Montreal yesterday. "There has been a steady movement in England for many decades past to grow less grain and go in more for dairying and the production of meat. It is cheaper to produce these commodities on pasture than to cultivate arable land," he said.

"During the war, owing to the necessity of producing more breadstuffs, several millions of acres were ploughed up. With the close of the war, however, this land has reverted to grass.

"Countries that compete with us in growing grain can produce cheaper than we can in England; hence, the reason for turning our attention more to grass.

"The production of grass employs less labor than arable cultivation, so that the tendency referred to is slowly displacing labor.

"In consequence of this decreasing production of grain in England, we have to import our bread-stuffs. Canada supplies a large proportion of this, together with the United States, the Argentine, India and Australia.

"I would like to see the policy of Imperial Preference extended to bread-stuffs, so as to encourage greater imports from our Dominions. There does not appear to be an immediate likelihood of this as our industrialist are Free Traders, but I hope they are gradually learning wisdom.

DUKE OF YORK STARTS ON TRIP

Leaves With Duchess For Long Voyage on Warship.

TO ENCIRCLE GLOBE.

PORTSMOUTH, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press.) — The Duke and Duchess of York, boarding the cruiser Renown on which the Prince of Wales made a great tour several years ago, to-day started on a 34,00 mile globe encircling voyage, designed to tighten the bonds between the Mother country and the Dominions.

The Prince of Wales, Prince Henry and Prince George were on hand, as well as most of the population of Portsmouth, to wish the pair God-speed. The Duke of York will officiate at the opening of the Commonwealth Parliament at Canberra, the new Australian capital.

The Renown was attired in its finest party dress of silver, which replaced the utilitarian battle grey, and the Duchess wore a hat to match, this being one of the fifteen she is taking along.

The voyage shatters all naval traditions, as a British warship for the first time is carrying women around the Globe, the Duchess being accompanied by two ladies in waiting.

In the ship's hold are venison and pheasants killed on the Royal estates by the King himself, and many bottles from the King's cellar selected by the Queen.

KINGSTON FIRE LOSS DECREASES $70,000

Was $130,000 in 1925—This Year Lowest For Some Time.

KINGSTON, Jan. 6. — Chief James Armstrong reports that the year 1926 showed a reduction of about $70,000 over 1925, in fire loss in the city. In 1925 the loss totalled $130,000. This last year Kingston had the lowest fire record since 1921.

SAYS SMALLPOX SERIOUS.

Apparently Minor Ailments Should Not Be Neglected, Says Physician.

A local physician calls attention to the following item appearing in a Toronto newspaper of yesterday's issue, as an example of the seriousness of the present epidemic of smallpox. This physician thinks that the disease is being regarded too lightly by many people, who seem to regard it in the nature of a cold or other minor ailment. The following is the item:

Herbert W. R. Maddock, who was taken to the Swiss Cottage Hospital some days ago suffering from smallpox contracted at Orono, died last night. Mr. Maddock was 21 years of age.

Two Firemen Hurt When Truck Crashes Through Bridge Rail

Attempt To Dodge Automobile Results in Accident at Brock and Aylmer Streets — Heavy Vehicle Lands Upside Down On Ice in Creek.

ONE OF INJURED IN HOSPITAL; BOTH SUFFERING FROM SHOCK

Swerving the fire truck in a successful attempt to avoid crashing into two women in an automobile, caused a spectacular accident at the corner of Aylmer and Brock Street just before noon today.

The truck crashed through the two and a-half inch iron pipes that protect the bridge crossing the creek just east of Akey's livery establishment, dropped eight feet on to the ice, then shot forward about fifteen feet before finally turning over. The two firemen were thrown off the truck, landing some distance away.

Answering Alarm

At the time of the accident, the truck, which is a combination hose and chemical wagon, was answering an alarm in the north end. Hastening north on Aylmer, with the siren screeching out its warning, the driver noticed the car coming west from Brock Street.

Instead of proceeding across the intersection, the automobile, when the driver saw the truck bearing down on her, swung the car north on Aylmer, directly in the path of the truck. Fireman Carr, realizing that a crash was imminent, courageously swung his truck towards the bridge, knowing at the time that his chances of coming out of the mix-up alive were indeed small. He avoided the car successfully, but his heroic effort resulted in the fire-truck crashing through the iron pipes and over the bridge into the creek, where the force of the impact was sufficient to break through ice about six inches thick.

Fire Chief George Gimblett and Dr. A. G. Howson were called to the scene, and after rendering first aid to the injured men, had Lieutenant Wilson rushed to the hospital.

Truck Slightly Damaged

Hundreds of spectators had gathered by this time, and with the assistance of a corps of willing workers the truck was righted. A block and tackle was used to pull the

Another Legend Broken Edison Sleeps 8 Hours

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 6 (Associated Press). — Thomas A. Edison dozes if he doesn't get eight hours of sleep.

So says Dr. H. M. Johnson, of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, whose experiments on the subject of sleep have convinced him that toxins generated by muscular fatigue act as stimulants to the nervous system, including the brain.

"Mr. Edison sleeps eight hours a night or more," Dr. Johnson said, terming a myth the story that Edison sleeps only four hours each night. "When he doesn't get that much he dozes in his chair the next day. That legend has been a standing joke among his associates."

Duce Tames Night Clubs Bars Dancing, Allows Music

ROME, Jan. 6. — Cabarets, night clubs and all similar haunts of nocturnal amusement throughout Italy are being "tamed" by order of the authorities, giving rise to stories of the possible complete closing of the resorts, in line with Premier Mussolini's plan to make this year one of intense labor, with a minimum amount of play.

Regulations issued by the authorities restrict the hours of operation and prohibit dancing of all kinds. Cabarets may remain open from 10 p.m., until 2 a.m. Jazz bands may play and performers may sing, but not a single performer or visitor may dance.

Not only the Charleston, black bottom and foxtrot, but old-fashioned waltzes and two-steps come under the ban. Police officials will keep vigilance on the side lines to prevent violations.

IN THE NEWS TO-DAY

Hankow, the centre of anti-British disturbances in China, is pronounced Hän-kow, the name meaning "Mouth of the Han." It has a population of about 850,000, is a river port at the junction of the Yang-tse-kiang. Its trade is principally in green tea, which formerly went for export to Canton. Large steamers ascend to the city. In 1857 Hankow was almost demolished by Taiping rebels.

POLITICAL OUTLOOK TROUBLED OVER PARTS OF CENTRAL EUROPE STABILIZING OF WEST NOT FELT

Franco-German Agreement Forces States To Reverse Their Views.

YEAR REVIEWED.

Most of Smaller Countries Face Grave Constitutional Issues.

VIENNA, Jan. 6—The year just ended centred the world's attention on the western part of Europe. The year which has begun seems fairly certain to bring the much more complicated and less understood affairs of Central Europe and the Balkans into greater prominence. It may be desirable, then, to take an inventory of the 1926 developments in this entire region and consider the prospects for the immediate future.

The outstanding fact is that the progress Western Europe made in 1926 toward a settlement of important international questions has not been realized here. It was naturally assumed that the Locarno accord going into force, Germany entering the League Council and the improvement in the relations of Paris and Berlin would have an immediate favorable effect in this area, helping to stabilize the situation. While the effect no doubt will be good in the long run it must be said that so far it has been much less than was anticipated. This is due to several reasons.

Some Calculations Upset

Momentarily, it has no stabilizing influence because it forces States here which banked on Franco-German hostility as one of the few European verities either to revise their views entirely or to consider to revising them.

Moreover, its good effects have been offset by the simultaneous rise of Franco-Italian tension, especially in view of the active policy Italy is following in this area.

Finally and fundamentally, the peace treaties left much more diverse and intricate problems in this part of Europe, where the level of political development and statesmanship that Locarno presupposes is much lower and the chauvinism it must overcome is much stronger.

By and large, 1926 has left the situation in Central Europe and in the Balkans even more obscure than it found it. The new year is likely to be important in clarifying developments, for the situation seems drawing to a head, though to what head none can say. Briefly, 1926 left all countries in this area internally more or less unstable, and their relations among themselves and with the outside world, in a more bewildering state of flux than before. It ended with the Italo-Albanian treaty, which has made war a much more immediate possibility and has greatly facilitated the fluid situation here flowing into the channel of pre-war rather than Locarno mentality.

First, internally: Rumania, Greece and Hungary had general elections in 1926. Austria, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia will have them in 1927. All these States are troubled by either grave constitutional questions or problems of internal consolidation, or both. Two of them — Hungary and Rumania—face acute throne questions, with the monarch always just around the corner in Greece.

Bandits Burn Woman To Force Gem Secret

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—After four hours of torture reminiscent of the Spanish Inquisition, Mrs. Mathilda Radunas, 22, finally disclosed to three bandits the whereabouts of her money and jewellery.

Immediately they drew guns. Mrs. Radunas was bound with an electric light cord, and then gagged. Several minutes of whipping about the head and shoulders followed.

Failing to make her disclose the hiding place of her money with these methods, the bandits tossed her onto a bed, stripped her, and then applied lighted matches and cigarettes to her skin. They attended the work in relays, two searching the apartment and the other torturing the woman.

Mrs. Radunas finally surrendered the information and the bandits obtained money and jewellery, estimated at $1,500 She is under a physician's care.

MORE MARINES HAVE LANDED AT NICARAGUA

Force of 150 Advance on Capital From the West.

LIBERAL VICTORIES.

British Envoy Said That Foreigners Were in Peril.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (United Press)—President Coolidge ordered more United States troops into Nicaragua yesterday.

A force of 150 marines was landed from the U.S.S. Galveston at Corinto, on the west coast, with orders to proceed immediately to Managua, the capital, to protect the United States legation and other American interests there.

Three east coast rebel ports already had been occupied by American forces, and the Conservative government had appealed for similar occupation on the west coast.

British Request

After first refusing to comment on the landing, the state department later issued the following statement:

"The state department has been informed by the American minister at Managua that the British and Italian charges de-affaires there have made representations to him that they consider their subjects in imminent peril in the present situation without outside protection, and that he concurs in these views, which represent the consensus of opinion there among the American and other foreigners."

Press reports told of Liberal rebel military victories on the west coast following their conquest of the east coast. The fall of the Conservative government, recognized by the United States, was believed imminent in diplomatic circles here before the marines were landed at Corinto to-day. Whether the rebels, recognized by Mexico, will march on Managua with the United States marines there is not known.

President Diaz wants the United States to declare Managua a neutral zone to prevent the rebels' entry, it is understood.

With the further occupation of Nicaragua, the senate foreign relations committee was called into secret session to consider resolutions demanding withdrawal of American forces and to investigate charges of alleged administrative imperialism in Latin-America. At the same time, Dr. T. S. Vaca, Liberal envoy here, and the Pan-American Federation of Labor, were protesting against the occupation as unjustified intervention.

Call Kellogg

Washington, Jan. 6 — The senate foreign relations committee decided yesterday, after a long consideration of Nicarguan affairs, to call Secretary of State Kellogg before it within a few days.

The decision to summon the head of the state department came soon after announcement of landing of more United States marines at Nicaragua, and a new burst of criticism of such landings by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana.

Little Princess Is Left in Queen Mary's Care While Parents Embark On Voyage To Australia

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Duke and Duchess of York were extremely busy yesterday saying good-bye to their friends and making last-minute preparations for their voyage on H. M. S. Renown to Australia, where the duke will open the new Australian capital, Canberra.

The Renown, on which the Prince of Wales made his voyage to South Africa and South America, sails from Portsmouth this afternoon.

The King and Queen come to London from Sandringham to-day to give a farewell dinner at the palace to-night to the travellers. Their majesties will take final farewell of their son at the Victoria station to-morrow morning, when the duke and his party entrain, accompanied probably by the Prince of Wales, Princes Harry and Prince George, for the quick run to Portsmouth.

Queen Mary, whose last child was born almost 22 years ago, is about the happiest woman in England, because it has been decided that she will look after her baby grand-daughter, Princess Elizabeth, during the absence of the Duke and Duchess of York.

The queen, whose last child, Prince John, died in 1919, when he was just a boy, has had the royal nursery at Buckingham palace refitted for Princess Elizabeth.

The Renown will go by way of the Panama canal and return through the Suez, and is scheduled to arrive home June 27.

FAMED PIRATE PASSES AWAY

Mate of Only Corsair That Ever Ravaged Great Lakes.

LATER PARDONED.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Capt. David H. Ross, pirate and first mate of the only corsair that ever ravaged the Great Lakes, who 62 years ago fled from Detroit with a price on his head, died yesterday at his home here.

With his death went the only living man in North America who had been hunted as a pirate, escaped, was pardoned and returned to visit the scenes where he once had helped to terrify men and women who feared that the days of Captain Kidd and Morgan had returned.

The last survivor of the pirate crew who scuttled and sank two of the finest steamers of the Great Lakes, while Detroit shivered with terror, whose captain met death on the scaffold, and who lived himself for ten years with a price of $1,250 on his head, died peacefully at home Tuesday after a long lifetime of adventure.

David Ross' adventures began when he was 18 years old and the Civil War broke out. He was a Cadet in the Macon Guards, the pride of Georgia. It was at Fort Sanders that Ross was wounded, left for dead under a pile of bodies, and picked up by Yankee infantrymen.

For nine months, in 1864, Ross was a prisoner in the military stockade on Rock Island until he escaped and fled to Windsor, in Canada. There he arrived just in time to become a pirate, the first mate of the only pirate ship that ever sailed the Great Lakes.

Captain John Yeates Deall was soaring for a daring exploit. With a crew of refugee and escaped prisoners of war he captured the Philoparsons, a big sidewheeler plying between Detroit and Sandusky and set out to waylay and board the steamer Michigan, the fastest vessel and the only armed goat on the Lakes.

There were just 22 men in the crew that boarded the Philoparsons, captured the 150 passengers, men, women, and children, and started out to intercept the Michigan. They met the Island Queen with 150 Federal soldiers, and captured it without a shot. They continued on their way but the Michigan had been warned and was ready for them and the Philoparsons fled before the swift boat with cannon. By nightfall the pirate ship had gained the Detroit River, the captives were landed and the pirates fled with their lives.

In the morning Ross and a handful of the men took the Philoparsons out into deep water and scuttled it in sight of the city.

Ross then fled to Canada, but went back to the south a little later and was made a captain in the Confederate Secret Service.

The Government put a price on Ross's head, which remained there until President Grant pardoned him in his second administration.

Funeral services will be held to-day. He is survived by his widow and one son, D. C. Ross, Indianapolis.

EXPECT DECISION IN GOULD CASE

Senate Sub-Committee Investigating Case Probably Reach Agreement To-day.

OVER RAILROAD DEAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—A decision probably will be reached to-day by the Senate sub-committee which has been considering the qualifications of Senator Gould, Republican, Maine, as to whether it will conduct an investigation of the allegation that some years ago he improperly gave money in connection with a railroad deal.

For two days counsel for the Maine senator have argued that the case should be dismissed as the senate was without authority to expel him even if he were found guilty.

At the conclusion of their plea and in the midst of the argument of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, who proposed inquiry into the charges, members of the committee let it be known they were ready to vote.

Senator Walsh contended the committee was without authority to pass on the question raised in the motion. He held that it was up to the Senate itself and NOT a committee to decide if the senate had authority to investigate a member. Moreover, he said, the committee already had received a mandate from the senate to investigate by adopting his resolution calling for an inquiry.

REINFORCEMENTS ARE ORDERED UP YANGSTE RIVER

British and American Warships To Protect Concessions at Hankow.

LEAD BY RADICALS.

Sir Percival Phillips Says British Community "In Extreme Danger."

SHANGHAI, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—British and United States warships whitened the waters of the great Yangtse River yesterday in their haste to reach Hankow to protect foreigners from Chinese hordes who Monday and again on Tuesday attacked the British concession district. The warships were driven hard to reinforce others keeping watch along the river front where stretch the British and other foreign concessions.

Ominous silence closed down yesterday after receipt of despatches from Hankow relating that all barricades had been torn down by Chinese mobs which poured into the British concession and damaged the British war memorial, an unconfirmed report stated that the mobs seized the Customs house and drove the British from their quarters.

Troops of the Cantonese Government took charge of the concession, appearing more promptly than on Monday when a small British force without firing its ground for four hours against thousands of frenzied Chinese who attempted to do violence to the foreign civilians of the district.

The British sailors and marines again Tuesday held their fire and retired when the Cantonese troops took possession.

While foreigners endangered as a result of anti-foreign agitation number more than a thousand in Hankow and the neighboring city of Wuchang, headquarters of the Cantonese Government, there are approximately 300 United States citizens.

The little foreign colony, 585 miles from the mouth of the Yangtse, is in the midst of a hostile Chinese population, of more than one and one-half million, inflamed by speeches of radical leaders who have detailed alleged wrongs from which the Chinese have suffered at the hands of British and other foreigners, but more particularly the British.

Suspicion was expressed here that the Cantonese Government leaders were aware of the attacks contemplated upon the British concession before they took place—the suspicion being strengthened by the slowness with which Cantonese troops went to the aid of the British when the concession was attacked Monday. Not until rioting had been proceeding for four hours on that day did the Cantonese troops appear.

The Cantonese Government has issued many declarations of its intention to abolish all foreign concessions in China and to end the asserted "Imperialism" of Great Britain, the United States and other foreign nations.

Six United States warships swung yesterday at anchor at Hankow. Six other United States warships plowed the Yangtse, ready to reinforce the others, and from Manila five destroyers departed Sunday under orders to hasten to Shanghai.

British war craft were yesterday anchored alongside the United States warships at Hankow, while British and United States reinforcements raced up the Yangtse.

Situation Serious.

LONDON, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—The British community in Hankow is described as "in extreme danger" by Sir Percival Phillips, correspondent of the Evening News at Hankow. Its sole reliance, he says, is in the Chinese military; which has not taken effective measures to check the rising of "fanaticism."

Naval forces, Sir Percival reports, were ready to land Tuesday when a message came from the Cantonese commissioner of foreign affairs that if a single shot was fired the troops could not be depended upon and would attack the British concession. Native police in the concession refused to go on duty and labor pickets now are patrolling the streets.

The correspondent tells of the stoning of a marine guard as it was passing the Shanghai Bank on its way to the British gunboat Bee. He described also how the British Consul-General, Herbert Goffe, was escorted to the Consulate Tuesday night from a Hankow club under a Chinese guard. He adds that the unions are demanding that the Government give Consul-General Goffe a 72-hour ultimatum to disarm the volunteers and police "guilty of wounding and killing Chinese Monday," and apologize, or a general strike will be proclaimed and the concession blockaded.

"I do not desire to be an alarmist," Sir Percival says, "but the position is very serious and the slightest incident might precipitate a conflagration."

Servants Now a Privileged Class In Russia; Get Clothes, Vacation, Insurance, Education

MOSCOW, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Servants now are of the privileged classes in Russia. They enjoy better conditions of life, more comforts, higher wages and greater privileges than the old nobility or aristocracy.

In addition to regular trade-union hours and wages, Russian servants now demand and receive from their mistresses social insurance, one month's vacation with full pay, one day off each week, two Winter dresses, two Summer dresses, six aprons, two pairs of shoes, four pairs of stockings and a warm coat.

If the servant be illiterate, her employer courts on householders who number of hours off each week so she can attend workers' schools. If the lady of the house scolds or abuses her or asks her to work overtime, the servant immediately reports the matter to the Servants' Trade Union, which usually submits the case to the special Labor Court for redress.

Under Soviet laws the servant can be dismissed only for the most substantial reasons, and then her employer must feed, clothe and maintain her without charge for a period of a month after dismissal. Should the servant die while in the employ of a family the head of the house must bury her if she has no relatives.

In recent cases the fines imposed by lacor courts on householders who violated the regulations of the Soviet Commissariat of Labor were so severe that many housewives now dispense with maids and servants altogether, preferring to do the work themselves.

CO-OPERATION HITS COAST RUM RUNNERS

Liquor Smuggling From Canada Into California Reported Elimianted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Co-operation of the Canadian Government in determining the destination of liquor-laden vessels has practically eliminated liquor smuggling from Canada into California, in the opinion of Captain Frederick G. Dodge, division commander of the coastguard and William B. Hamilton, collector of Customs.

Coastguard boats steaming up and down the Pacific coast have reported that not a single rum-runner is in sight.

OLD MASTERS

Why have the Mighty lived—why have they died?
Is it ever thus with idle wreck to strew
Fields such as thine, remorseless Waterloo?
Hopeless the lesson! Vainly ever hath cried
Stern fate to man—"So perish human pride!"
Still must the many combat for the few;
Still must the noblest blood fair earth bedew;
Tyrants, slaves, freemen, mouldering side by side!
On such a day the world was lost and won,
By Pompey at Pharsalia; such a day
Saw glorious Hannibal a fugitive;
So faded neath the Macedonian sun
Persia's pale star; so empire passed away
From Harold's brow—but he disdained to live!

MURDERERS FACE SERIOUS CHARGE

CLAIMS $100,000.

JOLIET, Ill., Jan. 6. — Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, life prisoners in the State Penitentiary here for the murder of 14-year-old Robert Franks, faced new accusations yesterday with calm demeanor. "Babe" and "Dickie"—as they were known among their millionaire friends and classmates at two middle western universities — neither smiled nor showed any other outward forms of emotion when Charles Ream, a 25-year-old Chicago taxi driver, pointed them out in court as the two young men who assaulted and mutilated him on the night of November 21, 1923—approximately six months before the Franks murder.

At Point of Pistol.

Ream said a 'foreign-looking man' had forced him into an automobile at the point of a pistol. He said he had been knocked unconscious and that when he regained consciousness he found that he had been the victim of a revolting operation. His assailants had liquor on their breaths, he added. Under cross-examination by Attorney Burt Crowe, counsel for the thrill seekers, Ream admitted that Leopold does not look "like a foreigner." He further revealed, under Crowe's questions, that he had been in a taxicab accident with two foreigners.

Loeb and Leopold were dressed in the same ill-fitting, baggy clothes they wore when they appeared in court Tuesday. They seemed to give an "air" to the prison garb, however. Although their voices were sharp and metallic, and their attitude slightly more mature, they did not seem very different from the debonair college boys who entered the Penitentiary more than two years ago. After a two and a half-hour cross-examination of Ream, Dr. Orlando F. Scott, of Chicago, testified that the mutilation of Ream could only have been done by a surgeon or one familiar with surgical instruments. Loeb and Leopold were expected to go on the stand and deny the assault. Attorneys for Ream are asking $100,000 damages. The trial may end to-day.

our sympathy, while Great Britain has not—and that is the only difference between us."

In these words Longin F. Gerus, trade representative in Canada of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, repudiated here yesterday the statement made in a press despatch from England Tuesday that it was commonly believed that the coolies who attacked the British marines in Hankow on Monday were urged on by Soviet emissaries, who, the cable said, "desire to intensify the existing hostility against Great Britain."

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Gerus, "public opinion in Great Britain has the cart before the horse, where we are concerned. We are accused in the newspapers frequently of spreading anti-British propaganda. The statement contained in yesterday's cable, like many other unfriendly criticisms, is an example of the propaganda carried against us and spread as widely as possible in the hostile section of the press by our ill-wishers."

In sizing up the situation in China, Mr. Gerus said that it was obvious that it was a confliction of interests between the North and the South that was causing the trouble in that country. "We have our emissaries in Peking as well as in Canton," he added. "If we are accused of causing trouble in the South, how do they explain our failure to bring the North in the same state of mind?"

Mr. Gerus stated that the one desire of the Soviet Republic was to develop peaceful trade. "We have trade representatives of every country. It is hostile propaganda such as that contained in Tuesday's cable that bars the way to our unchecked advancement—and we will overcome even that opposition in time."

THREE MISSIONARIES WILL PREACH HERE

Giving Addresses in Connection With United Church Missions.

Condensing the information and inspiration of the world service conferences which have been held in various cities and presenting the United Church's combined appeal for funds, the Bay of Quinte Conference is holding field days in several centres early in the New Year.

Rev. Robert Laird, D.D., treasurer of the United Church, and Rev. Peter Bryce, secretary of the maintenance and extension fund, returning from a meeting of the conference committee, reported the decisions reached.

The first field day will be held at Peterborough on January 9, when Rev. J. L. Stewart, D.D., of West China; Rev. Andrew Thomson of Honan, and Rev. John T. Tucker, D.D., of West Africa, will speak in the various churches under the auspices of a local committee.

The idea will be worked out in Belleville and district under the lead of Rev. F. E. Malott, D.D., the next week, and Mr. G A. Warburton of Toronto will lead off by addressing supper meetings of laymen in Belleville on January 13, and in Brighton on January 14. On Sunday, January 16, all the churches of Belleville will be visited, and at a luncheon after the morning service the canvassers from the various congregations will gather to hear W. B. Sparling of Toronto.

between 8.30 a.m. and 1 p.m. New York time, which corresponds to 1.30 p.m. and 9 p.m. London time. Each call will be limited to twelve minutes, and the charge will be $75 for the first three minutes, and $25 for each additional minute.

Service May Be Extended

For the present the service will be limited to the metropolitan districts of New York and London, although if the system works well it may be extended to other parts of both countries. This first service is in the nature of an experiment, although engineers have talked across the ocean in tests with striking success.

Privacy cannot yet be assured to those conducting conversations, as the present stage of radio art does not permit the safeguarding of conversation from others who may have apparatus with which they can tune in on the wave length being used. At first, it is reported, both a long and a short wave length will be used, so that engineers may determine which is the more satisfactory. The tendency to experiment with short wave lengths, which is a return to first principles in radio, is growing steadily among radio engineers, nearly all of the large companies interested in radio having large short wave experimental stations. It is hoped, after a time, that both privacy and great accuracy may be assured to those who talk across the ocean, and that it may be possible to conduct large business affairs in this way as well as to indulge in emergency conversations of a social or family nature.

The first effort at communication on Friday will be between Walter S. Gifford, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Sir G. Evelyn P. Murray, Secretary of the General Postoffice of Great Britain.

TWO FIREMEN HURT

truck up the bank on to the street, and after a few minor repairs it was able to proceed to the fire station under its own power. The damage caused was a broken wheel and a smashed running board.

E. Maudsley, an eye-witness of the crash, told The Examiner that he was standing at the corner of Aylmer and Brock Street when he heard the siren screeching. He saw the car occupied by two women coming west on Brock Street; the occupants, he said, were going very slowly and apparently were trying to determine from which direction the noise was coming. Pulling out toward the centre of the intersection, the car turned north just about the time the fire-truck reached the corner. The driver of the fire-truck, he said, immediately swung his truck to the west and thus avoided what undoubtedly would have been a very serious accident.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHISTLE AND SONG

The maid keeps singing at her work,
It interferes with mine,
Yes, singing in the kitchen murk
As though the day were fine;
A whistling boy comes down the street,
I hear his happy tread;
His simple measure, wild and sweet,
Keeps running through my head.

For who can think of other things
When maidens sing of love,
When women carol scrubbing stairs
Then who can work above?
When someone makes December June
And leads my thoughts away
Until I start to hum a tune,
How can I work today?

The maid has ceased to sing her song;
The house is dark and still,
The merry boy has passed along
And dropped behind the hill,
And I am longing for a word
And lonely for a voice;
The simple music that I heard
That made a heart rejoice.

Come back again, O singing maid,
I need your music more
Than all the plans that I have laid
To win whatever store;
Come back again, O merry lad,
And whistle on your way;
My mind is weary, heart is sad—
How can I work today?

3. Hiram Walker's Limited, will own the entire capital stock (other than Directors' qualifying shares) of Hiram Walker & Sons, Limited, Walkerville, Ontario. Hiram Walker & Sons, Limited, commenced business as Distillers in 1858, and "Canadian Club" and "Walker's Imperial" have become famous throughout the civilized world. The Company also supplies water to Walkerville, Sandwich, Ford City and other border towns.

WOULD REDUCE NUMBER OF PLANTS TO PREVENT OVERPRODUCTION

While improvement of relations between employers and workers, with an absence of unemployment and a diminution in strikes, was noted in the annual report of Secretary of Labor Davis, he sketched a possible line of future attack on the problem of overproduction in industry, which he held responsible for much part-time and seasonal employment of workers.

"One of the great elements of the problem of unemployment is the present overdeveloped state of some of our larger industries," he said. "Our productive machinery and equipment in many of these industries cannot run 300 days per year without producing a stock that cannot be sold in this or any other country. As an illustration, the census lists 1,570 boot and shoe factories. Of these 227, or 14½%, employing 60.04% of the workers could, with steady work for 300 days a year, produce all the boots and shoes we need.

"Take that of bituminous coal. There are 338 shipping mines in the State of Illinois. These operate an average of 139 days in a year. Had 84 of these 338 mines operated 300 days, they could have produced 5,000,000 tons more in one year than all of them produced in 1924. Go down the line and, in nearly every industry you will find the same appalling state of affairs.

"I do not advocate a movement toward monopoly or trusts such as were conceived a few years ago; not a single control or factory in each industry, but a cutting down of the number to the point where such establishment upon a competitive basis could operate at least approximately fifty weeks in each year.

"What is needed is some system that will keep going only the coal mines and the manufacturing plants necesary to produce what we need and can sell, and to keep an adequate number of workers employed for 300 days in the year. We need some system for scattering workers where they are really needed."—Exchange.

Laxatives are dangerous said 2/3 of the doctors

RECENTLY we asked doctors, all over the country, the proper treatment for constipation. Two-thirds condemned the continued use of laxatives and cathartics. More than three-quarters favored the Nujol type of treatment.

No one knows better than the doctor the greater safety of the gentle lubricant. As one doctor said, "It is the most natural aid to normal activity of the bowels. The trouble with laxatives is that they irritate and stimulate the digestive tract too much. Laxatives bring on the laxative habit."

Doctors Advise Nujol

Nine doctors out of every ten told us they were advising the Nujol type of treatment for their patients in place of laxatives—and for these reasons: 1. Nujol is not habit-forming; 2. A more natural method; 3. A lubricant is better than a laxative; 4. Does not gripe; 5. Is not irritating; and 6. Nujol gives lasting relief.

Unlike Laxatives

Laxatives and cathartics act by irritating the intestinal tract. They cause the bowels to frantically expel the contents of the intestines and thus rid the system of the drugs that pills and potions contain.

Nujol acts entirely differently. It contains no drugs, no medicine. Its action is mechanical. It merely softens the dried waste matter in the intestines and lubricates the passage so that the muscles of the bowels can expel the waste matter regularly, naturally and thoroughly.

Nature-given Remedy

Nujol appeals to the medical man because it is a simple, scientific and safe remedy for constipation, no matter how severe the case may be. It is gentle in its action and pleasant to take. Children love it.

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today. Doctors advise it for constipation, whether chronic or temporary. Avoid substitutes.

THE UTILITIES COMMISSION.

The election of W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., as chairman of the Utilities Commission for the present year, was the logical choice.

Mr. Bradburn is the senior member of the Commission, carried on as chairman after the resignation of Mr. Mason from the position and by reason of his ability and his experience in connection with the problems that are dealt with by the Commission is well qualified to give good service as chairman.

Similarly the Commission as a whole is ideally constituted to render good service to the community.

Headed by Mr. Bradburn with long experience in municipal affairs, it has in Gordon Matthews, a young business man who has made a splendid success in the responsible position of executive head of the local branch of the Canadian Packing Company, and in E. R. Shirley, a young electrical engineer of very high standing in his profession and possessing a technical knowledge that should be valuable.

Equipped therefore with municipal experience, business ability and technical knowledge the present Commission presents a personnel that gives hope of an efficient and businesslike administration of the two most important public services that are under its control.

THE BASEBALL SCANDAL.

What the effect will be upon the public will not be definitely known until the turnstiles begin to click next summer.

The charges, however, will most certainly shake public confidence in the integrity of the game, and once the people whose contributions at the box office make possible the big salaries for baseball stars and the big profits for baseball promoters, begin to lose their faith in the honesty of the professional article, the result is likely to be disastrous.

How much truth there is in the charges and how much can be ascribed to vindictiveness on the part of those making them, is something that the average fan has no means of ascertaining.

Unfortunately, however, he is inclined to believe that at least a little fire must accompany such a large volume of smoke and once convinced of that his interest in the league races is liable to lose some of its edge.

Those at the head of baseball have a tremendous task ahead of them in seeking to ferret out all the culprits and to persuade the public that the game has been thoroughly sterilized.

COASTING.

Steps taken by the police department to prevent coasting in places that are dangerous are to be commended and should be backed up by parents as solely in the interest of the children's safety.

Sleigh-riding has always been a popular sport with Canadian children, and deservedly so, for few pastimes offer so much exhilirating fun and such a good opportunity for healthful exercise.

In the days of horse-drawn traffic when vehicles, as a rule, moved slowly, and could be avoided by coasters, it was possible, without a great deal of risk, to sleigh-ride on the city's hills.

The motor car, moving much more rapidly, constitutes a modern menace that makes it necessary, however, to prohibit coasting on the streets, and the police are right in insisting upon such regulations.

At the same time, however, the city fathers should study this coasting question and see if there is not something that could be done to give children a chance to sleigh-ride.

The hill in Victoria Park, for instance, might be made available for everything but the heavy bobsleighs which, by reason of their weight, usually have momentum enough to shoot across Water street and thus bring their complement of passengers into the danger zone.

The smaller individual sleighs and toboggans, however, rarely pick up speed enough to carry them out of the park, and the ban on Victoria Park coasting might be lifted so far as these sleds are concerned.

PROSPERITY IS HERE.

Turning the corner of the new year Peterboro has suddenly bumped into the forerunners of that prosperity which has been confidently predicted in these columns.

Exceptionally satisfactory reports come from the merchants; and the building trades, in the midst of winter, appear to be more active than in some periods of last spring and summer.

And in the factory group, the Canadian General Electric Company swung into the long road of 1927 with a flourish that presages new local records of employment and production before the next annual milestone is reached.

Unwonted night work in both office and shop departments of the "C.G.E." are glowing signs of the pace this plant is setting. A cautious sense of reticence restrains a repetition of reliable rumors as to this company's 1927 programme and prospects, but an executive may be quoted as having said of such reports: "Double anything you hear, and you may not be far astray."

Of the Western Clock Company it is reported that they plan to enlarge their factory to twice its present size; and the manufacturers generally are humming along with the momentum of the country's expanding business.

The only industrial loss to Peterboro last year, the Canadian Canoe Company fire last month, will be restored with the completion of the new building by March 1st. Construction is rapidly progressing, and in the meantime the Canadian Canoe Company is carrying on at the Aladdin Company's plant on Monaghan Road, and in an undamaged section of their own old factory. Three days after the fire they were producing in their temporary quarters, taking care of the orders on their books.

Peterboro has every reason to reach out a friendly hand to 1927. It seems like an age since this city's business horizon was so rosy, and, at that, we had nothing serious to complain of. For this year let us hope that nothing will arise to check the present impetus, because prosperity is here at last.

EFFECT OF THE BRITISH STRIKE.

The economic interdependence of the world is strikingly shown by the effect the British coal strike has had upon Canadian exports. With the declaration of war between the British miners and operators several months ago, tens of thousands of British workers found their purchasing power contracted. Within a few weeks this contraction began to penalize Canadian producers to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The consequence is that, for the first time in years, Canadian exports of foodstuffs to Britain show a substantial decline. The comparative figures between 1925 and 1926 (the twelve months ending November) are as follows:

Butter	$10,639,949	$ 3,358,960
Cheese	33,674,081	25,244,029
Condensed milk	4,437,445	2,802,821
Milk powder	811,136	846,846
Eggs	874,656	766,173
Fresh beef	3,003,171	2,786,844
Bacon and hams	27,865,188	24,425,042
Pickled pork	274,546	263,574
Mutton and lamb	606,890	346,280
Canned meats	185,107	82,047
Salt pork	1,133,480	943,378
Lard	1,428,220	1,011,821
Totals	$84,933,869	$62,877,815

In other words, Canadian farmers are out $22,000,000, and Canadian transportation interests and ocean shippers have shared the blow.

In 1925 Canadian cattle exports to Britain reached so high a total that they merited special mention in the Speech from the Throne. This year, under the baneful influence of the British strike, they have slumped woefully. Thus:

1926	75,550 head

Isolationists and Little Canadians often preach that Canada has no interest in Europe. Yet the truth is that, as an exporting nation—one of the largest of exporting nations per capita of population in the world—Canada is tremendously bound up with Europe. Anything of trouble there, whether in England or on the continent, is directly reflected in the economic life of this country.—Ottawa Journal.

REFLECTORS OR LIGHTS?

The announcement that the Roads Department of Quebec has decided on the distribution of reflectors for use on horse-drawn vehicles as a safeguard against collisions with motor vehicles should spur the authorities of Ontario to cast off the policy of evading this question and introduce a measure to make obligatory some similar form of protection throughout the Province. If a safeguard of this nature is considered advisable in Quebec, it is even more urgent in Ontario where motor cars are much more numerous.

As the law now stands in Ontario, the onus of deciding whether horse-drawn vehicles shall carry lights or not is left to the County Councils, which may pass bylaws on the subject. Only a few of them have done so, but their general failure to implement this provision of the statute affords no argument for the Legislature refusing to act in face of the very evident need of a uniform practice. The adoption of bylaws could never be really satisfactory, as County Councils have recognized, on account of the limits of their application, and in many cases it would arouse a local hostility which would not appear against the same regulation if widely applied.

When the Legislature avoided the adoption of such a regulation in this way, they did so on the ground that the carrying of lights would entail an unwelcome burden on farmers. It can hardly be claimed that this argument holds true today. The numerous accidents which have occurred through the absence of lights or reflectors on horse-drawn vehicles has led to a general realization of their importance and some such safeguard is being adopted to an increasing extent even where no regulation is in force. A law to make the practice uniform throughout the Province would probably be accepted today with little opposition. Secure in power for several years, the Ferguson Government could bring such a measure into force with the assurance that before the next appeal to the electors it would have general approval. The reflector adopted in Quebec would seem to provide a device of small expense which would meet effectively the opposition on the score of cost to farmers.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peterboro's slogan for 1927 should be: "We want the Trent Canal completed."

Ottawa has plenty of money to spend on the Hudson Bay Railway and other projects. It is time that this section of Ontario started to demand its right.

The announcement that a Canadian officer has been chosen to command the Canadian fleet will serve to remind us that we have a navy.

Mr. Woodsworth, it is hoped, has not missed any of Premier Bruce's references to the necessity of the different members of the British Empire contributing toward the national defence.

A reduction of one-third in the British army which was accompanied by doubling the War Office staff will provide a good subject for the economists. Toronto Mail and Empire.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press) — The demand from the United Kingdom and the continent for grain on the Montreal market yesterday showed no improvement, there being little response to offers made by exporters overnight, but there was a further demand from New York exporters for Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian western barley and a fair amount of business resulted at C.I.F. prices Buffalo and bay ports.

The trade in coarse grains in the local market was again reported slow, only sales of odd cars being made. The feeling was steady and prices were unchanged.

The export trade in spring wheat grades of flour was fair but the local country demand was quiet. Prices ruled firm. The movement of winter wheat flour was slow but values were steady.

A feature of the milfeed trade was the strong feeling that developed in the market for bran and shorts and prices were advanced $1.00 per ton. This was attributed to the continued good demand and the small supplies available. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and steady.

An easier tone prevailed in the market for strictly fresh eggs but prices showed no change. The storage situation was active and firm. The receipts were 197 cases.

The undertone to the market for potatoes continued firm with a moderate amount of business passing. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag, New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.60 to $1.65 per bag, and Quebec white stock at $1.45 to $1.50 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The tone of the market for beans was easier and prices were five cents per bushel lower on account of the more liberal offerings. Sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.70 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.95 per bushel.

The condition of the butter market was unchanged, the undertone being strong with a steady trade passing. The receipts were 34 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in cheese but prices were firm. The receipts were 50 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press)—Wheat offerings yesterday were smaller than of late and prices advanced when previous sellers attempted to purchase. Larger export business helped the upturn. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1-4 to 1 1-2c net higher, with corn at 18c decline to 1-2c advance oats a shade to 1-8c off, and provisions showing 12 to 45 cents gain.

Demand petered out at the last both in corn and oats. Weather conditions were favorable and the government weekly report as to corn gathering was construed as bearish.

MANANA FLOR DE SUS AYERES

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

On the walls of the Southwest Museum in California is inscribed the Spanish motto: "Manana Flor de Sus Ayeres," which translated means, "To-morrow shall be the flower of all its yesterdays."

The good and the bad of life come by way of a piling up.

The volcano and the coral reef stand for two conceptions men have of the way success, character, achievement and ability come.

The volcano idea is that they come suddenly, all at once.

Exceptions seem to favor the first idea; the broad sweep of averages speaks for the second.

"August 5, 1920. Benito Mussolini."

Mussolini was then a mason engaged in repairing an old house in Lugano.

Through a checkered career of many activities Mussolini rose to his present position.

Newspapers told, the other day, that John D. Rockefeller was celebrating the date when he received his first job—an humble one.

Both of these men, who have risen high, are not ashamed to look back to their building times.

To-day, as well as to-morrow, is the flower of its yesterdays.

If you are thinking of writing your autobiography, I offer as its title, "The Sum."

Ability comes from stretching for things out of reach.

Character comes by way of trying to act what we want to be.

If you but endeavor enough time will bring its accumulation of experience, the yesterdays will offer their ripening wisdom, and the past will have built, a little at a time, an elevation solid and lasting.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

MISUSE OF "ILK"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

"Jameson, like others of his ilk, was dissatisfied with the conditions in the office, and planned to change them as soon as possible."

The use of "ilk" in the sense of "kind, class," etc., as in the sentence quoted (taken from a popular magazine), is condemned by all or most of the writers on good English. Webster's International Dictionary says:

"Ilk—family, kind; breed, class; an erroneous use arising from misunderstanding of the expression 'of that ilk.'"

The word "ilk" is used correctly nowadays only in the phrase, "of that ilk," meaning of the name same, surname, place or territorial designation; as, "Grant of that ilk"; that is to say, "Grant of Grant."

It should be said, however, that the use of "ilk" in the sense of "kind" of "class" is quite common in writing, and it is not unlikely that in the course of time it will be recognized as good English.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

FROM MR. MERRILL

To the Editor:

Dear Sir.—In your issue of Jan. 4 a correspondent exhibits the grossest ignorance in construing one of my letters. I think that my letters are written plain enough so that any one of a limited amount of intelligence can easily understand them.

For the benefit of your correspondent I might say that I have of late received several anonymous letters ridiculing me for supporting the Liberal candidate in the recent election and advocating the appointment of J. J. Duffus to the Senatorship on the ground that he was a Roman Catholic, and I consigned them to the waste basket, and as the Attorney-General has said that they were the product of a coward. I also find the correspondent referred to was anonymously signed; evidently the writer was ashamed of himself or the letter that was written.

Yours, etc.,
W. H. MERRILL.

I am glad to see The Examiner is still urging the people of Peterboro to boos their own city. Now it is up to every person in Peterboro to boost their own city. Now going ahead. Peterboro is a fine city as The Examiner stated in last Friday's editorial column. George street has a fine display of stores equal, if not better, than any city in Canada of its size. The long deprecation we had had has been hard on the stores. They have big expenses, especially on George street. We don't want our stores to fail and close their doors. Now if all the people in Peterboro who buy through the mail order department would buy in the stores here it would mean thousands of dollars a year to the merchants of Peterboro. By so doing the merchants could sell a little cheaper and the people in the end would be able to buy their goods just as cheap here in Peterboro as in Toronto or any place else in Canada.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

R. J. WOLSTENHOLME.

NO STARCH OR SUGAR FOR CHILDREN

Nearly one hundred thousand babies born in the United States die under one month old, and one hundred and eighty-seven thousand die under the first year. Most of these deaths could have been prevented if the parents would have learned before the child was born how to take care of such a helpless bit of humanity brought into the world without its consent.

If the mother does not diet properly before the child is born, her blood, of course, will not be in fit condition to nourish the young life, and her child may be born subject to any of the ailments of the mother.

Children are frequently born suffering from asthma, catarrh, tonsilitis, adenoids, and several diseases caused by wrong feeding on the part of the mother. If these diseases are not present at birth, they are liable to develop soon after if the mother nurses her baby, and her blood is not in a fit condition.

If artificial feeding is used, the parents and nurses, and often the doctors, themselves, seem intent upon stuffing the baby to its very limit of endurance. Every one seems so afraid that the baby will not get enough nourishment, when its little body needs such a small amount with which to grow, providing it is of the right material.

Cows' milk makes an excellent substitute for mother's milk, but it often is spoiled by the nurse who tries to imitate the mother's milk by putting into the cows' milk additional sugar to take the place of the sugar which seems deficient in cows' milk. I believe these babies will get along better in most cases without this sugar being added, and that mother's milk really contains too much sugar, so this sugar is really unnecessary to the growing child, recognizing that this is a radical viewpoint but I have given so many babies the plain cows' milk with a possible addition of the sugar in orange juice, and the sickest of these babies have recovered and grown into healthy childhood.

All of the diseases of childhood, whether of an acute or chronic form, seem to be caused by giving the child too much starch and sugar. Bread and potatoes, jams and pastries, contribute more than anything else to the growth of enlarged tonsils and adenoids. All of the eruptive fevers of childhood is simply an effort of the body to throw out the effete material which has accumulated in the system because of the excess of these carbohydrates. Even the heart troubles of children are generally caused by excessive gas pressure against the heart.

If your child is suffering from asthma, bronchitis, enlarged tonsils, or skin eruptions, put him on a diet at once entirely free from the starch and sugars, and watch the miraculous change take place, for in a few days you will see these diseases disappearing, and the radiant vitality of childhood taking their place

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 6. — The young people of St. Andrew's Church held their weekly meeting on Monday evening in the Sunday School room. The President, Miss Watson, was in the chair. The meeting opened with Psalm 74, followed by the Lord's Prayer. Scripture lessons were read from Deut. 8: 1-6 and Phil. 3:13-14. The minutes were then read, after which the roll was called each member replying with a verse of Scripture. Mrs. H. T. Scott, convenor of the Devotional Department, then took charge of the meeting, opening her few remarks with a happy New Year's greeting to all. Miss Hazel Atkinson sang a solo, "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go." Mr. Harold Dunk gave an excellent talk on, "The Past Year and Its Lessons and the New Year and Its Possibilities." This was enjoyed by all. Mr. Dunk also gave the society some well advised suggestions as to different methods of having interesting meetings throughout the year. All present were then asked to write a New Year's resolution, and these were read by the Secretary.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which all enjoyed a "calendar contest."

SLASHES OWN THROAT.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—With his throat slashed in several places, the body of Norman Alexander McCaskell, Port Burwell hotelkeeper who disappeared Tuesday night, was found here yesterday morning lying beside the C.P.R. tracks on the outskirts of the city. A razor was found beside him and in a pocket of his coat was found the note: "I am better dead than alive." No reason could be found for McCaskell's action. Besides his wife, he leaves three small children.

SYNOPSIS

The stubborn tempers of Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, result in clashes that furnish society with choice gossip. Joan wants a divorce but Ranny avows to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. Worse, he has secretly discovered that she is in love with another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, a lumber king with whom Ranny has been negotiating a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the Westbury Cup Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with Abner Gratman! Ranny's phenomenal playing interests even his wife. Abner, jealous, plots viciously to undo him—

CHAPTER II.

The echoes of the timing bell, signaling the second chukker, pinned the rapt attention of every spectator to the field. Every spectator, that is, saving one. Abner Gratman, slinking along with jealous rage gnawing at his heart, reached the paddock without having attracted undue attention. He totally escaped Stivner, who had gone in search of him up the less inconspicuous front row.

Abner found Ranny's convex-legged bantam cock of a groom detailing an assistant to hold the bridle of Milkmaid, who was saddled and ready under a blanket, while he walked steaming Judy off to rub her a bit and blanket her and rest her for the fourth chukker.

Here was luck. The assistant would be easier to fool. Abner ranged himself alongside the lad in an ingratiatingly democratic way.

"Warm playing, eh?"

"I'll tell the cross-eyed world!" enthused the flattered boy, though he really had neither the intention nor the means to carry out his none too modest promise.

Abner sniffed in covert disgust at this yokel bombast, but he took advantage of the absorbed interest it represented. The boy, disarmed by Abner's friendliness and entranced by the furious swirl of the game he adored, was innocently unaware of what the society man beside him was doing. Nonchalantly resting against the side of Milkmaid, one arm flung over her saddle so as to hide with his body his actions from the idle or casual glances of any of the nearby hostlers, Abner worked persistently and carefully with his other arm under Milkmaid's blanket, sawing the blade of his knife across the stirrup strap until but a flimsy film of leather held the stirrup. The first severe strain—and—blooey!

"Lookit Mr. Forbes ride 'em off from the goal, sir! Lookit that swipe!" exclaimed the boy. "Gosh, he sure kept 'em from scorin' that time!"

But Abner, having completed his nefarious design, walked off now, ignoring the boy as he would a worm, and the crestfallen lad wondered in pained fashion at the social inconsistencies of the elite.

Seven and a half minutes of a rushing defiance of bonebreak drawing to a close. Rough riding that sent hair-raising prickles over the scalps of spectators. Teamwork that thrilled the expert: sensational strokes, passes long and short that thrilled the laymen: hits and rallies everywhere; but not a goal chalked up, largely because the efforts of either team to work the ball into positions that afforded favorable angles for shots were aborted by the yipping Cossacks of the opposing side, causing a general hurrying of shots and goal tries from too great distances. Even as Abner strolled away from the paddock the bell clanged its brisk recall of the players for their hard earned three minute interlude.

Ranny, boyishly aflame with his eager passion for the game, was too impatient to rest. He merely dismounted from Firebug, vaulted upon Milkmaid and trotted out upon the field again. Clay ranged into pace with him, and said:

"Just overheard Stivner trying to increase the bet. Gratman hedged. By the way, I noticed that you and Stivner had quite a confab after the first chukker. He seems to have taken a shine to you, old son. And the friendship and admiration of Livingstone Stivner are not to be sneezed at!"

Ranny was gratified. So much so that, after the bell had opened the next chukker, he swept into the fray with a centaurish fury that almost accounted for a goal—almost, but not quite, for a plucky Argentine player deliberately galloped between the goal and the ball. The white globe, hurtling through midair, struck his pony's body. Which finished that particular try for goal—and that particular pony's usefulness for the rest of the afternoon.

Time was called out until the sorely hurt little English bred was led, quaking and quivering, off the field and a fresh mount substituted. Then play was resumed, and immediately took on its former furious tempo. The scrimmage unraveled on the trail of a gorgeously long drive from a desperate Argentine mallet. The Argentine captain, breaking clear first in a lucky head start, threw his weight encouragingly over his pony's neck, and away it flew down the velvety field like a beast possessed—as though the very devil were threatening its hindquarters with a redhot trident.

Each yard saw the distance between the Argentine captain and the pursuing Americans increase: each yard saw the distance between the flying Argentine and the Yankee goal diminish. The ball, bounding ahead, was set on a dead line for the menaced space between the Tornadoes' posts. Only a miracle could keep that little strip of chalked grass inviolate now. The spectators, sensing the "break" in the game, were in a furore.

Livingstone Stivner, in the fell clutch of polo hysteria, could emit no sound above a hoarse and incoherent gurgle in his throat as his popping eyes watched the race that might mean fifty thousand dollars' loss to him.

Those of the onlookers who retained enough control of their faculties to do it were yelling: "Ranny! Ranny! After him, Ranny! Ride him off, Ranny! Where's Ranny?"

Aye, that was the question of the moment. Where was Ranny? Ranny, alas, was many yards away. The ability of the Argentine captain to make such a clean hit and break from the scrimmage was due solely to the fact that Ranny—usually an attentive player, who left all his troubles in the paddock or on the side lines—had not kept his mind on the ball. Indeed, to be precise, not only his mind, but his eyes, too, had strayed from the ball to the sedan. For he had seen Abner climbing into the ball—no, into the sedan—to resume his brazen seat beside Joan.

Ranny felt his cheeks burning under their soldier-of-fortune tan—a grizzled tan pickled into his tough epidermis on many a polo field or battlefield, by many a tropic sun. By now the whole crowd must be aware of his admittance to the ancient and dishonorable status of a cuckold—a deceived husband. Still, perhaps that was stretching it too far. Even though the crowd would think it, Ranny felt that things had not gone THAT far. He felt quite sure that Joan had not been faithless to him—yet. But when one's wife has a will and a way of her own one never knows the day nor the hour! And could he be so awfully certain that the hour had not struck—oh, Lord, what's all the hubbub? Ranny shook the hot daze of suspicion out of his eyes for the moment and recalled that he was in the midst of a very furious polo game. There was the Argentine captain streaking far in advance toward the Tornadoes' goal. Ranny was unconsciously loping along in the wake of the pursuing field, in nowise as he could and should be riding.

The concerted appeal of the crowd slowly impressed itself upon his ears. "After him, Ranny!" In a flash the polo instinct burned the true situation into his brain. The American goal was threatened. And he, the star American player, was loafing along like a portly professor exercising on the Central Park bridle path!

On first thought he figured, "The deuce with the game! I'll go over right now and thrash Gratman!"

On second thought, he'd try to save this goal, then attend to Gratman during the intermission.

But the game of polo allows no time for second thoughts! He would be lucky to overtake the field, let alone the Argentine captain! Now, if he had only had Judy. Milkmaid was a bright and willing little mare, but Judy was as human as fleet. The very physical action of digging his spurs into Milkmaid's ribs, of throwing his weight forward to give her running way, served to dispel the last of the distracting state of mind that tormented him. Ranny was very inch and every instinct the perfect polo madman—the cold blooded yet hot-headed, the sure yet reckless, Valkyrie of the long greens.

WILD HORSE RESCUES GIRL HELD BY INDIANS.

"Devil Horse" Story Provides Rex With Marvellous Feats to Perform.

The muffled rhythm of hundreds of moccasined feet in the wedding dance of savages—a terrified captive white girl—an Indian brave waiting to make her his squaw! Suddenly the tom-toms stop their weird beating! Shrieks rend the night air—shadows danced eerily in the glow of the camp fires—before the thundering killing hoofs of the Devil Horse the dancers fled in a terror that can only be known to the superstitious.

Through their midst came the great black stallion—the wild creature who made war on the Indians—trampled them to death 'neath his great hoofs. And on the back of this horse that no human being had ever touched and lived to tell the tale—rode a man! What magic was this?

This is one of the thrilling and spectacular scenes promised in "The Devil Horse," the Hal Roach Pathe picture showing to-day at the Regent Theatre, and starring Rex, the only screen artist of his kind in the world. Rex rode a wild horse, the only role he is fitted for, because he is himself a creature of the wild. Since coming into the possession of Hal Roach, Rex has known the kindness of man and the comfort of, civilization, but his wild heart has not been softened, and he is not a trained trick horse. His every movement is the natural reaction of a wild nature.

"The Devil Horse," which is a story by Hal Roach, taken from the history of the west, is enacted by a cast of humans headed by Yakima Canutt, the famous Cowboy actor, and Gladys McConnell, Rex' mate, Lady and the Killer, a spotted black and white stallion, lend four footed support. Fred Jackman, director of previous Rex films, directed "The Devil Horse."

SPANISH ARTILLERY PREPARED FOR WAR TO MEET CONDITONS OF AGREEMENT WITH MUSSOLINI

Amnesty Granted Rebellious Officers To Restore Full Strength.

PARDON ACCEPTED.

Italy May Use the Balearic Islands as Naval Base in Case of War.

MADRID, Jan. 6—On New Year's Day, by royal decree, 2,105 artillery officers who had plotted to overthrow the Primo de Rivera dictatorship in Spain, were given amnesty. It looked like a merg act of royal grace, but the truth is far different and reveals the extent of the political combinations which are spreading over the continent of Europe.

They were released because it was necessary to re-establish the Spanish artillery service on a war footing to meet the conditions of the agreement between General Rivera and Premier Mussolini of Italy. The mutual friendship agreement, signed within the past year, along with a half dozen agreements between other countries, contained an understanding of mutual support; and this Spain was not in a position to give if, to take the example which seems most possible, war were declared between Italy and France.

The agreement for support is evidently precise and is also supposed to include disposition of the Balearic Islands in case of war, when Italy would have the right to use them as a naval base.

Details as to the reason for the amnesty came from the King himself. He explained the reasons of the amnesty to the leaders of the revolt in language which left them no doubt, and the word spread from them until it is common knowledge in the army that the artillery officers were given amnesty because they were needed.

King Alfonzo tried a month ago to induce the officers to return. The Gazeta de Madrid, official organ, published at the end of November an official decree calling upon the artillery officers to report for duty. The conditions were only a declaration of submission and the signing of a paper agreeing to accept in a body, the Government's disposition.

King Talks to Artillery Officers

Although this affected more than 2,000 officers, only 16 had returned by the time limit, December 8, so the King summoned the artillery commanded, the Marquis di Sommermelos, and Captain Ripol, representing the unyielding artillery officers. Treating them as intimates, even addressing them in the familiar second person singular, he told them he was addressing them not as a monarch but as a Spaniard and asked them to submit at once, because Spain had promised to have her artillery on a war footing and that the agreements Spain had made with Italy necessitated more than a mere protestation of friendship, but a state of actual preparedness.

The King is reported to have gone on to say that war might come at any time, perhaps in the immediate future, and without the co-operation of the artillery Spain could not meet her obligations.

The Marquis di Sommermelos and Captain Ripol yielded to the King's persuasion, met with the revolting artillery officers and explained that before the King they had taken responsibility for the yielding of the officers and before the officers they now took responsibility fo promising the King would extend amnesty.

In circles opposed to Primo de Rivera, this information has caused uneasiness as it presupposes a possible war with France, a supposition which is further strengthened by the recent disposition of the Balearic Islands. The Duke of Tetuan, Minister of War, and Admiral Cornejo, Minister of Marine, recently were in the Balearic Islands and ordered the speeding up of work on plans of fortification estimated to cost 300,000,000 pesetas.

Among the dictator's opponents the King's amnesty to the artillery officers and the warlike preparations in the Balearic Islands hang together with Spain's withdrawal from the League of Nations. It is declared there are much closer relations between him and the Italian dictator than are known and that Spain left the League at Italy's instigation.

The amnesty was issued only a few days ago and reports of the King's conversation with the artillery officers are only now spreading.

Reports which come here from Berlin that Mussolini tried also to get a military clause into the recent treaty with Germany and failed only because Germany refused, have increased fears as to what intentions Mussolini may have of dragging Spain into conflict.

News that the British fleet will shortly be at Gibraltar and pass the remainder of the Winter in the Mediterranean adds to the general uneasiness, as it is taken to be proof that the British are ready to protect their interests. While it is normal for the British fleet to spend some months of the Winter in the Mediterranean, the arrival comes just at the moment—the month of January—when some persons believe the moment for conflict is timed. Tangier, over which Spain has been increasingly pressing in her claims for greater power, is to be discussed this month, and Italy, which has not accepted the Tangier statute, will, for her share in the alliance, support the Spanish cause.

WOMEN'S MUSIC CLUB

The first afternoon meeting for this year of the Women's Music Club was held yesterday in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, when an interesting programme, dealing with "The Scandinavian Composers," was given, arranged by Mrs. T. Cruikshank, Mrs. J. E. Middleton, and Miss Annie Wood. Vocal and instrumental numbers, demonstrating the work of the Scandinavian composers, were rendered by talented musicians of the city, all of whom received enthusiastic applause in response to their efforts, and Mrs. J. F. Allan, president of the club, taking the place of the scheduled speaker who was unable to give the address, read a splendid paper on the musical geniuses of Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

The musical programme opened with two violin numbers played by Miss Mary Westbye, with accompaniment by Mrs. Westbye. Miss Westbye, who was attired in Norwegian costume, played a melody by Ole Bull; 'Saeterjentens Sondag' (The Alpine Maids' Sunday), also a Swedish folk dance. A group of songs by Miss Daisy Murray included the lovely number, "To a Waterlily," by Grieg, "The Seraglio's Garden," by Emil Sjogren, and "Under the Greenwood Tree," by Carl Busch. Miss Agnes Logan played a trio of charming pianoforte numbers, in "The Swan," by Palmgren, "Morning," by Grieg, and "The Butterfly," also by Grieg. Miss Geraldine Collins sang three dainty songs, compositions of Grieg, in "I Love Thee," "The Poet's Last Song," and 'In a Boat.' Accompaniments for Miss Murray and Miss Collins were played by Miss Gwen Donley.

In the introduction to her paper on "Scandinavian Composers," Mrs. Allan spoke of national characteristics as exemplified in the music of different nations; French music being brilliant and vivacious. Slav music massive, sombre and strong, Italian music melodious and rhythmic, bright and happy, and German music deep, profound and direct in utterance. The music of the Scandinavian peninsula reflects the boldness and ruggedness of the country, the sombre and magnificent nature of its scenery, and its vigorous character, with an underlying tone of melancholy sweetness.

Among the Norwegian musicians, probably the most famous were the violinist, Ole Bull, born in 1810 at Bergen, and educated in Berlin and Paris, and Edward Grieg, born in 1843, and wonderfully gifted in the composition of music, his work ranging from orchestral efforts to sweet songs, marked throughout by frank and convincing tone and fresh melody.

Sinding also showed the Norse fullness and melody of utterance, his 'Rustle of Spring' being among the finest of the Scandinavian compositions.

In Sweden, Ohlstrom and Franz Berwald were mentioned, also Otto Lindblad and Adolph Lindblad, the latter the teacher of Jenny Lind, and often referred to as the "Schubert of the North." Ivan Hallstrom was the composer of two successful operas, "The Mountain King" and "The Viking's Voyage," and August Soderman was another composer of outstanding merit. Andrean Haller, Peter Berger and Emil Sjogren were others of musical worth.

In Denmark, Baxtetrude was a famous organist, and Johan Peter Hartman, often called "the father of Danish music," was the composer of several operas, among them "The Raven," "The Golden Horn" and "Little Christine." Emil Hartman, son of the former, was also a well-known figure in Danish musical circles, and Gade, composer of "The Echoes of Ossian," and a protegee of Mendelssohn. His sonatas and cantatas were especially fine, among the latter being numbered "The Erl King's Daughter." Edward Lasson and Carl Busch and Ludwig Schyter were other Danish musicians of merit.

At the conclusion of the programme, Mrs. Allan thanked the ladies who were in charge of the afternoon's programme, the assisting artists and the accompanist, Miss Gwen Donley.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Could Not Sleep Heart and Nerves Were So Bad

Mr. Geo. Meek, Windsor, Ont., writes:—"I suffered with my heart and nerves and could not sleep at night for noises in my head. I managed to keep at my work somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I could not go to my work. I was afraid to go out any place, for very often I would stagger on my feet, and everything in front of me would turn black and fade away. While I was home sick a friend told me to take MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS. I got four boxes and by the time I had used them the pains and noises in my head ceased and I was able to get a good night's rest. Although that was six years ago I have never been troubled with that complaint again."

This service is available either, 1st, to individual farmers, or 2nd, cow testing associations either existing organizations now being served by federal or provincial Department of Agriculture or new associations to be formed.

1—Each farmer who wishes to avail himself of this policy of having his herd tested will have to supply his own weighing and sampling equipment such as scales, milk box, sample bottles and dipper.

LOCAL MEMBERS DID WORK WELL

Representatives From Central Ontario Good Workers in Boys' Parliament.

PROROGUED FRIDAY.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—At 4.15 p.m. Friday after the final session of the Junior Parliament, His Honor Lieut.-Governor George Wilson, with all the ceremony that is seen in the Senior Parliament, closed the Older Boys' Parliament. He received a report of the bills, acts and resolutions passed, and in the closing address gave a brief outline of work done. The address follows:

"In bringing this Session to a close I desire to commend your conscientious attention to the arduous and important duties that have devolved upon you. The expansion each year of our Tuxis and Trail Ranger work and the widening of the scope of provincial activities are increasing the volume of legislation and adding to the labors of the members of this House.

"I view with satisfaction the amendment to the Parliamentary Act which provides such a splendid example of the faith of this House in the principle of World Brotherhood and the Junior League of Nations is deserving of high commendation.

"I have viewed with pleasure the sincere, enthusiastic and efficient manner in which you have dealt with the bill for the Bond Selling campaign, wherein you assume the tremendous responsibility of raising $12,000 for the financing of co-operative Boys' Work in the Province. Your acceptance of personal responsibility indicates your recognition of the vital significance of this Act to the whole program of Boys' Work.

"The bill for leadership training striking the note of a parliamentary fellowship; the bill providing for co-operation with our sister organization, the Canadian Girls in Training; the bill providing for rural development; the bill with respect to area camps; the bill dealing with the policy and programme of the parliament for the year, are all viewed with pleasure and satisfaction.

"Much important legislation has been passed, for all of which I thank you and I trust that the guidance of Almighty God will continue to guide you in all matters which have for their aim the uplift of the Boy Life in our Province in particular, and our fellow men in general."

GEORGE WILSON,
Lieutenant-Governor.

As all the work was done a short time before the Lieut-Governor was due to arrive, the members took the opportunity to relax and really enjoy themselves. Many embarrassing questions were flung from the opposition leader to Government.

In all the session only once was the Government defeated on bill. This stated that the name C.S.E.T. (Canadian Standard Efficiency Training) be changed to some other that might be more easily understood.

Central Ontario has reason to be pleased with its representatives. They all were on active committees. Only one or two had been in Parliament last year.

Newton, member for Belleville, opposed the paying for berths for eight members who were overnight on the train. His grounds for this were that they should be willing to pay for it themselves in compensation for the honor of attending Parliament. He said he had travelled 19,000 miles with the Chautauqua last summer and never once had he taken a berth. The House supported his measure.

Max Geraldi, member for East Hastings, comprising the communities of Madoc, Tweed and Thomasburg, was in favor of allowing the paying for berth for the boys of Northern Ontario.

On the financial bill he said, "Mr. Speaker, I am not going to challenge anyone in selling bonds for I cannot tell ahead as some can, but I do my best in the selling of them for this worthy cause. We are asked for $75 and last year we raised $117 and we are going to try and do better this year."

Dalton Higgs, Victoria representative, spoke on the resolution to add new badges as an incentive to the work of Trail Rangers and Tuxis Squares.

The Toronto Rotary Club held its annual Father and Son banquet at the King Edward Hotel. There were five hundred and fifty-six Rotarians and their guests all together. As many of the club as had sons had them there. The members of the Boys' Parliament then in session at Queen's Park were also guests. Others were visitors from Winnipeg, Port Arthur, and different parts of the province.

At the centre-table were the president, Mr. Kettlewell, who was the toastmaster, the Boy Premier of Ontario, Earl Lautenschlager, Kitchener; the leader of the opposition, Hugh Scratch, of London; members of the Junior Parliament, and others. An interesting programme followed the luncheon. The Premier was allowed to speak three minutes after the chairman or toastmaster had heartily endorsed the work which was being done by the Ontario Boys' Work Board and the Junior Parliament. The leader of the opposition was given two minutes to say a few words.

One of the cheeriest pages of the House, Master Lorne Stephens, Mimico, then sang two humorous Scotch solos entitled, "Nancy MacIntosh" and "When I'm a Mon." Community singing completed the program. At the banquet the results of the caucus, which was held after the Friday morning session, were announced. The candidates for the premiership 1927 are Howard Scharffe, Stormont, now a student at Queen's University; Howe Martyn, public school teacher on the staff of the Kent street school in West Toronto; Alex Adams, student of Windsor.

At the fifth sitting of the Older Boys' Parliament in a bill the Beausoliet Leadership Camp under the authority of the Boys' Work Board was spoken of considerably. Both the members who had been there and those who were intending to be present next August thought that it was a great help to the movement.

This camp is near Honey Harbour on Beausoliet Island which is one mile from the mainland in Georgian Bay. Honey Harbour is twelve miles from Midland, Ont., the terminus of the Canadian National Railways. This Island is reached by the steamer Midland King in the summer months.

It has historic interest in that there the native people, the Hurons, made their last stand against their fierce enemies, the Iroquois, and were almost wiped out. It is thought by some that the treasure of the early Roman Catholic priests were buried there, making it really a treasure island. The Jesuit Order of that church has had at different times parties digging to find these relics of olden time. These excavations can now be seen not far from the leadership camp.

The great need of leaders was stressed during the discussion of the bill. Money may be forthcoming but if there are no young men to carry on the future Boys' Parliaments will be failures.

It is well to remember that the aim of the men of this province who are behind this work and the different churches and organizations who give their time and moral support is not to have a wonderful spread at Toronto each year, but rather to help the greatest number of boys to live the Jesus way of life, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." In other works He broadened out in four directions and lived the life four square, physically, morally, socially, and spiritually. This bill passed unanimously.

During the time that another bill was being acted upon James Gibson of Haldimand took the Speaker's chair. The boys saw what a difficult position the Speaker held.

During this session district conveners were appointed. Mr. Stuart Carr of Campbellford was assigned District No. 5, the ridings of South Ontario, East Durham, West Durham, Northumberland East and West, and Prince Edward.

District 4, Haliburton, Victoria, Peterboro City and County, is under the supervision of Norman LeMay, member for Peterboro City and Lakefield and Warsaw and other places that it is hoped will soon be linked up with this work.

The session then adjourned.

NEGOTIATE WAGE SCALE.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Wage negotiations involving some 35,000 maintenance-of-way men employed on all Canadian railways opened between the wage committee of the Railway Association of Canada and the central committee for the men here yesterday.

MISSION LECTURE.

J. Ferdinand Goforth Gives Address in Presbyterian Church at Warkworth.

NORHAM, Jan. 6.—A very interesting and instructive missionary lecture was given in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, Warkworth, on Monday evening, by J. Ferdinand Goforth, of Toronto University, son of Dr. Jonathan Goforth, missionary in China for the past forty years. The service was opened by the church choir rendering in splendid form, "Give Unto the Lord, Oh! Ye Mighty," after which Robert Walker introduced the speaker, who was a young man who had been born in China and spoke from experience. The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides, which Mr. Goforth had himself secured from missionaries and which had never been used by anyone before. The speaker began his talk by sketching a map of China and locating for his audience several places of interest to which reference was made in the lecture, the subject of which was, "China's Christian Army," a story of an army of 9,000 Chinamen who had been led to God through the instrumentality of General Feng Yu Huang, a person friend of Dr. Goforth.

General Fung, who is now the leader in China of an army of 30,000 Christian Chinamen, was converted as the result of an incident which was a part of the Boxer movement of 1900. A Miss Marelle at that time had been sent out as a missionary from the United States. One day an army of heathen soldiers came along and knocked at the gate of the barracks where she and a number of Christian workers were lodged. The ambition of the soldiers was to kill all foreigners. Miss Marelle passed outside the gate and pleaded with the men, stating that the foreigners had come to do good, and finally suggested that they kill her and save the rest of the company. A few minutes later, without mercy, the whole group was murdered. General Fung was in that band of soldiers, and fifteen years later, when Dr. John R. Mott was preaching in Pekin, came forward and confessed Christ and told Dr. Mott that his heart had been touched by the killing of Miss Marelle. General Fung, who is of fine physique and six feet three inches tall, went back to his men and began to influence them for God. Mr. Goforth vividly described the difference in the Chinaman before and after conversion. He stated that men who could not be surpassed for violence and brutality became kind and affectionate under the influence of the gospel. General Fung, he said, treats his men as a father would treat his children. At first the soldiers resented the gospel message, but later tore the General's coat in shreds that each man might have a piece as a souvenir to remember the man who had done them so much good through his message. Mr. Goforth told of how upon one occasion his father and mother had conducted a rivival among the soldiers, and in three weeks some 3,000 of them came out for Christ. It took his father from six o'clock in the morning until seven in the evening to baptize the believers, which ceremony was a part of the last service held at that time. This was eight years ago. Today General Fung has an army of 150,000 Christian soldiers, and the work is steadily progressing, and it is believed by many that this Christian army will prove to be China's salvation.

At one time a Christian Chinese colonel was riding on the train with an American tourist, who told him that the Chinese should send their best young men to America to receive Western education and philosophy, which he believed would be the means of saving their country. The Chinaman replied: "Many who have gone to Canada and the United States have returned worse than before. What we need in China is the gospel of Jesus—that will save our people."

Nineteen out of twenty Chinese girls do not see their husbands until after the marriage is over. The day is coming, said Mr. Goforth, when their life will be much like ours in that respect.

In the Christian army in China there is Bible study and prayer three times a day. In ten months in the army Dr. Goforth did not see a cigarette, hear a profane word or smell a breath that was tainted with liquor. A man once came into the army who said he must have liquor, but at the end of a month acknowledged that the atmosphere was such among his associates that he was obliged to give it up. General Fung was the instigator of the 1,000,000 Testament League, an effort that gave many testaments to the soldiers of China. "Today," said Mr. Goforth, "the heathen soldiers are dreaded, but the Christian soldiers are welcomed as protectors." The architecture of China is original and most beautiful. In the territory where his father works is an orphanage that is kept up by faith. The children are brought in and the missionaries keep them. No public appeal has yet been made for help and there has been no want.

The choir sang, "The Morning Light is Breaking," after which Rev. Mr. Daw closed the service with prayer.

A vote of appreciation to Mr. Goforth for his services was moved by Dr. C. C. Armstrong and seconded by Henry Carlow.

Y. P. League.

There were forty in attendance at the People's League on Monday evening. The President, Miss Lulu Mitchell, opened the meeting and read the Scripture lesson from Hebrews, the eighth chapter. Mildred Bertrand offered prayer. Mrs. Bert West conducted the worship period. The topic was taken by Mrs. J. F. Everson, who gave a paper on "What Does Our Church Teach About the Spirit of God?" Mrs. David Evans gave a reading. Bernice Campbell gave a paper, "The Best Christmas Gift." Mrs. George McAllister gave one on "The Fullness of All Longing." Lucille Lane and Edith Brenton sang, "The Old Rugged Cross," accompanied by the guitar. Mrs. Lorne Evans a reading, entitled, "The Widow's Only Son." Mrs. Clarence Brenton closed the service with prayer.

35 MILE LIMIT FOR MOTOR CARS IS CONSIDERED

Premier Intimates Features of Ontario Legislative Programme.

LIGHTS REQUIRED.

All Vehicles To Be Illuminated—Highways Through Roads.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Changes in the speed limit upon the highways of the Province, an alteration in the Marriage Law, and a requirement upon the part of all vehicles to carry lights at night, constitute the diverse but common interesting features of the legislative programme for the coming session upon which the Provincial Government has so far determined. Intimation of the program was given yesterday by Premier Ferguson and as outlined by him, it furnished indication that the interest during the coming session will not be entirely confined to the Government control legislation.

Motor vehicles in the Province are to be allowed a speed limit of 35 miles per hour, where at present a 25-mile speed limit is stipulated. At the same time the system of making Provincial highways through roads and of requiring vehicles to come to a full stop before entering upon them is also to be enforced.

The change in the Act will be sponsored by Hon. Mr. Henry, who has been making a careful study of the speed limit situation, gathering his data not only from conditions here but also from practices in various States of the American Union. The 35-mile limit commends itself to Hon. Mr. Henry as a result of his investigations. There has not been uniformity of enforcement in connection with the present 25-mile limit. While the practice of provincial officials has been to allow 30 miles per hour under conditions of a reasonably clear road, municipal officers have in some places and on spasmodic occasions insisted upon the letter of the law, with the result that a motorist has found himself classed amongst the erring when unconscious of particular guilt. The new limit is adopted as a fair one and is expected to commend itself to drivers as well as to establish a law which shall be thoroughly reasonable. The limit, of course, will not apply to Toronto, where the regulations are fixed by local by-law.

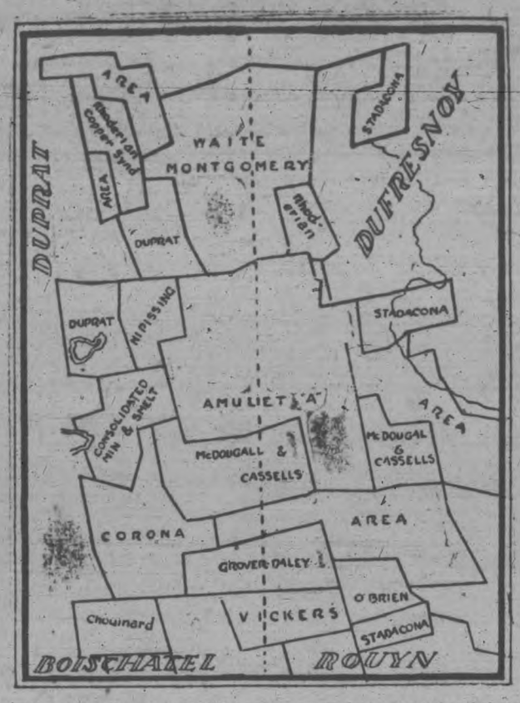
All Vehicles to Carry Lights.

The proposal to have all vehicles carry lights after dark has been before the Legislature at various times during the past year, but for discussion only. It is now believed, however, that the necessary missionary work on behalf of the measure has been carried out, public opinion having communicated itself to the Government as prepared to accept and support the Act. Opposition was originally from the rural districts, where farmers objected to having to carry lights upon their horse-drawn vehicles. With the increase in motor car traffic, however, the proposal is being recognized in rural constituencies as one which is necessary in the interests of the personal safety of the residents.

The changes which are contemplated in the marriage law are inspired by the situation which arose during the past year when the Bishop of London visited Ontario and was precluded from performing the marriage ceremony for his niece, the law which required officiating clergy to be residents of the Dominion proving a barrier. The intention of the Government is to extend the residence qualification for clergy to any part of the British Empire.

Among eccentric wagers was one that Lord Oxford, of England, won recently. He backed a flock of geese to race an equal number of turkeys from Norwich to London. The geese won, keeping to the road all the time, while the turkeys, when darkness fell, flew to roost in the trees.

CENTRE OF MINE INTEREST



This sketch shows the relative position of the famous Amulet-Area properties in Quebec, on which a recent electrical survey indicated an ore zone now being proved with the diamond drills. Mining men claim that there is about a 90 per cent chance that the drilling will disclose a sulphide ore body but no one can tell anything about it and the speculation which has put Area shares up from around 22 to over $1.30 a share and Amulet up from around $1.30 to $2.60, is described by a northern paper as the most interesting gamble since the early days of Cobalt. A cross indicates the place where the electrical survey was made on Area. Amulet and Area straddle the township line between Duprat and Dufresnoy. The latter township adjoins Rouyn on Rouyn's northern boundary.

Local Man Sued For Damages For Breach of Contract.

TORONTO, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Emma McGill, widow, of Peterborough, brings action at Osgoode Hall against a Peterborough man, claiming $11,625 damages in respect of an alleged breach of contract which she claims was entered into 30 years ago at Peterborough. Plaintiff claims that some 30 years ago she was courted, and brought action for breach of promise. A settlement was arrived at, she contends, whereby she was to be paid $25 a week and provide house for her. She alleged that in June of last year defendant refused to carry out the provisions of the contract, and that defendant had her arrested on charge of creating a disturbance. Defendant denies the allegations of plaintiff.

New Distillery Stock Is Centre Of Activity

TORONTO, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press). — Activity on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning centred around the new issue of Hiram Walker stock, which was traded in for the first time in the unlisted section to-day. A heavy turnover was registered in the new stock, which opened at 32 and reached a high mark of 34. It eased to 32 3-4 at the noon close. Other alcohol issues were slightly weaker Gooderham and Worts eased a quarter at 46½, Seagrams an eighth at 16 7-8, and Industrial Alcohol a quarter at 23. International Nickel, in which trading was heavy, and Brazilian were the only points of interest outside the unlisted and mining sections. Nickel gained a point at 40¾, and Brazilian a half at 104.

Mine Trading Heavy; Slight Gains Recorded

TORONTO, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press). — Moderate upturns were the rule when trading continued extremely heavy on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, with Quebec stocks again leading in activity. Laval-Quebec gained to 41 3-4, 1 3-4 higher, and Teck Hughes, another active leader, was up 18 at 555. Grover Daly firmed to 26, Duprat 1½ at 30½, and Area fifteen cents at 1.40. Buckingham eased 1½ at 7½. Amulet, heavily dealt in, firmed four cents at 252.

Wheat Turns Upward When Freight Increases

CHICAGO, Jan. 6. Canadian Press. — Wheat showed an early upward trend to-day influenced by the advancing of freight rates from the southern emisphere. Notice of less wheat afloat for Great Britain than a year ago also was a factor.

Opening unchanged to 1-4c higher, wheat gained all around. Corn, oats and provisions likewise developed firmness, corn starting 1-8c to 1-4c off but soon showing an advance.

Price Drop Continues; No Reason Yet Apparent

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press). — Reactionary price movements predominated in todays stock market, which failed to respond to the lowering of call money rates. Operators for the rise tried valiantly to bid up special stocks and met with a fair measure of success in Baldwin and a few amusement shares, but it seemed that standard industrials and rails were in supply on every rally.

Except for reports of further complications in the Chinese and Mexican situations and taking of a strike vote by railroad conductors and trainmen on some of the south eastern roads, there was nothing in the days news to explain the selling movement. After several weeks of unfavorable comparisons, car loadings for the week ended December 25 showed a substantial increase over the corresponding week before and the production schedules of United States Steel Corporation showed a substantial increase in the operating ratio. The large premium offered by the successful bidder for the $60,000 issue of 4 1-4 per cent cooperate stock of the City of New York was accepted as an indication of no signs of strain in the credit situation.

MORE MARINES SENT.

WASHINGTON, January 6. Canadian Press. — Six additional naval vessels have been ordered to Nicaragua, carrying an expeditionary force of 400 American marines.

The ships are the cruisers Cincinnati and Marblehead, the destroyers Barker, Smith Thompson, and Osborne, and the submarine tender Argonne.

They will report to Rear-Admiral Latimer, in command of the United States forces in Nicaraguan waters, for such disposition as conditions warrant. Two other destroyers left Norfolk yesterday, and although they were to replace wo other ships of their type, they doubtless will be used temporarily to increase the total United States naval strength available to Admiral Latimer.

Sale of Liquor Has Revived Evils, Says Chicago Man.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press.)— The Citizens' committee of one thousand, formed three years ago, by prominent men and women throughout the United States, to work for general law observance and enforcement, heard an assertion to-day that deaths from poisonous alcohol are occurring in British Columbia, where government control and the sale of liquor have been in effect for several years.

Although he made no mention of recent deaths in the United States from poisonous liquor, Raymond Robins, of Chicago, stated at the annual convention of the committee that fatalities from this cause 'continue in wet British Columbia."

Mr. Robins further asserted that the government control and sale of liquor in several Canadian provinces had "revived evils of the liquor in those provinces."

CALEXICO, Calif., Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—A sharp earthquake at 8.45 this morning, following a night of several lesser tremors, startled residents of Calexico and Mexicala, across the international line, but apparently did no damage.

Six light shocks occurring during the night shook buildings, damaged or weakened in the series of heavy 'quakes here last Saturday and Sunday. A rolling shock this morning, the seventh in fourteen hours, was the heaviest since the major shocks which marked the beginning of the seismic disturbances last week.

LOTS OF REINDEER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—There are 350,000 reindeer in Alaska now, according to the Biological Survey. A herd of 1,250 animals was imported from Siberia 25 years ago and has increased to that proportion. During the last few years reindeer-raising has become important commercially.

RYAN'S STORY NOT BELIEVED

Kingston Penitentiary Officials Doubt His Claims To Wealth.

MAY GET MONEY.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. . (Special.) The story appearing in the Ottawa Journal to the effect that "Red" Ryan, the bank bandit, serving a life term in Portsmouth Penitentiary, has $120,000 on deposit in Canadian and American banks, is regarded as so much bunk by the prison officials.

Warden J. C. Ponsford, when interviewed here this afternoon, stated he did not believe there was a word of truth in the story.

It is stated however that if Ryan's mail bag lock is accepted by the Post Office Department at Ottawa, Ryan would accumulate a big sum. Nothing official has been received here from Ottawa regarding the acceptance of the lock invented by the bandit.

Sir Alan Cobham, now visiting in Canada, has won for himself the reputation of being one of the most daring and courageous flyers in the British empire. This map shows the most important flights made by him since 1922. In that year it was merely a little jaunt to North Africa. In 1923 he went across Europe and into Asia Minor. By 1924 he was striking his gait and went as far as Burma. In 1925 he flew to Capetown and return, and this year it was Australia. TOP shows Sir Alan and Lady Cobham who is accompanying him in his Canadian tour. LOWER LEFT shows another view of Sir Alan in his flying togs. LOWER CENTRE shows Sir Alan, his wife and dog in the garden of their English home, after his Australian flight, and RIGHT circle shows the air hero's young son, Geoffrey Alan, as he looked when his father returned from Australia.

"These women," declared Mrs. Ruth J. Maurer, "are the type who still cling to corsets, frown on short skirts and believe in witches."

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Today should be especially lucky for all who possess sufficient wealth to provide themselves with an emerald, which, according to ancient superstition, is both the talismanic and natal gem. It is one of the most valuable of all precious stones. Indeed, a flawless emerald is very rare and best results cannot be obtained from a gem which is imperfect.

The aquamarine is today's natal gem. It is one of the loveliest of the semi-precious gems, and its power centers about the health and general well-being of its wearer. Those who possess an aquamarine and assured freedom from petty care and worries, the old legend claims.

The color to be observed today is brown. It is said to bring success to those who wear it.

The cosmos is today's significant flower. It is a symbol of domestic happiness

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

FATE AND TWO GIRLS

(By Alma Whitaker.)

Four years ago, when they were in high school, Mayl and Rosa had to write an essay on what they would choose to be if they were in a position to decide for themselves and carry it out.

Mayl wrote a fascinating essay that won A plus. She said she loved horses, that of all things in the world she would love to be a stud-farmer, raise beautiful horses, enter them in horse shows and tour the country riding them herself. She drew an enchanting picture of the joys of good horsemanship, the noble virtues of the horse, the thrill of an early morning canter on an autumn morning with a chill nip in the air.

Rosa was less ambitious, but she too, won an A with her essay. She said she would like to be a teacher, a first-class teacher, beloved of her scholars, and maybe, in time, have a whole school of her very own. She told how interesting she would make her subjects, so that her pupils would delight in study. And she put in a great deal about the noble and important work of teachers and their effect on the lives and characters of their scholars.

But that was four years ago. Mayl went to college and has just passed her examinations by which she becomes a qualified teacher. She laughs and sighs a little about those horse ambitions. Life is not going to be anything like that. She doesn't specially like teaching but it seemed the sensible thing to do. She hopes she will prove a good teacher, but she also hopes it will not be for all her life. Anyway, maybe she can do a little horse-back riding some day when she goes on her vacation.

Rosa did not finish at college. She took up dramatics and decided upon a stage career. She secured a small part in a local playhouse and saw herself a famous actress some day. She was pretty too, and could dance a little, sing a little, and wear clothes.

But parts in plays were not exactly flocking. So, when an opportunity came to take part in the chorus of a risque revue, she accepted it. To-day, Rosa, who wanted to be a teacher, a good teacher, beloved of her pupils, is pirouetting in scant clothing in a second-rate chorus at a cheap theatre, for an incredibly low salary. She is very unhappy, and is always explaining that "one must work one's way up," that it won't be for long . . . but she is getting slangy and she goes out with second-rate men, and she uses too much make-up and her clothes are rather tawdry.

These girls are only a little over 22 now—but they have wandered so far from their girlish ambitions. Fate seems to have played tricks with both of them—and especially with Rosa. But if only they can hold fast to those early ideals a little longer, they may reach something of the goals they longed for yet. If Rosa can win her way through to fine drama, avoid marrying some second-rate man just to get out of her distasteful work, keep herself and her dignity in trim, she could still be an important factor in the lives of people, still a fine teacher in another sense, still make an intellectual and human appeal.

And if Mayl can put the same delight and enthusiasm into youthful human beings as she wished to into horses, she can raise prize scholars and win her blue ribbons that way. I think Mayl is more likely, to be happy than Rosa. Mayl has not "let down" as Rosa seems to be doing. Both these girls had wanted to do what we call "creative work" in a way, both of their dreams were fine in their way. It is hard to see our youthful dreams go a-glimmering, but we can usually rescue something!

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

—"Is that 'wee-wee' female gone?" "Long" Lane flung his cap to the sideboard and dragged a chair up to the still unset dining table. "When do we eat? You frails may think this georgette crepe or whatever you call it looks good enough to eat, but I'm a working man, I am, and I craves food."

Faith swept the scraps of chiffon from the dining table and flung a white oil cloth upon it. "Has Dad come in yet? Mother's feeling badly today, and I've been keeping an eye on her and helping Madame Denise, too. And I'm so tired I could lie right down and die," she moaned, almost in tears. "When I get married—if I ever do—I'm going to elope. No big church wedding for me."

"You and me both," Junior grinned at her cheerfully. "Me and Fay have it all doped out—just a raid on the city hall, a pow-wow with the justice of the peace, and the deed'll be done."

"You and Fay?" Faith stopped short in dismay, her hands full of dishes from the sideboard. "Oh, Junior! You're not really thinking of getting married, are you? You're so awfully young! And Fay—"

"I'm nearly twenty-two, the oldest one of the bunch," "Long" thrust out his lower lip in little-boy petulance. "And I'll wreck the joint if anyone else throws it up to me about Fay's being married before. She wasn't really married, and you know it as well as I do. Her Dad had the marriage annulled."

Faith set the dishes upon the table with a bang, such an unusual sign of irritability that "Long" whistled with amazement.

"Steady, old girl! What you grouchin' about? Sore because Bob Hathaway's give you the gate? Saw him out driving today with Selma Pruitt. He was showing her them new bungalows Dad's building for him out in Enfield. Why don't you pep up a little, if you want to lasso him? Learn to strut your stuff, like Cherry does! Learn to do the Charleston, take the brakes off them big brown eyes of yours! You're not bad 'lookin', Faith, honest! But you've got a lot of high-class competition in this old burg."

"Oh, shut up!" Faith rumpled his hair affectionately, unable to resist his heavy-footed well-meaning cheerfulness. "Joy! Joy!" she called sharply. "Where in the world is that child?"

"Well, I guess I'm coming, ain't I?" Joy retorted impudently, appearing with her mouth smeared with telltale chocolate sauce.

"You've been into the dessert again," Faith seized her little sister's hand and slapped it sharply. "Oh, hello, Dad! You look tired, honey. Things going all right on the job?" Her irritability vanished as she laid her smooth white cheek against his wrinkled, leathery one.

"Kessler's fell down on the cement job," her father told her wearily. "The driveway's got to be torn out and put in again. Looks like I may be late on my contract and have to forfeit that five hundred I put up."

"Oh, surely not!" Faith soothed him, but her eyes betrayed her dismay. "Don't give up too easily, dear. It probably won't rain again for a month. Mother's not feeling very well. She's been asking for you. Supper's nearly ready, but Cherry isn't here yet."

"I don't guess she'll be here, either," her father spoke with dull, angry weariness. "I saw Cherry in Chris Wiley's roadster."

"Oh, Dad!" Faith's hand went to her throat. "Are you sure? I don't think she'd be so foolish."

"Ain't got a lick o'sense and never did have," Jim Lane retorted bitterly. "I ain't mistaken. Wiley's car got held up in traffic right alongside the street car, and I caught her eye. I yelled to her to git out of that car and come home with me, but that scoundrel shot his car ahead and she had the gall to wave at me."

"No, and that ain't the first time," "Long" struck the table sharply with the knife which Joy had just given him. "I think she's been pulling the wool over Dad's eyes long enough, Faith, and it's time he knew the tricks she's up to. She's out with him two or three times a week. And her wedding day less than a month off!"

"Faith, can I go to the movies with Cora Parsons? Her mother's going to take her to the seven o'clock show at the Cozy?"

"You know you can't go to a movie on a school night," Faith protested wearily. "Why do you keep asking over and over? And why did you get home from school so late today?"

Joy began to cry noisily. "I don't never have any fun," she sobbed. "All the other kids get to go to the movies five times as much as I do."

"Why didn't you get home before five o'clock today?" Faith demanded sternly, although the sight of the convulsed little face wrenched her with pity.

"Well, I guess it ain't my fault if that old hell-cat, Miss Peabody, made me sit on the school steps for an hour and a half! She's got it in for me, she has! Picks on me all the time since Cherry got engaged to that old man! I didn't do nothin' but eat a piece of candy in 'rithmetic class."

Another grief directly traceable to Cherry's insane engagement, Faith thought bitterly, as she stooped to kiss the trembling lips of her little sister.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

It is not quite clear whether the new fashion for wearing long-sleeved dinner frocks has brought about the demand for evening hats, or whether evening hats have been influential in spreading the fashion for the long-sleeved evening frock—but true it is that when a woman wears an evening hat she is inclined to wear a long-sleeved dinner gown.

Not very many years ago it was not customary in this country for women to wear what they considered formal evening dress to the theater. That, of course, meant low neck and short sleeves. One wore it to the opera but not to the theater—nor did most women wear what they called full evening dress to dine in restaurants. This meant two distinct types of evening dress—one for formal so-called "low-neck" affairs and the other for occasions when it was not considered quite conservative to display bare arms and neck.

Oddly enough we seem to be getting back to the old situation. Certainly it is not because of any prejudice against appearing with bare arms and bare necks at the theater or restaurant. Sleeveless frocks for morning wear are still part of the accepted order of things when weather permits. They will be as much in evidence as ever for southern resort wear.

It may be that these long-sleeved dinner frocks represent not a definite turn in fashion but merely a passing fad. They appeal to us by reason of their mere novelty. Some women wear them for the very obvious reason that the sleeves though usually made of nothing more substantial than a layer of lace do provide more warmth and protection against possible draughts. The woman with too fat or too thin arms also looks upon the fashion or fad with favor. It may be only that—a passing fad—but it would be a simple matter to cut out the long sleeves when they no longer serve a modish purpose.

Some of the new long-sleeved evening gowns are made of metallic materials. But whatever the material, it is—or should always be—rather splendid—rich enough to make an elaboration of detail about the frock unnecessary. It is through simplicity of cut and richness of material that the long-sleeved evening gown gains distinction.

GEORGIANA

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Georgiana is a modernism which has quite a bit of interesting history behind it. It means "husbandman," and dates back to the allegorical saints of the Greek Church, one of whom was called by a Greek name which meant "worker of the earth."

The fame of St. George and the dragon carried the masculine name to extraordinary heights of popularity. From it various feminines were formed with a distinct idea of honoring the saint. It was not a slow growth, but a deliberate manufacture. The first English lady bearing a name akin to George was a god-child of Anne of Denmark, who had her christened Georgia Anna in commemoration of herself and the popular saint. Later, the two names were run ot gether and Georgiana is the result.

Georgia is now regarded as a contraction of Georgiana, although it has the right to separate existence. Georgine and Georgette are French versions which have also acquired popularity in this country.

The emerald is Georgiana's talismanic gem. It is believed to guard her from unfortunate love affairs by giving her extraordinary keenness in judgment. Wednesday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

ROBESPIERRE AND MLLE. DEHAY

The Terror of the French Revolution Was a Poet in Love.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Think of that grim horror of the revolution, Robespierre, who sat at his wooden desk and ordered head after head tumbled ino a boody basket to the soul-curdling jeers and imprecations of a savage mob and then read the following letter for an example of the perversity in human nature:

"Mademoiselle: I have the honour of sending you a report upon an interesting subject. Such homage may be rendered to the Graces themselves, when to other fascinations they join the gift of being able to think and feel, and when they are alike worthy of conferring happiness and of mourning disaster.

"Talking of so important a subject, shall I be pardoned, Mademoiselle, if I speak of canaries? No doubt I shall be, if the canaries are interesting: and coming from you, can they fail to be? They are very pretty, and being bred by yourself, we expect them to be the most gentle and sociable of canaries. What was our surprise, then, when upon approaching the cage they threw themselves against the bars with an impetus which made us fear for our lives! They recommence their performance every time they see the hand that feeds them.

"What plan of education did you adopt for them and how have they acquired this savage character? Do the doves that the Graces rear for the chariot of Venus display this wild temperament? Such a face as your's should surely have familiarized without difficulty your canaries with the human face. Or is it, after seeing you they cannot tolerate any other? I beg to explain this phenomenon. Meanwhile, with all their faults, we shall find them lovable.

The above letter was written to a Mlle. Dehay, who was only one of many women who played some part or another in the life of this despot.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

CANADIAN PEMMICAN.

Q. What is Canadian Pemmican?

A. Canadian Pemmican used to be a standard food in the Northwest with the early settlers and citizens. To manufacture pemmican, the flesh of the buffalo was first cut up into large lumps, and then again into flakes or thin slices, and hung up in the sun or over the fire to dry. After it was thoroughly desicated, it was taken down, placed upon raw hides, spread out on the prairie, and pounded and beaten, sometimes by wooden flails, again between two stones, until the meat was reduced to pulp. Bags made of buffalo hide, with the hair on the outside about the size of a flour sack, were standing ready, and each one was half filled with the powdered meat. The tallow or fat of the buffalo, having previously been boiled by itself in a huge kettle, was then poured hot into the oblong bag in which the pulverized meat had previously been placed. The contents were then stirred together until they were thoroughly mixed, the dry pulp being soldered into a hard, solid mass by the melted fat. When full, the bags were allowed to cool, and then sewn up tightly.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S LIVE TREE

(Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Here is the hatchet," said Bumble, one of Uncle Wiggily's little boy rabbits, as he handed it to his daddy in front of the hollow stump bungalow one Saturday morning when there was no school.

"Why do you give me the little ax?" asked Mr. Longears. "Did mother ask you to tell me to chop some wood?"

"Oh, no!" exclaimed Baby Bunty, dancing out on the front porch just then. "We want you to go to the woods and cut down a Christmas tree, Uncle Daddicums!"

"Yes," went on Stumble, who was Bumble's brother. "You know it will soon be Christmas and always, about this time you take us to the woods and cut down the tree we picked out two weeks ago, and we bring it home."

"It's going to be Christmas soon! It's going to be Christmas soon!" sang all the other little bunny boys and girls.

"So take the hatchet and come on!" invited Bumble.

Mr. Longears took the sharp little ax in his paws, but as he looked at it he twinkled his pink nose and said:

"Now look here, boys and girls. I have just thought of something. Instead of cutting down a Christmas tree, to bring in our bungalow to wither and die, how would you like to have a live tree?"

"A live tree?" exclaimed Baby Bunty.

"A live Christmas tree," went on Uncle Wiggily. "Instead of cutting one down I will dig one up, roots and all, put it in a washtub of earth, and, after New Year's we can plant it back in the ground again."

"It sounds jolly," said Tumble as he fell off a snowbank, but he didn't mind that, for he did it two or three times a day.

"Will there be Christmas presents on the live tree, the same as there would be on the kind of tree you always cut down?" asked Baby Bunty.

"Then I think it's jolly, too!" laughed the little orphan rabbit.

"Come on!" shouted Uncle Wiggily and, leaving the hatchet at the bungalow, he led the little bunnies to the woods where, some time before, they had picked out the tree they wanted for Christmas.

Uncle Wiggily had brought with him a shovel and a hoe and with these he scraped the snow from the ground around the tree. The earth was hard with the frost, but Mr. Longears managed to get the frozen top crust dug away, after which he said:

"Now, you little rabbits can dig with your paws where the ground is soft. Jack Frost doesn't freeze it very far down. Dig up the live Christmas tree!"

Jingle and Jangle, Tumble and Bumble, Baby Bunty and all the others began to dig. Uncle Wiggily also helped. But Baby Bunty, after a while, looking up at the tree, whispered to Jingle:

"This isn't a live tree at all! It doesn't move and it doesn't say anything. How can it be alive?"

"Maybe Daddicums made a mistake," agreed Jangle.

But just then one of the limbs of the tree reached down and knocked off Bunty's hat.

"Oh!" she cried. And then the tree lowered another branch and tickled Jangle on the back of her neck so that she sneezed "Ker chookie choo!" And Uncle Wiggily, who was bringing up the wheelbarrow on which to take the tree home, asked what was the matter.

"Baby Bunty said that this tree wasn't alive, and I thought so, too," explained Jangle. "But it knocked her hat off and it tickled me, so it must be alive."

"Ho! Ho! That was only the wind blowing the tree branches!" laughed Tumble, and then he stopped, all of a sudden, for he fell down in the snow. But Baby Bunty said the tree was really alive and so did Jangle. And it must have been, for when they took it home in a big tub of earth, the little rabbits heard the tree singing a song about Christmas as the wind blew through its branches.

"And what jolly times we'll have when the tree is trimmed and when presents grow on it!" laughed Jingle, as she danced around the wheelbarrow So everything happened for the best.

SOLUTION YESTERDAY'S QUESTIONS.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FRIDAY JANUARY 7 1927

This should be a fortunate day, for although menacing influences are manifested astrologers read many benefic aspects.

Early in the morning there is an encouraging rule for those who would settle their affairs with bankers.

It is an auspicious day to look after one's finances and to plan retrenchments or to work out budgets.

There is a promising sign for those who write important letters about estates or rentals.

Merchants and manufacturers should profit greatly from this month on, for they will have much business with foreign countries.

In England there will be increased production of arms and ammunition, it is forecast, and the government will have new anxieties.

Mars smiles on many great constructive plans which mean that immense buildings and record breaking bridges are to be built in 1927.

Widespread discussion of peace will take place, while in Europe factories are busy with armaments of every sort, the seers prophesy.

Religion and politics will be mingled in more than one campaign in the new year, which will be marked by many secret activities, it is foretold.

A London astrologer who cast the horoscope of President Coolidge finds that Neptune afflicting him is a warning against his attitude on Prohibition.

This same seer foretell friction between the United States and France.

Persons whose birthdate it is have a happy augury for the year. They should be lucky in all dealings with officials.

Children born on this day probably will rise to supreme heights in any career chosen.

FOOD AND HEALTH

FOOD CONTAINERS

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

The term container is rather broad in its significance. Thought of in connection with food, the mind usually turns to the dainty cartons containing crackers, boxes of confectionary, jars of jam and so on. Even Nature seems to be interested in food containers, for she provides for fruits and vegetables, containers of the most efficiently protective nature possible. As Dr. Mendel of Yale University has frequently pointed out, the container or skin of the banana is literally germ proof. In the case of practically all fruits and vegetables, the skin or outer covering is a great help in preserving the wholesomeness of the pulp.

So keen has been the interest from time to time in artificial containers for foods that we have arguments, pro and con, for packaged foods and non-packaged foods. This is a plea for the housekeeper to inform herself in the matter of what is being done for the protection of our food supply.

One illustration of the activity of experts in the food field along this line is found in the work that has recently been done at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

At the institute they have what they call a food container fellowship. They have developed some interesting conclusions in regard to an edible substitute for the animal casings, which have for so long a time been used in making sausages. As is generally known, link sausages are prepared in casings made from the small intestines of sheep and hog. While these casings are treated by a number of processes and may be called approximately clean, there can be no doubt that most of us would prefer a synthetic substitute. As one result of the work, the material found most satisfactory was a high grade type of purified cotton linters. So the sausage lover will enjoy the cellulose casings and the sausage manufacturer himself will find them practical and there is no doubt, as pointed out by Dr. William F. Henderson and Harold E. Dietrich of the Mellon Institute, that the average consumer will welcome the casings because of their general hygienic character.

This is but one example of the type of work being carried on by devoted scientists for the purpose of improving our food supply. Unquestionably, the alert housewife will keep herself informed so that she may take advantage of the results of this careful work done in the interests of good food and good health.

"OGOPOGO" SUCCUMBS

While scientists discredit the story that he ever existed, it is reported that "Ogopogo," the sea monster of Lake Okanagan in British Columbia, is dead, having died beneath the ice. The animal has furnished many stories at different times, numerous people having said they had seen him, and have told varied stories as to his incredible size and speed of locomotion. The picture of the supposed fish is reproduced from a drawing by W. B. Robinson in the illustrated London News.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

Chestnuts are very good at this time of the year, but many housewives never buy them, feeling that it is very difficult to shell them. The easiest way to do this is to make a slit in each nut with a sharp knife. Place them in a pan with a few teaspoons of water. Put this in the oven. Let them remain there for about ten minutes or until the skins are loosened. Then remove the skins when the nuts are still hot for they are much easier to peel off than when the nuts are cold. Be sure to remove the inside skin as well as the shell.

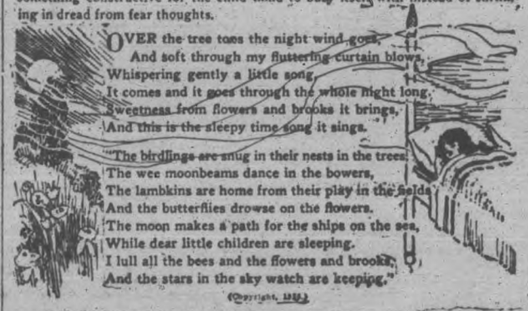
A very good dessert may be made with apples and chestnuts in this way. Peel and core some large, firm cooking apples. Boil some shelled skinned chestnuts until tender and put them through a wire sieve. Add a little butter and sugar to the puree of chestnuts and fill the centers of the apples with it. Butter a baking tin and place the filled apples on this and bake until tender. They may be served with cream.

Marrons glaces may be made at home at considerable saving. After removing the shells boil the buts for five minutes and then remove the inner skin. For a pound of the nuts put a pound of sugar in a pan with a pint of water, add the nuts and simmer until the nuts are fairly clear and tender. Drain off the syrup, add a scant teaspoon of vanilla extract and let the syrup cook until it is 30 degrees F. You should have a sugar thermometer for this. Now, using a nut pick, spike one nut at a time, dip into the syrup and place on a plate or large plte to dry. A little lemon juice may be added instead of the vanilla.

The Night Wind

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

MARY was afraid "something" would get in her open window and got fairly panicky over the idea. Gently and constantly her mother reassured her, telling her that only the night wind could possibly come in and that it brought sleep and lovely messages. Gradually the fear was replaced by peaceful, pleasant thoughts, and Mary went to sleep unafraid. Punishment for fear only makes a bad matter worse. Fear conquering is a matter of re-education, of offering something constructive for the child mind to busy itself with instead of shrinking in dread from fear thoughts.



OVER the tree tops the night wind goes,
And soft through my fluttering curtain blows,
Whispering gently a little song,
It comes and it goes through the whole night long,
Sweetness from flowers and brooks it brings,
And this is the sleepy time song it sings.

The wee moonbeams dance in the bowers,
The lambkins are home from their play in the fields
And the butterflies drowse on the flowers.
The moon makes a path for the ships on the sea,
While dear little children are sleeping.
I lull all the bees and the flowers and brooks,
And the stars in the sky watch are keeping."

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

(By Edso R. Watt, Shawnee Okla.)

That you depend upon a newspaper for many other services and the newspaper is glad and even anxious to give service. The newspaper office is the natural place to turn when you want information of any kind. In joy or in trouble you find congratulations or sympathy in a newspaper office. If you need help, the editor is usually the one to aid you.

That many folks think they could publish a newspaper better than the men who have put years in the work. That is not strange, because the same folks believe they could operate a railroad or hotel better than the owners.

A newspaper lives by its advertising patronage, yet many are constant seekers after free advertising. It is not fair to give away what you have to sell and no other merchant does it. The subscription price does not pay for the white paper used and the reader is cheated if news is held out to print free advertising.

Final score—Oshawa 7, Peterboro 2.

Displaying greater finish especially around the net, Oshawa Intermediates earned a seven-two triumph over Peterborough Wanderers at Brock Street Rink last night. The winners played much more combination, going right in to shoot, and every one of their seven counters came on a close-in play, usually on a pass near the net. Sometimes, in fact, they went in too far in their anxiety and goals were called back offside passes.

In centre ice the Petes were much more evenly matched with their opponents. They skated as fast, and checked back well, although the tricky Oshawa players had an edge in stick-handling and combination there, too. The locals seldom got in close to the goal until the last period, when they scored their two goals on combination plays that were right in on top of Smith.

It was, in many ways, a nice game to watch. There was good combination, fast skating, nifty stick-handling, plenty of scoring, a little bumping. There was never a let up. Even when the score was 7 to 1, the visitors kept plugging away, with three men up on the attack, instead of playing a defensive game. The Petes, though far behind, also stuck to their guns, and played a better game near the end than when they had a chance to win.

LeBarr was the star for the losers. He was beaten seven times for goals, but every one was on a close in attempt. None of the few long shots tried by the visitors went in, and a good many of the rushes which came right in on top of him were turned aside. Some of the shots looked well nigh impossible to stop, but stick, hands and pads were used with equal facility in blocking and clearing coolly in the face of numerous attackers.

Maudsley led on the attack. In the early part of the game he seemed the only one who could beat the Oshawa defence for a good shot at Smith, whom he rocked many times with vicious drives. Cheu and Cripps also worked well on the attack, the latter scoring the two counters. Thornton and Dundas rushed many times, but seemed unable to make any impression. They showed considerable selfishness on their attacks, although no member of the team was entirely free from this vice. Lackey played a strong game on the defence and his rushes down the ice usually ended with a good shot or a well placed pass, but these, unfortunately, were often wasted by the failure of the wings to keep up.

Avery, Lott, and Houck led the visiting attack. They went in close to shoot and when they missed, followed into the corners to pester the Peterborough attackers all the way down. Lott spoiled a couple of goals by being offside when he received passes in front of the net. Johnston and Lowe played well on the defence, and also rushed dangerously. They showed a tendency to spit on rushes own the centre but the opening left tempted the Peterboro puck carriers to try long shots.

Smith, the veteran goalie, played a splendid game. Most of the shots fired at him were from outside, but he smothered a lot of close-in drives too. He was given little chance on the two shots that beat him.

The first period started fast, with Oshawa having the advantage, due to superior combination, but the close checking of the Peterborough team kept the visitors away from the net. Lott had the first shot on goal, missing the corner by inches on a drive from the left boards. Maudsley returned the call, rocking Smith with a hard shot. The advent of Avery, sub for Oshawa, at about half time, seemed to pep things up, and the visitors scored three goals in less than two minutes. Houck got the first on a pass from Avery. The visitors came right back from the face-off, and Avery scored from close in. The same player made a lone rush down the centre from the next face-off and tucked the puck into the corner of the net in short order.

The second period produced much the same style of play as the opener. The visitors usually came down three abreast, and sometimes four in a row, but their shots usually were turned into the corners. The Petes made more individual attacks, but played more combination than in the first period, but they too were kept scoreless. Penalties were the only entries until near the end of the period, when Lowe rushed, passed to Houck, and took a return pass right in front of the net to score. Lott drew the first penalty of the game for a trip. He was followed by Johnston, who had endeavored to comb Cheu's hair with the hickory. With a two-man advantage the Petes pressed, but were unable to do anything. Thornton was next chased, drawing a penalty in a mix-up just after the teams had been restored to strength. Cheu and Conlin followed right after him for mixing it in the corner, and the visitors had a five to four advantage.

Maudsley opened the third period with a rest for tripping Houck. The teams were at full strength, though, when Lott scored. Cripps raised a cheer from the fans when he took a pass from Maudsley and flipped the disc past Smith for the opening score. Oshawa followed with two. Houck took the first from a scrimmage, and Lott got the second, securing from a face-off at the side of the net and wheeling to beat LeBarr from the other side. Johnston, who had disregarded the bell several times, drew a rest for shooting after play had been stopped, and while he was off Cripps scored on a rebound from Cheu.

Zach Wheat May Sign With New York Giants

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Zach Wheat, veteran outfielder recently cast adrift by the Brooklyn Robins, may catch a line thrown out by the New York Giants. Manager McGraw admits he is interested in Wheat. He also expresses high satisfaction over receiving the signed contract of infielder Bill Terry, who was the Giants' most obstinate holdout last spring.

BRITISH RENEW POLO CONQUEST

Challenge Series For Hurlingham Cup—Will Be Played in September.

AT LONG ISLAND.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Great Britain will renew its attempt to regain the international polo challenge series next September. Matches will be played probably at the Meadowbrook Club, Westbury, Long Island, the best two out of three to decide possession of the famous trophy.

The United States Polo Association annouces acceptance of an official challenge from the Hurlingham Club of Great Britain which contained no mention of plans for assembling the invading team. Indication has been given, however, that a combination picked from British officers in India will carry the British colors.

This year's series will be the ninth between the two countries since 1886. After being held for 23 years by England, the trophy was finally brought here in 1909 when Harry Payne Whitney organized America's first "Big Four.' Devereux Milburn, a member of that team, may again represent America in its defense of the cup next fall.

O. H. A. BULLETIN

Jack Cameron is unable to act, and Ernie Collett has been appointed referee for the Port Perry at Whitby Intermediate O.H.A. game scheduled for tonight.

Where there are only two teams in a group, or section of a group, total goals count, whether a single or double schedule is being played. That means each game is to be only of sixty minutes' duration, with no extra play if the teams are tied at the expiration of the regular time. Therefore the official score for the Peterboro-Lindsay game played Tuesday night was 3-3, though Lindsay won out in overtime.

Senior Series

Preston at Galt — M. J. Rodden, Toronto.

KILL 600 DEER.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 6.—During the recent four days' deer hunting season, hunters in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware shot 600 bucks, according to statistics gathered here. This breaks all previous records.

GOLF CONFLICT MAY BE SETTLED

SLIGHT SHIFT.

ST. ANDREW'S, Scotland, Jan. 6.—The conflict in dates of the British and United States open golf championships this summer will be eliminated if success meets negotiations which it is understood, are now going on between the Royal Ancient Club Championship Committee and the United States Golf Association.

It is stated that the Anglo-American conflict of tournament dates, which produced some bitter comment in the British press, was much regretted by British golfing authorities, with the result that compromise proposals were sent to the U.S.G.A., involving a slight shift of dates for both championships.

If the proposals are accepted United States players will be able to play in both British and United States opens and original plans for a team of British stars to visit the United States to defend the Ryder Cup will be carried out.

The schedule for the British open calls for playing in the qualifying round of St. Andrew's on June 20 and June 21, with elimination rounds continuing until the final day, June 24. The United States open is scheduled at Oakmount for June 23, 24 and 25.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

I suppose if I were a fancy writer I could draw word pictures that would fire the blood and thrill the heart of every mother's son of you. Romance, you might call it. Romance and color—but to me it was life.

Rings pitched stealthily in the dead of night. Rich idlers, sons of the aristocracy of early New York and New England, dodging the brass buttons and blue coats of the law to see me fight.

Bloody battles that lasted twenty, thirty, forty and fifty rounds! Men, real he-men with hearts of oak and muscles of steel, jabbing, blocking, covering, lashing out with sudden spurts, backing away cagily. Hurried flights and all the thrills that make this game the greatest in the world.

I wish I could do justice to this story of my life and to the original Jack Dempsey and all the great muscular gods of the ring, but if I slip a bit now and then and my grammar isn't so good, please remember I'm doing the best I can, for my heart is in every single word of it.

I first saw the light of day in one of the prettiest towns in the world—Cork, Ireland, March 24, 1866. I came to America in 1871. Settled at Bangor, Me., where my father ran a cooper shop. Later we moved to Cambridge, Mass., and I started selling papers. In 1879 we moved to the famous "Fourteenth Ward" of Brooklyn and all the hardy, lusty little Micks from all Ireland, it seemed, lived there.

I was timid at first but a few sound smacks on the jaw got me going and I became quite a scrapper. In those days it didn't mean much to be a good fighter. You had to be the whole works or stay in the rear. Well, I finally whipped every body in our block but good old Paddy Garrity.

He was one of the best fighters I ever saw. Naturally good. My size, age and weight.

My fight with him was the first real big fight of my life. It is still vivid in my mind. We met one night under the corner lamp on North Second street.

My, how our pudgy little fists flew. We battled on and on, and so evenly were we matched till finally the cops broke it up. We met again the next night—and the next—and the next. Each time the fight became bitterer. After each ferocious encounter the cops ran us bowlegged. We kept that up every night, a gruelling pace, for five nights!

On the sixth night Garrity failed to show up and I was accepted as champion of the block!

NOTE.—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how he first met the original Jack Dempsey, how he trained with him and how Dempsey sneaked off to Flushing for a secret fight with the sensational Ed McDonald and knocked him out with his bare knuckles in the 27th round.

A puncture is a puncture whether it's in a flivver or a Rolls. Remember this the next time you have nothing else to remember.

SWEEPING DENIALS WERE MADE BY ACCUSED BASEBALL PLAYERS AT OPENING OF SCANDAL HEARING

Two Bits of Concrete Evidence May Undermine Risberg's Charges.

RAISED POOL.

Says Rowland Told Him Everything "Fixed" For Series.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press). — Sweeping denials were made by members of the White Sox and Detroit Tigers, players of the past and present, of "Swede" Risberg's accusations that the White Sox bought a series from the Tigers in 1917, when Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, brought the players face to face with their accuser in the unprecedented hearing that opened here yesterday.

Added to these denials were two bits of concrete evidence that indicated innocence on the part of all those accused and tended to shoot the story Risberg told under oath full of holes. The first was a cancelled check, dramatically produced by Eddie Collins, former second baseman of the White Sox, and now with the Athletics, which showed a variance in its date with that mentioned by Risberg. The other was a statement by George Dauss, a pitcher with the Detroit Club, that he had been paid $180 from a pool raised by the White Sox players, yet he did not pitch in the series in which Risbery said that "sloughing" was done.

When the hearing was adjourned early last night, after nearly six hours of testimony, 20-odd players had faced Risberg, had denied his charges and more of them will take the stand.

"Chick" Gandil, involved with Risberg and six other former White Sox in the crooked world's series of 1919, will come to Risberg's rescue to-day in an attempt to substantiate the "Swede's" story.

Risberg, nervously puffing a cigarette, told his sensational story in a room packed with the great stars of the diamond, on whom he was to place the brand of bribery. When Risberg took the stand there was a moment of deathly silence as his eyes swept the room picking out the players he accused. The Swede did not say a word to any of his old baseball pals as he edged his way into the office to take the witness chair, and none of them said anything to him.

After the conventional opening questions, Landis, after gazing steadily at Risberg, as though sizing him up, said: "Will you repeat to me now the statements you made to me in my office January 1 regarding the games between Chicago and Detroit in 1917?"

Risberg, leaning slightly forward and looking at nobody except Landis, raised his voice so that every syllable was audible to everybody in the packed room, began.

"In 1917, the White Sox and Detroit were to play four games in two days—morning and afternoon games on Labor Day, and a double-header on the following day. Just before the first game, Clarence Rowland, manager of the White Sox, came to me and said, 'There is nothing to worry about, it is all fixed for us to win,' and we won the four games.

"Two weeks later, in the Ansonia Hotel, in New York, a collection was taken up among the White Sox to pay the Detroit players for 'sloughing' off these games. Chick Gandil collected some and I collected some. Each player was to contribute $46.

"This money was paid to Bill James in a saloon in Philadelphia. Rowland gave Chick Gandil and myself permission to go to Philadelphia from New York for that purpose."

He could remember only two specific things that indicated to him that the series was framed for the White Sox to win. One, he said, was a remark by Rowland that "Everything was fixed for us to win." The other was an exclamation by Eddie Collins, the White Sox second baseman, "This is terrible," when Denny Dyer, the Tigers' shortstop, kicked a ground ball over the diamond in trying to field it.

No remark was made by any Sox players, outside of those by Rowland and Collins, that anything was wrong with the four games, until the "reward money" was collected, he admitted.

He could not recall anything particularly "raw" about the four games, except that some of the Detroit pitchers did not appear to be "putting anything on the ball," and that Oscar Stanage, catcher for Detroit, seemed to let the Sox steal bases almost at will. They stole 21 bases in those four games, but Stanage in his testimony sheepishly admitted that this had happened to him before, and his answer drew a roar from the crowd.

The White Sox players in refuting Risberg's charges, admitted the money part of his story, but insisted it was to reward the Detroit pitchers for having beaten Boston in a series, thus aiding the White Sox to edge out Boston for the American League championship.

After Risberg had concluded his recital, the Commissioner turned to the players Risberg had accused, and asked them if they wished to ask Risberg any questions, and they all answered in the negative. Rowland, now an American League umpire, but manager of the White Sox back in 1917, was the first to challenge Risberg's story, branding it a "damned lie."

He did admit that a pool was raised to reward the Tigers for "bearing down" against the Red Sox in the fag end of the season, but he said he did not contribute to it.

Rowland flatly denied telling Risberg that the series had been fixed.

Eddie Collins, following Rowland in the witness chair, said he gave Gandil $45 for a pool to reward the Tigers for defeating Boston. He said he was not informed of the pool until sometime after the series, and that he refused to contribute until he confirmed the fact that other players had contributed. He produced a package of cancelled checks showing the one in question had been cashed in the Ansonia Hotel in New York on October 16, almost a month after the date Risberg mentioned, and after the world's series. The check bore a notation "for use of Gandil."

"Risberg's story is all a lie. Here are my checks to prove it," Collins yelled, and his remark drew clapped applause from the assemblage.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, driven form organized baseball after a long and illustrious career, stepped back into the spotlight for a few moments when he took the witness stand and paid a glowing tribute to the game that had cast him out, declaring, "I have played in some 3,000 baseball games and I never had, at any time, nor have I now, the slightest reason to suspect that a single one of those games was crooked."

"Did you ever hear any discussion among ball players to the effect that the Detroit ball club 'sloughed' off four games to the White Sox in 1917 in order that the Chcago team might win the pennant?" asked the Commissioner.

"I have already answered that," Cobb replied. "I heard no discussion until these charges were brought."

HOW TO SKI

JUMPING

On the average take-off, at fairly good speed, the jump is best executed as follows: About fifteen yards from the take-off, bring the feet together. Just at the take-off jump into the air, throwing the body forward and erect. . straightening the body, swinging the arms forward and upward help the movement and give distance to the jump. While in the air incline the body forward and press the ski points downward, keeping the skiis parallel to each other, as well as to the slope In landing, the skiis should be level as close together as possible, and pointed down, so that they strike the snow with the whole surface simultaneously. Just as you again feel the snow underfoot, drop one foot behind and at the same time assume the 'Telemark' position. When the balance is fully recovered, you assume the upright position.

Fill Out Ugly Hollows with Firm Flesh

New Yeast and Iron Puts on Pounds of Weight in Only 3 Weeks—or pay nothing

Women and men are amazed at the almost magic effects of IRONIZED YEAST. After a single course treatment — thin, weak bodies are brought up in weight and strength. Flesh is made round and firm. Hollows filled out. Skin made satiny smooth with the glow of girlhood. How is this done?

Yeast and Iron have always been considered two of the greatest body and blood builders by medical science. They contain those vital food elements that build up solid flesh, correct skin and digestion troubles and enrich the blood. IRONIZED YEAST contains these two ingredients in highly concentrated form which is nine times more effective than yeast and iron taken alone.

Don't Take Sickening Oil.

IRONIZED YEAST gives you all the weight-building benefits contained in cod liver oil without the sickening, fishy taste or "repeating" afterward.

So it is natural that after taking IRONIZED YEAST you will notice an amazing improvement in your health appearance and spirits. The skin loses its sallow, pimply, blotchy look, pounds of good flesh are taken on and your digestion and bowel action are wonderfully improved.

So, don't have a skinny, weak body that looks as though it had never been fed enough. Don't go around with an ugly skin. Take IRONIZED YEAST. Safe for everybody; contains no harmful drugs.

Try it on "Money-Back" Offer

Go today to any drug store and get a full size treatment. If, after his generous trial, you are not delighted with effects, ask for your money back. It will be refunded immediately. In 2 styles—sanitape package, $1.00; bottle, $1.25. For economy's sake get the $1.25 size. If inconvenient to buy from druggist, send $1.25 direct to THE IRONIZED YEAST CO., Fort Erie, Ont., Desk 149-D.

MARSHALL NAMED AS POSSIBLE CHOICE

Suggested in View of Splendid Run For Alderman in 1926.

There is considerable agitation among business men in the city that John R. Marshall, sales manager of the Canadian Nashua Paper Company, should be appointed to the vacancy on the city council rendered vacant by the resignation of ex-Alderman E. M. Turner.

Mr. Marshall, although not a candidate in the recent election, ran sixth in the 1926 race, polling a vote of over 2,100. Then, as recently a vacancy also existed, and the council appointed N. E. Phelan, who had been defeated in the contest for the Mayoralty. While they feel that the Council's action was well merited, they think that the large vote polled in Mr. Marshall's favor at that time entitled him to consideration, as it showed that he stands high in the estimation of the citizens.

Mr. Marshall, in their opinion, is the logical choice for the honor, as he is an executive in one of the most prosperous firms in the city, and prior to coming to Peterborough, had gained a wide business experience in various capacities. They feel that a man of the calibre of Mr. Marshall, together with his experience, would prove a valuable asset to the City of Peterborough.

OBITUARY.

MRS. IDA REBECCA HICKEY.

There passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Hughes, 14 Charles Street, Ida Rebecca Cochrane, widow of James Hickey. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, George Hickey of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. Greenway of Cleveland and Mrs. W. C. Hughes of this city.

The funeral will be held from the residence of her daughter, 14 Charles Street, on Friday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock to St. Luke's Church and Little Lake Cemetery, with the Rev. G. J. Bousfield officiating.

WILLIAM HARDILL

The funeral of the late William Hardill was held yesterday. The pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church conducted the service. The members of the Iron Moulder's Union attended in a body. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The following were the pall-bearers: Samuel Cottingham, R. S. Merrill, Fred Roberts, Harry Starr, William Mowry, and Frank Raines.

During the address Dr. Rose said: If he could speak to us today, he would bid us refrain from praise of him, and he would urge us to crown the Saviour through whom life becomes truly great, and to extol virtue and faithfulness through which we can best forward the interests of the world, which are the interests of the Master. The following things however should be emphasized, as they have been illustrated by the life which today we honor and which we shall ever hold in loving remembrance:

That it is possible in the midst of an intensely active life, at the very heart of industrial operations, in touch with hundreds of other laborers, to achieve and maintain a character above reproach. It is a false idea that to succeed one needs to compromise with evil. The very opposite is true. The only basis of true prosperity is sound morality, or rather let us say Christian principle. As we knew the Good Man before us, he lived the religion of the Master Workman who said: "My Father worketh hitherto and I work."

Second, the fact that the influence of a good man is so much greater than he ever realizes. The greatest power which anyone exerts for the welfare of mankind is that of his silent influence, the atmosphere of the soul which is as hard to define as the fragrance of a field of clover, or the blossoms of countless orchards in June. There is a strange sweet influence that distills from genuine souls that cannot be measured or weighed. So has it been in the life of Mr. Hardill. There is more that is felt than can be said in regard to him. His influence through the home circle, the church, and his comrades in the factory, will go on and on, touching the farthest shores of time.

Third.— The advantage of being ready for such an hour as death brings. The closing days of life found him ready through the only adequate preparation that can be made —faith in Christ as his Saviour, and a life conformed to the example and teachings of his Master. To-day he rests from his labors and his works follow him. "Now the laborer's task is o'er, now the battle day is past; now upon the farthest shore lands the voyager at last. Father in Thy gracious keeping, leave us now Thy servant sleeping."

LONDON, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain to-day was breathing a little easier over the tense situation at Hankow, where seething crowds of Chinese coolies have overrun the British concession.

The slightest provocation on the part of the British, however, it is felt, is likely to turn the ugly crowds there into uncontrollable mobs.

The Foreign Office this morning said no further sensational development has occurred in Hankow since the British marines were withdrawn on Tuesday. British volunteers are disarmed and the Chinese population is allowed free access to the British quarter.

The Foreign Office said that Eugene Chan, Cantonese Foreign Minister, had assumed full responsibility for law and order within the concession, provided the British did not provoke the crowds by any display of force.

Static Delays Exchange of Greetings at Formal Opening.

QUICK CONNECTION.

Heads of Two Companies See Service as Link of Friendship.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—A dream of scientists became a reality today when commercial radio telephone service between New York and London was formally inaugurated by the exchanging of official greetings between President W. S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York, and Sir G. Evelyn Murray, Secretary of the British General Postoffice, in London.

The worst atmospheric conditions in months produced static which somewhat delayed the initial conversation.

Seated in his office in Lower Broadway, Mr. Gifford lifted the receiver at 8.44 and said to the operator, "Can you get me Sir Evelyn Murray in London."

A few minutes later the telephone bell tinkled, and Mr. Gifford said: "Good morning."

"Good morning," came the reply.

After a short delay owing to static, Mr. Gifford told Sir Evelyn he believed the new service would link the two countries together as neighbors in a real sense.

Sir Evelyn replied he was certain that the inauguration of personal conversation between the two countries would strengthen the existing friendly ties.

Confirmation of Prince's Plan To Visit Canada Received By Radio.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Canadian Press.—The first news received by the Associated Press over the newly inaugurated radio-phone commercial service between London and New York came from its London Bureau this morning, and furnished further confirmation in regard to the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada next summer. His Royal Highness, it stated, is expected to visit New York and the Middle West.

"After the Prince attends the Jubilee Celebration in July he plans to spend a vacation on his ranch in Alberta, then to re-visit the mid-Western United States, and later go to New York for the Anglo-American polo matches before returning home" says a cable despatch.

Ink Spots Duce's Photo Lynching Is Prevented

GENOA, Jan. 7 (United Press).—Ink spattered from a hurled bottle over a picture of Premier Mussolini yesterday, and but for the action of three Fascist militiamen, Carmelo Scalia would have been lynched by persons who witnessed his act.

Scalia threw the ink in a public room of the local post office. He immediately was seized and had been beaten severely when the militiamen got hold of him and took him out through a side entrance.

SOVIET ENVOY NOT WELCOME

Brazilian Press Says Bolshevism Is Seeking Foothold.

LABOR HOSTILE.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 7. — (United Press).—The arrival at the most exclusive hotel in the city of Boris Kravaesky, alleged Soviet delegate named to re-open commercial relations between Brazil and Russia, has brought caustic criticism from the press.

"The Soviet, which has been active in the Far East, is now endeavoring to stretch its claws westward and gain a foothold in points offering the weakest resistance," says the newspaper "Noite."

The newspaper 'Gazetta Noticias' predicts that the Government will deal ruthlessly with such Bolshevist propagandists as Kravaesky and will prevent the spread of Bolshevism to Brazil.

A Laborite newspaper regrets that Kravaesky is a guest at the city's most expensive hotel, and says that Brazilian workmen will oppose Communism if it is preached by such guests.

Fire Chief Recovers His Daughter's Body

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Jan. 7. (United Press.) — When Robert Hubbard, chief of the volunteer fire department, was called to extinguish a fire on Wednesday, he found that his own three year old daughter had been burned to death.

The fire was caused by crossed wires when the child upset a boudoir lamp beside her bed. From her home across the street, Mrs. Harry Price, the grandmother, saw smoke pouring out of the bedroom window and turned in an alarm.

Fire Chief Hubbard's company responded and quenched the flames.

Hubbard recovered his daughter's body.

E. B. FOWLER CHOSEN CHAIRMAN OF 1926 BOARD OF EDUCATION

SOME PROBLEMS.

Chairman Refers To Need For Collegiate Extension —Non-Resident Fees.

E. Bruce Fowler was elected chairman of the Board of Education for 1927 at the inaugural meeting held last night. Mr. Fowler, who has been on the board for seven years, succeeds J. A. McKone, who has been chairman for the past two years.

In accepting office, Mr. Fowler said that it was an honor to occupy the chair, and to preside over such an important body. Previous boards had built up a fine system, with plant and staff, he said, and he asked for the same co-operation from the members as had been accorded previous chairmen.

Speaking of problems to be settled by the Board this year, Mr. Fowler said that the extension to the Collegiate Institute was the most important, and he hoped that some definite plan might be presented in the near future. The matter of non-resident pupils at public schools should also be considered, he said. He considered it poor business and unfair to tax-payers that these pupils should pay fees ranging from three to twelve dollars a year, when the cost to the City is forty-seven dollars per pupil.

In conclusion he welcomed the four re-elected trustees to their seats again, congratulating them on having been returned by acclamation for the second term in succession.

The four re-elected members, Messrs. J. A. McKone, J. F. Strickland, E. F. Reid, and W. R. Turner, Jr., took the declaration of office, which was administered by E. A. Peck, M.P.

Committees were struck by a standing committee consisting of J. A. McKone, E. F. Reid, J. F. Strickland, E. R. Wilson, and Dr. J. J. Craig. When the report was adopted the committees elected their chairmen, and are now constituted as follows:

Finance: J. F. Strickland, chairman, W. R. Turner, J. A. McKone, and the Separate School representative.

Property: E. F. Reid, chairman, E. R. Wilson, J. A. McKone, and J. A. McNabb.

Appointments: Dr. H. M. Yelland, chairman, with the whole board.

The Advisory Vocational Committee was re-appointed with one change, E. B. Fowler succeeding J. A. McKone. The members are G. A. Gillespie, James Dutton, W. A. Richardson, F. J. Gandy, W. E. Curry, George Clarke, and Trustees E. R. Wilson, E. F. Reid, Dr. J. J. Craig E. B. Fowler, W. R. Turner and the Separate School representative.

The City Council will be asked for an interim grant of $15,000 for the needs of the Board until the estimates are compiled.

KING DECLINES TO MAKE REPLY

WAITING FOR HOUSE.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—Premier Mackenzie King would make no statement or comment on the points raised by the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Conservative leader, at Toronto yesterday, when his attention was drawn to Mr. Guthrie's speech this morning. The Prime Minister merely said that he had spoken on the results of the Imperial Conference in the House of Commons. He has already intimated that there would be an opportunity for full discussion of the proceedings at the conference during the session of Parliament.

It is possible that Mr. King may reserve any statement in regard to Canada's attitude on the Imperial defence until he can make it in the House, though it is suggested that he may refer to the matter when he speaks in Toronto early next month.

HEAVY INCREASE.

Notable Advance in Freight —Slight Decline in Passenger Traffic.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7 — Present appearances are that the gross earnings of Canadian railways for the year just closed will approach, if they do not break all records in that regard. The highest gross earning figure in the history of Canadian railroads was made in 1920, when a total of $492,101,104 was reached. Second position is held by 1923, with $478,338,047. Revised gross earnings for the ten months ending last October are over $16,000,000 in advance of the corresponding figure for 1923. Gross earnings for the last two months of that year were over $90,000,000, a figure which was also passed on the same period in 1923.

Last year the car loadings for November and December have run ahead of those of 1925, so it is not regarded as likely that the gross earnings will fall far below the amount then attained. If this expectation is fulfilled it will mean that the gross earnings for last year will reach second place, if they do not reach first. In making this comparison, it has to be remembered that the records quoted for 1920 and 1923 include all Canadian railways, while the returns for last year cover only about 20 out of 50 odd lines, although in 1923 these lines accounted for all but about $7,000,000 of the gross earnings.

Ten Months

The gross earnings of these 20 railways for the ten months of last year increased nearly 10 per cent. over the year previous. Operating expenses increased only about 4 per cent., and operating income rose by over 40 per cent. The gross earnings of these railways for the ten months of 1926 were $395,625,715, as compared with $360,263,748 for the corresponding month of 1925. Operating expenses for the ten month period rose from $302,127,345 in 1925, to $315,815,454 in 1926. Operating income, which allows for taxes and some other charges, in addition to operating expenses, was for the ten month period in the year just closed, $73,360,840, as compared with $52,096,800 in the year previous.

Freight Traffic

Freight traffic during the last year has shown a substantial upward movement, but there has been a slight decline in passenger traffic. The cumulative total of tons of revenue freight for the ten months of 1926 was 96,286,141, as compared with 86,489,319 in 1925. The total number of passengers carried during the ten months of 1926 was 33,539,417, as compared with 33,815,695 in the ten months of the year previous. In the month of October itself the number of passengers carried in 1926 was 2,896,006, as against 3,109,658 in October, 1925.

The average number of employees on Canadian railways during 1926 was substantially greater than in 1925, and the average monthly payroll was correspondingly higher. The average number of employees during the ten months of 1925 was 156,510, while in 1926 it was 163,169. The average pay-roll for the ten months of 1925 was $18,934,067, while for 1926 this expenditure had risen to $19,982,567.

BANQUET TENDERED TO STAFF BY RETIRING COMMISSIONER

Alfred Maguire, Member of Ontario Hydro Commission of Ontario, is Principal Speaker at Conclave To Members of Peterboro's Public Enterprises.

EASTERN POLICY TO BE ANNOUNCED.

E. F. and Mrs. Mason tendered a banquet last night in the Empress Hotel to the employees of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, the members of the Commission past and present, and their wives, and other officials.

Alfred Maguire, member of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, was the principal speaker and in an address which was full of vigor and enthusiasm for Hydro, he instilled into those present a desire to help along one of the greatest public ownership enterprises in the world. Mr. Maguire was always one of the right-hand men of the late Sir Adam Beck in all his struggles for Hydro.

It was the first time in the history of the local Commission that the entire staff had been brought together, and in doing so Mr. Mason sought to give the employees a better understanding of the $2,000,000 plant which they were connected with, so that they would give their best service to the citizens of this city. Vocal selections were rendered by Maurice Park and D. G. H. Melton, with Miss Gwen Donley acting as accompanist.

E. F. Mason

The host of the evening in his speech reviewed the work and the difficulties that had been before the Commission in the past six years. In extending the banquet last night to the employees and Commissioners, Mr. Mason said he did it as a means of expressing his sincere appreciation of the way everyone had co-operated with him while he was a Commissioner. In 1921 when Mr. Mason was elected, there were many difficulties to be overcome, but the then Commissioners laid out a programme of building and extension which has practically been completed.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

In proposing the toast to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, W. H. Bradburn first congratulated the new Commissioner E. R. Shirley on his election to office, but at the same time he expressed his deep regrets at the retirement of Mr. Mason, who had been connected with the Commission for the past six years and stood behind it when it passed through very trying times. "I can only say this, that as chairman of the Commission I do not propose to give it the same time as Mr. Mason did, for he gave it fully fifty per cent of his time."

The speaker then gave a brief outline of how the waterworks department and the electric department had been joined together and administered for the citizens of Peterborough under a Utilities Commission. "In 1901 the city took over the waterworks system, and here I give great credit to the men who before that time had foresight enough to go ahead and establish a system which was a credit to them and is a credit to the city today, in its improved condition by investing their money in the enterprise. From 1901 the city appointed a waterworks commission and the first chairman was T. F. Matthews. In 1914 the government took over the Central Ontario Electric Power Commission and handed it to the Hydro-Commis-

Fortune Does Not Tempt Nun To Leave Cloister

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (United Press) — By renouncing her position as a Dominican nun, Miss Grace Minford, 43, could share in the $2,000,000 estate left by her father, the late L. W. Minford, sugar broker, his will provides.

But Miss Minford, speaking in the monastery of the Dominican sisters at Newark, N. J., said she would continue her life in cloister.

"My heavenly Father is richer than was my own father," she said, "and my reward will be far greater."

Y'S MEN HEAR SPLENDID TALK

R. F. Downey Delivers Instructive Address on True Democracy.

MANY FINE POINTS.

Democracy was the subect of a most instructive address given by R. F. Downey, County Scho l Inspector, at the regular meeting of the Y's Men's Club, held last night in the Y.M.C.A. The speaker's summing up of the rights and duties of true democracy made a most appropriate topic for the first meeting of a new year.

Democracy, he said, meant the rule of the people, rather than of the few. The Greeks had looked for a few wise men to rule, but now "Of the people, for the people, by the people" is a popular election cry, although such government might mean mob rule or license. A better definition of democracy was given by the speaker as the sharing of common interests among the members of and with those outside the association. This, he said, depended on how many were the interests shared and how free and full was the inter-play.

True democracy, he continued, would be for every man of the club to be willing to help his brother, even at the price of some sacrifice, and to be glad when he succeeded. The kernel of democracy came out of Christian service. Christ told His disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel. This did not mean that they should all be orators, but that some should preach Him through their lives.

To find out what one is best fitted for and to have the opportunity to do it had been described as the basis of happiness, said the speaker, and democracy should develop its members to do what they are fitted for. Each in this way would render the kind and quality of service that his gifts fitted him to do, "from each according to his power, and to each according to his need."

Education, to improve upon a man's original endowment so that he could do better was one means of advancing democracy. Not all men are fitted for the same things, but there was room at the top. Education does not necessarily mean collegiate or university training, but helping a man grow to do his best work.

Canada has, he said, free education, responsible government, the franchise for all, a reasonably enlight-

BORAH OPPOSES MARINE LANDING IN NICARAGUA

United States Has No Justification For Intervention, He Declares.

CALLS ON COOLIDGE.

Kellogg Says Lives and Property of Citizens Endangered.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—The United States has "no business in the world in Nicaragua," said Senator Borah, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, following a conference with President Coolidge.

Senator Borah declared he had been given no proof that United States lives or property were so imperilled in Nicargua as to remotely justify "intervention" by the United States.

Secretary Kellogg, defending the administration's policy, said that factional fighting where the lives and property of United States citizens exist must be stopped as the best way of protecting those interests. It was with such an end that neutral zones were established by Admiral Latimer, said Mr. Kellogg. Taking cognizance of the statement by Senator Borah that Mexican-recognized Sacasa government has more claim to constitutionality than the Diaz government accorded recognition by Washington, Mr. Kellogg declared Diaz had been lawfully chosen president at the recent election. Asked whether Mexico was not acting within her rights as a sovereign nation in supplying arms to the Sacasa faction, Secretary Kellogg replied it was an act of unfriendliness to a presumably friendly country to provide armament to a revolutionary party.

BRITISH OUTLOOK AT HANKOW IS BECOMING GRAVE

Naval and Civil Authorities Straining Every Effort To Avert Clashes.

POLICE DISARMED.

LONDON, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—For the first time since its creation as a little English city on the Yangtse River in 1861, Hankow appears to be slipping from British control into the grip of the Chinese nationalists. After a night of unrelaxed tension, the outgrowth of the anti-British activities in the Yangtse River region, all the British women and children in Hankow were taken aboard vessels for Shanghai, while the men of the British concession were concentrated in two buildings.

Late despatches from the Hankow district indicate that the situation continues most grave, with the local British naval and civil authorities straining every effort to avert clashes and yielding to the Chinese to an extent which a few years ago would not have been dreamed of—all because it is realized that the smallest provocative spark might start a blaze of uncontrollable nationalist disorder.

Following upon the action of the British in withdrawing their marines on Tuesday, all the volunteer police forces have been disarmed and the Chinese population left free to circulate at will in the British quarter. The British are replying on the pledge of Eugene Chen, the Cantonese Foreign Minister, of full responsibility for law and order within the concession. Chen has insisted that the Cantonese Militforces will be able to maintain order in the district which the British policed until a few days ago provided the Chinese are not antagonized.

All business in Hankow is at a standstill, the voluntary military organizations of the British community have been taken aboard British warships in the river, and British subjects have been warned not to venture on the streets. Meanwhile the nationalists are tightening their control. British flags on the municipal building have been replaced by the Cantonese emblem, and all other Union Jacks have been hauled down. Other reports reaching London are that the streets are placarded with signs exhorting the natives to "crush British Imperialism."

The news came to official quarters in London last night that Chen "tendered profound apologies to the British Consul for the desecration by a mob of the British war memorial," and that he said that he woud undertake to repair the damage to the stone facing of the memorial.

This is in line with the British belief that Chen will do everything in his power to carry out his pledges.

Behind the scenes, however, extremist agitators are trying to force the fighting by such means as the demands on the British Consul, drawn up by representatives of laborers, farmers, merchants, students and soldiers of Hankow, for presentation through the Cantonese Government. These demands include an indemnity for Chinese alleged to have been killed or wounded in Monday's disturbances, withdrawal of the British gunboats and an apology to the Chinese Government.

The demands were couched in the form of an ultimatum, insisting on compliance within 72 hours. While some press reports give no indication whether these demands have the approval of the Cantonese authorities, others announce that the demands are already in the hands of the British Consulate, having been presented without awaiting the Government's approval.

The whole British effort at Hankow, as interpreted here, is aimed at avoiding fighting with the Chinese such as occurred in Canton in 1925 and in Wanhsien in 1926. British officials declare they have not the slightest intention of completely surrendering British rights in the concession district, which were granted in perpetuity, but, in view of the recently declared policy of conciliation toward China, local British interests in Hankow must be sacrificed temporarily until some recognized unified authority asserts itself in China and settles all the outstanding problems with the foreign powers.

TO PROBE GOULD BRIBERY CHARGE

Final Hearing From Both Sides Before Committee To-day.

DISREGARDS MOTION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(Canadian Press.)— Senator Gould, republican, Maine. lost his fight to prevent an investigation of bribery charges against him yesterday when a senate elections sub-committee decided to go forward with an inquiry.

The committee disregarded the motion to dismiss the case for lack of jurisdiction offered by counsel for the Maine senator, but declined to pass formally on the merits of the motion.

Both sides were ordered to be prepared to present evidence today when the committee hopes to complete its hearing, as only a few witnesses have been summoned.

At the conclusion of the inquiry, the sub-committee plans to lay all of the evidence and the motion to dismiss before the full committee for action.

The past two days have been spent in argument by Gould's counsel and Senator Walsh, Democratic Montana, who proposed the inquiry on the constitutional authority of the senate to expel or exclude anyone for an alleged offense committed a long time prior to his election.

The defence attorneys took the position that even if Senator Gould were found guilty of bribing to obtain a railroad contract as has been charged, the senate was without authority to expel him.

Senator Walsh, however, contended that the Senate could expel a member or exclude an applicant for any offence committed at any time if it felt such procedure justified.

POLL TAX CASES HEARD.

Several North Monaghan Residents Up For Non-Payment.

A number of residents of North Monaghan were before the Police Magistrate, O A. Langley, Esq., on Thursday afternoon at the Court House charged with the non-payment of their statute labor tax, generally called the poll tax.

On payment of the poll tax and costs incurred two of the charges were dropped and in one other case the defendant pleaded guilty and the case was enlarged for one week to enable him to raise the amount of the fine, $5.00, and the Court costs, and in one other case the case was enlarged for one week on the promise of the defendant to settle the claim and costs in the meantime. It was apparent that the township authorities are prepared to take vigorous action against delinquents.

DOMINION SOON WILL PAY FIRST OF WAR CLAIMS

Adjudication Under the Dawes Plan To End in Month.

OVER 2,000 CLAIMS.

Canada Steamship Lines Ask Reparation For Boats Lost.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—The adjudication of claims by Canadians against Canada's share of German reparations received under the Dawes plan is not likely to be finished for another month, but legislation is being drafted for the coming session to authorize payment of about 1,500 of the claims made.

More than 2,000 claims are in and almost 1,500 judgments have been rendered. When they are ready legislation has to be passed authorizing the Auditor-General to make the payments allotted. Until the report is presented to the Government, officials of the State Department decline to discuss the claims, but it is stated that one of them which has been given favorable consideration is for more than $2,000,000. How much of the money claimed will be paid is not known, but it cannot all be paid at once, as the funds Canada has received to date do not total more than $2,500,000. It may be that all the claims will be paid in installments, or that the Government will decide that a certain percentage of the money on hand will go to each claimant, with the possibility of further payments and their size depending on how much more Canada gets from reparations.

C. S. L. Claim.

It is stated that a big claim is from the Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, and covers boats lost through enemy action which were not insured. The Government took over a number of C.S.L. boats from the lakes and they were not insured for the war services for which they were used.

HASTINGS FARMER LOSES FINE BARN

Harry Lamey Sustains Heavy Loss By Fire—Loses Animals and Crop.

HASTINGS, Jan. 7. — A fire of unknown origin startled neighbors of Harry Lorney on the Cobourg Road on Thursday morning. Just about daybreak neighbors noticed a blaze at Mr. Lorney's barn and aroused him by telephone.

Mr. Lorney was ignorant of the fire until informed by the neighbors.

The barn was a complete loss, including feed and grain. The stables were exceptionally fine ones, being fitted up with steel stanchions and water supply. The hen-house was also fitted up with feeding and watering troughs. Cattle, horses, machinery and fowl were lost on account of the start the blaze had before help could be summoned.

The pig pen was the only building that was not destroyed.

Insurance on the barns, etc., will not cover the loss.

OBITUARY.

MISS AMANDA STONE

NORHAM, Jan. 7.—Miss Amanda Stone, who was removed to Cobourg about ten days previous to her death, passed away in the hospital on Saturday evening after an illness of over two months. A memorial service was held in Cobourg on Monday afternoon after which her remains were placed in the vault at Cobourg to await interment in Stone's cemetry, a mile south of here, in the spring. Miss Stone was in her 86th year, and had spent the most of her life quietly in this vicinity where she was born. She leaves to mourn her loss, two sisters, Mrs. Davieson, of Campbellford, who is spending the winter with her daughter in Peterboro, and Miss Eliza Stone, of this village.

MRS. JESSIE FOWLER.

The death occurred at half-past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the residence of her nephew, R. T. Lillico, Provincial Highway, of Mrs. Jessie Lillico, widow of William Fowler, in her eighty-fifth year.

She was the daughter of the late Archibald Lillico, North Monaghan, and was the last surviving member of that family—one of the pioneer families of the township.

The funeral, which will be conducted by Rev. J. W. Gordon, of St. Andrew's Church, of which she was one of the oldest members, also being an honorary member of the W.F.M.S., will take place from the above residence at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

sion to operate. It then became necessary for the citizens to elect a Utilities Commission."

"The Ontario Hydro Commission a policy." Premier Ferguson has reached an agreement with the Province of Quebec as to the developing of water-power on the Ottawa River.

"The Ontario Commission has to look years ahead," explained the Commissioner, "to see where she is going to get her electricity from, and it is no easy task to develop electricity for this rapidly growing province, as today Hydro is serving 78 per cent of the population of Ontario. Farmers are able to secure power perhaps not at the same price as paid in Toronto or Peterborough because the cost of transmission is greater, but power is given to the people at cost plus transmission. The Hydro has no money for it is just the servant of the people."

In closing, the Commissioner said he wanted to say to the citizens of Peterborough, that the power development in this city had required much thinking and hard work, there was no sinking fund and the Commissioners as the people's managers and trustees had to provide such. People of Peterborough need have no fear, but qualified his statement and added except the street railway which is a difficulty to be met and will take business men to meet this problem. The financial statement of the Peterborough Utilities Commission is a complete answer to those who have been criticizing the work which has been done and the Peterborough Commission is one of the best managed commissions in the province."

G. S. Matthews

In proposing the toast to the City Council and Mayor, G. S. Matthews said he believed in giving credit where it was due, and thought Peterborough is fortunate in having a Mayor, Council and City Clerk like the ones they have. I can assure Mr. Mayor that the members of the Utilities Commission are behind the city in their work.

Mayor Holloway

Dr. Holloway, in replying, said he had watched Mr. Mason in his work and I agree with Mr. Maguire that he has been a very faithful servant and it was through the efforts of Mr. Mason and Mr. Hicks that this city was saved $30,000 when the filtration plant was built. His Worship then quoted figures to show that the tax rate in this city was considerably lower than in other cities and in the whole province this city was the fifth lowest.

For every dollar which the City Council spends it has no direct control over 69.6 cents, and a partial control over 30.4 cents. In the last year the Utilities Commission handed a sum of $9,000 to the City Council when the rates were being struck and towards the end of the year they financed a triple pumper.

S. R. Armstrong

The secretary of the Commission, S. R. Armstrong, proposed the toast to the Utilities Commission present, past, and future. He spoke of the men who had given many years service to the Commission, mentioning E. H. D. Hall, the solicitor, who was connected with the company which supplied water to the Town of Peterborough before the water department was taken over. James Curvin, who has been with the waterworks department since 1885 and Johntson Greer, who has been an employee for over 40 years.

"We all regret Mr. Mason has left the Commission, but he has left it in a much better position than he found it. In 1902 the waterworks department was valued at $230,000; today it is 1,200,000, and in 1914 $154,000 was paid for the electric department, and today it is valued at $600,000. The revenue has increased accordingly and expenses have greatly increased, but there has been no increase in rates since 1914. The waterworks and filtration plant have been great achievements.

E. R. Shirley

Mr. Mason, in introducing Mr. Shirley, said he was a man of experience who should be an inspiration to the other commissioners in their work.

"It has been a real inspiration tonight to hear the strong address of the chairman of the Utilities Commission, and Mr. Maguire, and as citizens of Peterborough and the Province of Ontario we ought to be proud of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and in this we must pay tribute to the memory of the late Sir Adam Beck," said Mr. Shirley.

Ross Dobbin, the engineer, proposed the toast to the ladies, and Robert Hicks followed with one to the host and hostess of the evening. "Mr. Maguire is an enthusiast, and let me say to the new commissioners that they be enthusiasts if they wish the work of the commission to be a success," said Mr Hicks.

is over us and all our programme must be submitted to it, and they strike the rate, and today in this city we have saved over $2,000,000 to the citizens of Peterborough, because we are giving light and power at cost.

Alfred Maguire

"I want to pay tribute tonight to the services of the gentlemen who have been responsible in giving to the citizens of Peterborough that service which through their foresight the citizens of this city have today. It was Mason, Bradburn, Hicks and Matthews who had a vision of a big thing and something that was going to benefit this city when they helped to develop Hydro in this city," said Mr. Maguire.

The speaker told about the heavy uphill work which Sir Adam Beck had in trying to put Hydro across in this province. He might have become discouraged, but he believed he had a vision and that in it was something for the people of Ontario. "If there is anything that pleases me it is to meet public-minded citizens like Mr. Mason, who have given their all for the service of their city."

The speaker then told about the development of the Hydro in this province from the small beginning of eleven municipalities in 1911 to 470 today using Hydro. Today there is an investment of $270,000,000 millions and over $47,000,000 in reserve. Four years ago the City of Fort William threatened to cut the Hydro poles down if they were run into that city, but just a few months ago that city was connected up with the Hydro-Electric Power of Ontario.

Referring to Eastern Ontario, Mr. Maguire said, "The Commission hope within a very short time to announce Prof. Nikiforov Says Russia in Centre of Volcanic Action.

AT ANY TIME.

LENINGRAD, Russia, Jan. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—The prediction that a far more terrible earthquake than that which devastated Armenia last May, may occur there at any time, was made yesterday by Russia's greatest seismologist, Prof. Nikiforov.

The professor said that Leninakan, centre of the last violent disturbance, was in a vast, amphitheatre of volcanic action, that gigantic layers had been loosened and that the subterranean rock and earth, seeking to find a level, would cause convulsions for months.

No less than 53 shocks have been recorded in Armenia since November 22, keeping the population and the American Near East relief in a state of alarm.

If we the sheets and leaves could turn with care,
Of Him who it corrects, and did it frame
We clear might read the art and wisdom rare:

Find out His power which wildest powers do tame,
His providence extending everywhere,

But silly we, like foolish children, rest
Well pleased with color'd vellum leaves of gold,
Fair dangling ribbands, leaving what is best,

Or if by chance we stray our minds on aught,
It is some picture on the margin wrought

JAPAN AGAINST BRITISH POLICY IN THE ORIENT

Tokio Disagrees With London Memorandum Submitted to the Powers.

SEEK PLUNDER.

Japanese Declare Time Unfavorable For Changes To Be Made.

LONDON, Jan. 7. — Japan has taken a definite attitude against Great Britain's Chinese policy as outlined in the British memorandum recently submitted to the powers, according to reliable information given the British United Press yesterday morning.

Although no notices have as yet been received from Tokio it is learned that diplomatic conversations have taken place, news of which has reached London.

The opinion of the Japanese government is said to be that this is not the time to make any change in the rights of foreigners residing in China, either as regards concessions or judicial right. Neither is the collection of surtaxes by the Chinese regarded favorably, and the belief in Tokio is that this would not be a beneficial step. It is urged that no one knows to what purpose the revenue derived from the levy of these taxes will be devoted and the argument is advanced that the money may only prove plunder for the rival war lords and the cause of their making greater and more extortionate demands.

Favorable to Japan.

Strangely enough there is no such hostility against the Japanese living in China as there is against the British. One reason advanced for this is that British interests in China are are greater, and the wealth of Britishers considerably more, while the Russian propaganda, which was especially meant to stir up ill-feeling towards the British, and which has been regarded as largely responsible for the present grave situation in Hankow was very favorable to the Japanese interests.

It is also considered likely that the Cantonese leaders fear that if they incite an anti-Japanese campaign, Japan will immediately adopt the strongest methods of reprisal, whereas they feel pretty certain that Great Britain's policy is almost surely to be less severe and more liberal in outlook because of the vast British interests involved.

PRISON WARDEN DEFIES POLICE

GUARD DOORS.

CANON CITY, Col., Jan. 7. — (United Press).—Orders to fire on any person attempting to force a way into the state prison have been issued by Warden Thomas J. Tyman it was revealed yesterday.

The warden's order came after Governor C. J. Morley had ordered him removed from office on charges of misconduct and neglect of duty, cruel and inhuman treatment of prisoners, making false reports of prison expenses and of an offence against a woman.

Guards were keeping a strict watch at the prison and machine guns have been trained on all doors.

ened electorate, no class distinctions, and adherence to Christian principles. She needed a purged press—the press is a fine agency, but should be more careful of what it publishes, just as there should be more care taken of the moving pictures which the children are allowed to see—greater tolerance and better national understanding. All should get an opportunity for education, not harmoniously as was the ideal of former days, but to repress evil instincts and to develop good instincts. The provision of milk for undernourished children and of medical and dental inspection was characterized by the speaker as among the greatest steps taken in Peterborough in making education more attainable and fitting the pupils better for their work.

President Roy White was in the chair and tendered the thanks of the club, moved by Will Giles, to the speaker.

Godiva's Ride In Vain Old Home Is To Be Sold

LONDON, Jan. 7 (Associated Press).—The old home town of Lady Godiva, Saxon beauty who, according to legend, rode horseback through the streets of Coventry clad only in a wealth of unbobbed hair to relieve the villagers of a burdensome tax, is to be sold at public auction this month.

The village is Kings Bromley, halfway between Rugeley and Lichfield, Warwickshire. The sale marks the passing of another ancient landed estate of England. Included in the sale are the Georgian manor house, occupied by the present owners, the Lane family, for more than 100 years; 13 farms, totalling 2,300 acres, 27 houses and the village inn.

WARKWORTH FIRE BRIGADE MEETING

W. J. Harper Takes Place of A. Phillips as Fire Chief.

WARKWORTH, Jan. 7.— A meeting of the fire brigade was held in the fire hall on Wednesday evening when most of the members were present.

J. F. Dingman was elected secretary-treasurer. W. J. Harper was appointed fire chief in place of A. Phillips who refused to act. Several new members were added to the list.

It was decided to get some new equipment which is needed to make the outfit more efficient. In order to raise money for the new equipment it was decided to put on movie shows during the winter. Fire drill will be given ocasionally. A caretaker has been appointed to look after the hall.

ST. JOHN'S W.M.S.

Regular Meeting Held and Routine Business Discussed.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 7.—The regular meeting of the W.M.S. of St. John's church held their monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon in the Sunday school room. The president, Mrs. Haig, presided over the meeting. After the usual business matters were discussed and reports given, Mrs. Haig read the Scripture lesson.

Interesting readings were given by Mrs. A. L. Malcolm and Mrs. J. P. Haig. Mrs R. W. Scott gave an instructive synopsis of the fourth chapter of the study book, "New Days in Old India."

The ladies discussed different ways and means of raising money. They decided to have a Valentine Tea on Feb. 15th, and another on St. Patricks evening, March 17th.

The meeting was brought to a close by all singing the Doxology. About thirty-five were present.

ENGLISH MUST PRESERVE PEACE DECLARES BRUCE

BRITAIN SHOWS WAY.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—It is up to the English-speaking people of the world to preserve peace, and they must band together to do it. This was the declaration of Rt. Hon. Stanley M. Bruce, Prime Minister of Australia, in his first address here, made before the English-speaking union at a luncheon given in his honor. About a thousand of Chicago's most prominent citizens attended.

Premier Bruce said he was proud to speak before the organization because they were formed for the purpose of promoting understanding.

"The war, which it was hoped would bring it about, is not eight years behind us and it seems to have made us even more estranged than before instead of one grand union," he said.

"The great economic crisis is making people desperate in many countries and causing them to make ungenerous statements towards both of our countries, but especially Great Britain. Most of these statements show intolerance and ill-feeling. The one hope against them is a bulwark of understanding between the English-speaking countries.

Britain is anxious to promote this, as may be shown by the gesture of friendship made in allowing the United States a twelve-mile limit to enforce the liquor laws more effectively. England herself did not take this limit, holding to the old three-mile limit, which the British citizen holds almost sacred. For we of the British race recognize the vital necessity that the best possible relations exist between the two countries.

"We are doing all we can to promote it and expect the same from you."

After the luncheon the Prime Minister and his wife took an informal tour through the city. Last night he addressed the Industrial Relations Club at the Blackstone Hotel at supper. He left for Winnipeg at midnight.

HONEYMOON ENDS IN JAIL

FROM CANADA.

DETROIT, Jan. 7.— Mrs. Lydia Hood, aged 25, assistant dietitian at the Detroit General Hospital, was arrested yesterday, charged with violating United States Federal immigration laws by smuggling her husband into this country. Mrs. Hood, a bride of less than a week, was taken to the Women's Detention Home. Her husband, who was arrested with her at their home at 4041 Di Avenue, was taken to police headquarters. Police are also holding Margaret Emerson, aged 29, of 8938 North Clarendon Avenue, pending investigation that she was smugled into the United States three years ago by Mrs. Hood.

Jealousy on the part of some one who had heard of her marriage on New Year's Day to Hood was responsible for the arrests, Mrs. Hood charges. "This is a fine way to end our honeymoon," she sobbed as she was being taken to the Detention Home.

Police say that they received word from Hamilton that Hood entered the United States illegally. They charge that Mrs. Hood obtained a certificate saying Hood was employed in Detroit, and that he crossed the river with her, presenting this certificate.

RISE UP, JUPITER

Rise up, Jupiter Jeremiah Jones,
Stop dat snufflin' an' quit dem groans.
Mawnin's purty an' de sky's plumb blue,
Ev'rything's stirrin' 'round hyar but you.
Dar's sissage sizzlin' an' dar's coffee hot,
You's gwine to git up if you is nor not.
An' Ah mean right now an' Ah don't mean noon;
Rise up, Jupiter, an' rise up soon.

Rise up, Jupiter, de day's done come.
Some kin slumbahs, but you ain't some.
For Sunday's ovah, an' your Sunday pants

But your lovin' wife, you perhaps recalls,
Has bought you some nice new ovah-halls.
Ah want some wood, an' Ah want it on de run,
So rise up, Jupiter, dar's a wash to be done.

Rise up, Jupiter Jeremiah Jones,
Stop dat snufflin' an' quit dem moans.
Dat rollin' ovah ain't a-gwine to do.
It's your lovin' wife, an' Ah speaks to you.
So rise up, Jupiter, an' git some wood,
Or Ah'm gwine to rise you an' rise you good.
Put on your slippahs an' git on your clo'es;
Rise up, Jupiter—an' then stay rose!

IS THE WHITE RACE DOOMED?

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

There are many keen and brilliant minds trying at the present time to read the riddle of the future. Owing to the last war, and its consequences, there was never a period of history when there was so much uncertainty as to what is in store for mankind in the plot of fate.

What is going to happen to us all during the next fifty years, to say nothing of the next hundred and the next thousand? Most of us would answer that question by saying no mortal man can tell.

But there are prophets about who are bold enough to forecast the future, and who base their prophecies not on any mystical gifts but upon what they believe to be a scientific analysis of present conditions, which must, they say, lead to inevitable results.

They are, unfortunately, prophets of pessimism, and if we believe what they say, fate has some very unpleasant history to unfold in the future history of mankind.

During the past week I have been reading two books which sum up this philosophy of pessimism that has caught hold of many advanced thinkers of today. One in "The Origins of the Next War," by John Bakeless; the other, "Today and Tomorrow," by J. H. Curle.

Mr. Bakeless, who is an American writer of great distinction, has made a most careful and scientific study of the social, political and racial problems now lying beneath the surface of human life, and his conclusions are, to say the least, alarming.

He asserts that the last war decided nothing, and settled nothing. He is convinced that the same causes which led to that monstrous conflict are existing in more dangerous forms to produce another world explosion far worse than in 1914. In his opinion, the League of Nations and all talk about "The Spirit of Locarno," and all the efforts of sentimental pacifists will be made a mockery by racial and economic struggles which will be decided by ordeal of battle.

Owing to the increase of populations in various lands, competition for the empty spaces of the earth and the raw materials of industry will become intensified. The instincts of race and its natural ambitions for self-preservation and development are stronger than before the last war.

Mr. Bakeless gives us a map with the danger spots marked. They lie about Japan and a chain of islands leading to Australia. They are scattered over Europe, where the old Pan-Slav movement is stirring again, and where France, with a dwindling population, has made temporary alliances with weak States to hold back a growing Germany which must find more elbow room and capture new markets for her manufactured goods.

These danger posts are all along the Mediterranean, where Great Britain holds a series of strategic bases which cut across the inflamed ambitions of Italy, and threaten the free passage of a French native army from North Africa. There are hundreds of these signposts of danger on the map of the world today which may lead to the Armageddon of tomorrow.

In the opinion of this writer, Mr. John Bakeless, nothing has been altered in the mentality of peoples or in the methods of statesmanship. Old national prides, the arrogance of new dictators like Mussolini playing on those prides, and, above all, the desperate urge of commercial competition are at the present time preparing for a new war more frightful than the last.

Well, that is a gloomy outlook, if true.

But the second prophet, whose work I have been reading, plunges even deeper into pessimism.

In "Today and Tomorrow," by J. H. Curle, the writer forecasts the time when the white races of the world will have to put up a desperate fight for preservation against the Asiatics and coloured peoples.

At the present time, the white races, he thinks, are just playing for their own downfall by ignoring certain weakness which are sapping their mental and physical health.

One of these weaknesses is what he calls "the make-believe of democracy," which takes the government and discipline of peoples out of the hands of those who have most knowledge and strongest character.

It delivers a nation into the power of half-educated folk who get most of their ideas from a cheap Press. They become weak-kneed Socialists, sentimental Pacifists and Labour agitators, and are jealous of all that is superior to themselves, so that their main idea of progress is to pull down what has been strongly built by wiser men.

Destroying the White Races.

Worst of all, Mr. Curle sees the stamina of the white race in many countries weakened, poisoned and ultimately destroyed by "breeding from the unfit."

Modern science keeps alive the invalids, the imbeciles, the half-witted, the hereditary weaklings who produce more children than the intellectuals and the well-bred. Modern sentimentality gives the dole and other forms of relief to those who would otherwise die because they won't or can't work. Women have been allowed to legislate for men and to sap the virility and philosophy of the old manruled States.

The masses (he says) can neither govern nor choose wisely those who can. The glib talked is more and more rising to power. As the masses gather force, so does the quality of men they elect steadily decline.

The struggle between Capital and Labour leading to civil war will eventually lead to new wars between European States. So the progress of weakness goes on among the white races, while all the time the coloured races are waiting and watching, masking their hatred, but feeding on it.

The time is nearing (says Mr. Curle) when the masks will be off, when we shall see the whole of Asia, and, it may be, all Africa as well, try to throw off white domination and come near succeeding. How democracy based on the opinions and the prejudices of the ignorant masses is going to handle an era such as this I really can't know.

One cannot put all that on one side with a shrug of the shoulders as the fantastic raving of morbid minds. This philosophy of pessimism is not without some foundation of truth and fact.

But where I differ from these pessimistic prophets is in the question of democracy and its alleged weaknesses. I have very little patience with that stuff about "breeding from the unfit." It is true that slums produce a C3 class, but the remedy is not to prevent slum people from having children, but to wipe out the slums.

It is true that our present system of education has produced a large number of people who get most of their ideas from bad novels and the baser kind of newspapers, but the cure is not to abolish education but to improve it; not to destroy the liberty of democracy, but to ennoble it by a higher standard of character and thought.

Democracy has its weaknesses and its follies, but dictatorship and autocracy produce more immediate dangers. The "clean sword" of Mussolini is uncomfortably like the "shining sword" of Kaiser Wilhelm.

Everywhere in the world, so far as I know it, the common folk want peace and security for their work and homes.

They may be led away by passion, the instincts of nationality and racial urge may be too strong for them; they may be poor puppets in the hand of destiny working again towards some mighty struggle, but at least the only chance I see of preventing or postponing these evils is by the gradual development of education and wisdom among the masses.

They will no longer breed from the unfit because they have attained a decent standard of life and will not allow their children to be used as gun fodder for the ambition of autocrats, or the folly of statesmen, or some point of national pride, or some sinister claim upon coloured peoples desiring their own liberty and way of life.

How to Play BRIDGE

A new series of lessons by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 10

One thing that players should always strive to retain, is an open mind on all questions. Don't allow yourself to become so sure of your own skill that you aren't willing to consider a good suggestion from another. On the other hand, don't be too willing to follow another's lead. Learn to consider both points of view, your own and the other fellow's, and then draw your own conclusions. An open mind is a great asset, as valuable at the auction table as everywhere else. The point was well illustrated the other night and by the following hand:

	Hearts — 9, 4 Clubs — 9, 8, 7, 3, 2 Diamonds — 7 Spades — Q, J, 9, 5, 2
Hearts — K, J, 7, 6, 2 Clubs — A, Q, 4 Diamonds — K, J, 10, 8, 5 Spades — none	Y A B Z	Hearts — A, 10, 8, 3 Clubs — 10 Diamonds — Q, 9, 6, 4, 2 Spades — 7, 6, 4
	Hearts — Q, 5 Clubs — K, J, 6, 5 Diamonds — A, 3 Spades — A, K, 10, 8, 3

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one spade and A doubled. Y realised that his hand was worthless except at spades, so he bid four spades over the double. All passed, A opened the jack of diamonds and Y-Z lost their contract by one trick. After the hand was over, A said to his partner: "It's too bad you didn't get a chance to bid, partner," and the latter replied: "With a two suiter, you made a big mistake in doubling one spade. With the type hand you held, you should have first bid the heart suit and then, if overbid, you should have bid the diamonds. We had a game in either hearts or diamonds so your bad double cost us the rubber." A was very much taken aback for he had never realized that he shouldn't double when holding a two suiter. However, he showed the proper spirit, for he replied to his partner: "I am very sorry but I never looked at it in that light. I will try it out and see how your suggestion works out." That is an illustration of the "open mind." If a new point is brought up, think it over and give it a trial. You can improve your game many times by this method and never lose, even when you try out a theory and later reject it. It is a good common sense method from any angle.

Answer to Problem No. 11

Hearts — 4
Clubs — J, 10, 8
Diamonds — A, J, 9, 8, 4, 2
Spades — J, 10, 4

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — 10, 7.
Clubs — A, Q, 9, 7, 4
Diamonds — K, Q, 10
Spades — Q, 9, 8

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one club, A three hearts, Y four clubs and B four hearts. Z bid five clubs, and A and Y passed and B doubled. All passed, A opened the king of hearts and all followed. A then led the trey of diamonds. How should Z plan the play of the hand? Z should win the trick in dummy with the jack of diamonds and then should lead the jack of clubs. If B has the king of clubs as his double indicates, Z should just make his contract. Please note that if Z wins the trick in his own hand and trumps a heart in dummy, he cannot now make his contract if B has four clubs to the king. Work this out for practice, giving B four clubs to the king. It is a pretty example of deciding which hand should be in the lead to accomplish a given result. When playing with the dummy, take your time and figure out carefully in advance which hand you want in the lead and why.

Answer to Problem No. 12

Hearts — A, 3, 2
Clubs — 10, 9, 4
Diamonds — K, Q, 10, 9, 6, 3

A B
Z

Hearts — J, 7, 6, 5, 4
Clubs — A, Q, 6, 2
Diamonds — A
Spades — K, 7, 3

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one club, A one spade, Y two diamonds and B passed. Z bid two hearts and all passed. A opened the deuce of diamonds and Z won the trick with the ace. He now led the four of hearts and allowed B to win the trick with the nine of hearts. B now led the seven of diamonds. What should Z play and how should he plan the play of the hand? Z should discard a club for A's diamond lead is a marked singleton. A will be forced to trump and now no matter what he leads, Z is in a strong position provided A has the ace of spades which his bid indicates probably is in his hand. If he leads the spade ace, Z must win the next trick, no matter what he leads. Z's play of this hand is to drop the remaining hearts by lead of his ace and then set up dummy's diamonds. He must keep his spades so that if the hearts do drop, he can trump a spade in dummy and thus have a re-entry for his diamond suit. Note that the discard of a spade at trick three, instead of a club, will enable A-B to save game if A will lead the ace of spades and a low spade after trumping the diamond. Play this out for practice. This hand is an excellent example of figuring out which hand you want in the lead and then providing means for obtaining that result. A's hand was as follows:

Hearts — Q, 10, 8
Clubs — K, J, 8
Diamonds — 2
Spades — A, 10, 9, 8, 4, 3

FRIDAY, JAN. 7, 1927.

. . . BEARER OF INTELLIGENCE . . . DISPELLER OF IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE . . . A LIGHT SHINING INTO ALL DARK PLACES.

GOOD WORK APPRECIATED.

With the return of four members of last year's council and of Malcolm McIntyre, a former alderman, this year's city board of managers is peculiarly fitted to deal with civic business and problems.

It is generally admitted that the council of 1926 set a high standard in the business-like manner in which its affairs were dealt with during the year.

There was a minimum of wasted time in council deliberations, the aldermen transacted their business with commendable dispatch and lack of bickering over trivial matters and there was a business-like atmosphere about the council meetings that was noticeable at all times.

On the whole last year's council had an efficient and successful year and with so much seasoned material still at the service of the city this year's activities can be looked forward to with a good deal of confidence.

MR. MARSHALL'S CLAIMS.

The strong boom that has been launched in favour of the appointment of John R. Marshall to the Council to complete the term of ex-Aldermen Turner is easily justified.

In the first place, it is recognized that Mr. Marshall's business ability and experience would be valuable in the Council's deliberations, and secondly, his appointment would make amends gracefully for the fact that last year when a similar situation was under consideration Mr. Marshall, although the highest of the defeated candidates, was passed over in favour of N. E. Phelan.

What the Council will do in this case is a matter which the Aldermen must decide for themselves.

They need not, of course, consider the claims of either Mr. Marshall or ex-Ald. Stocker to the position, if they feel that there is someone else who might be of more service to the city.

The fact, however, that Mr. Marshall polled a vote of over 2,100 at the 1926 elections and that in spite of this fact the appointment was not given to him, is regarded by many citizens as sufficient justification for his being selected by the Council to fill the present vacancy.

FLIRTING WITH DEATH.

The spectacular accident yesterday, in which one of the motor trucks of the fire department somersaulted off the Brock street bridge, injuring two firemen, following as it did the gassing of five members of the department last week, serves to call public attention to something that is often overlooked.

True, there are hours in which time hangs heavily and the firemen seem to have an easy existence.

But when the alarm sounds and the services of the department are needed, it is a different story.

From the moment the apparatus leaves the hall, until it is back again, the lives of the firemen may be in danger.

In the actual getting to the fire there is a very present element of risk as the motor trucks speed over city streets at breakneck speed.

A mechanical defect, a slight slip on the part of the driver, carelessness by others on the street, skidding on icy roads, any one of these causes may mean a disastrous accident.

And when the scene of the fire is reached there are fresh perils, the menace of smoke and gas, danger of a floor or a wall collapsing, half a dozen other hazards that the firemen must accept as part of his job.

Firemen may have periods of leisure, but they make up for them in the dangers they face as they answer the city's call for help.

IMPORTANT LEGISLATION.

The new legislation in regard to motor traffic that is to be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature is likely to meet with the approval of most motorists, if it is not received with unanimous endorsation elsewhere.

The proposal to increase the speed limit on the highways to thirty-five miles an hour has long been foreshadowed.

It has been advocated by the majority of motorists, who maintain that this rate of speed on a good road where the traffic is not unduly crowded is perfectly reasonable and safe, and who ask pertinently what is the use of improving transportation facilities if the public is not given an opportunity of utilizing them.

As a matter of fact, the present limit of twenty-five miles an hour has been disregarded by the majority of drivers on the highways, and if all those who have violated the regulations could have been detected and prosecuted the list of convictions would have closely resembled the list of license-holders in the Province.

A Provincial regulation to compel all vehicles travelling at night to carry lights is very much overdue.

Hostility to this proposal among Ontario farmers has hitherto caused the Government to refrain from compulsory legislation covering this matter, but the administration has at last decided that the regulation is necessary in the interest of public safety.

As to the designation of all Provincial highways as "stop" streets, compelling all drivers to bring their cars to a full stop before entering upon such highways, this provision should receive the endorsation of the Legislature.

It is manifestly a contribution to safer conditions on the highways.

GOOD TEMPERANCE AGENTS.

Dominion statistics show that last year, even with the help of thirsty United States tourists, there were consumed in Canada slightly less than one-fourth of the spirituous liquors consumed in 1914 before the war, says The Ottawa Journal. The Dominion statistician does not point out that the cost of spirituous liquors to consumers is now roughly about four times as great as in 1914. A large proportion of the additional cost goes into the Federal and Provincial exchequers. In the days of "five-cent whiskey" in the seventies Canadians, we are told by the statistician, drank slightly over one and a half gallons per head per annum, whereas now the consumption is slightly over one-quarter of a gallon—one-sixth. The moral seems to be that high prices are pretty good temperance agents.

The drop of but one-quarter of one per cent. in the consumption of tobacco, despite the smuggling of large quantities of cigarettes and higher prices, shows the hold that the "weed" has on our people.

LAUGH MONTH.

January is to be Laugh Month in the United States. That, of itself, warrants a hearty guffaw. They've tried nearly everything else. There have been "Cut-your-own-hair" and "Don't-beat-your-wife" weeks. There have been "Eat-more-turnip" days and "Don't-believe-the-label" nights, and if one took the time to scrutinize the entire list one would make the discovery that an itchy palm was the common inspiration. National Laugh Month is the bright idea of the moving picture industry. There is to be a veritable flood of celluloid comedy unloosed, it seems. The basic idea of Laugh Month, we gather, is that if the moving picture people can get the populace laughing for no reason at all they will continue to be convulsed even while watching the film comedies. The sponsors might have picked out a more appropriate month. January is a month of sniffles, of howling gales and big fuel bills and only those with highly-developed bumps of humor will be able to roll up high percentage marks in the laughing contests. Christmas shopping bills will be falling due and the income tax man will send along his pretty dotted lines. There are a lot of things that our American cousins might laugh about, if those things weren't so derned serious. They might laugh, for instance, at their slap-stick courts; at machine-gun rule in Chicago; at the ease with which the bootleggers are evading the Volstead Act; at the installment collectors who are trying to catch them at home. But not one of these things is a genuine laugh subject. Laugh Month, we suppose, will be a success despite the lack of laugh material. They have the knack of putting the impossible things over on the other side of the boundary line and some day some one might have a real idea and get the people of the United States interested in something vital—like a "Respect-for-law-and-order" week, for instance.—Hamilton Spectator.

U. S. EXPORT SURPLUS SHRINKS.

United States trade returns show that the exports of the country in the ten months ending October 31 were $130,000,000 less than in the corresponding ten months of 1925, and the imports for the same period $246,000,000 higher. At this rate the export surplus will be about $180,000,000 for the year 1926, the smallest since 1896, when it stood at $103,000,000. In 1924 the export surplus was $648,862,000.

Professor Irving Fisher, the Yale economist, says this lessening balance of trade should be looked upon as healthy "because the collections of the United States as a creditor nation require imports of goods in excess of those we send to foreign countries. For in the long run they must pay chiefly in goods." This is axiomatic, but the ruling politicians in the United States do not yet confess it. The whole position of that country with respect to foreign trade has been changed by its new position as a creditor nation. The effects have been concealed by the fact that the United States is lending to Europe larger sums than she is drawing from that Continent in debt payments. But for the continuance of American loans and investments abroad on a great scale, the United States would inevitably be importing more goods than she is exporting. No customs walls would prevent an import surplus. As Professor Fisher says, collections of debt and debt interest by the United States must in the long run take the form of goods.

Great Britain as a creditor nation grasps this principle and welcomes a great import balance which represents interest on overseas investments and payment for shipping services to other countries, but our American cousins have been taught for two generations—by their politicians, not their economists—that the whole object of fiscal legislation must be an excess of exports over imports. They are not yet reconciled to the shrinkage of their export balance, and the matter has become so sentimentalized that their national pride will be hurt when the scale tips to the import side, as it must before long, except on the incredible assumption that they will go on interminably lending more to the outside world, to their debtors, than they are receiving from them. Some day they must bow to the logic of hard facts and admit that they must take payment in commodities. They will then agree to debt revision, as their economists and leaders of thought advise now, or cease trying to keep foreign goods out of the country.—London Advertiser.

It should be explained, for the benefit of other nations, points out the Globe, that the transfers being made among the officers of the Canadian navy do not mean that a demonstration of naval strength is about to take place.

The aftermath of the aldermanic elections is creating as much interest as the election itself.

Now that a speed limit of 35 miles per hour is to be authorized, the motorists who have been driving at that speed will proceed to do 45 miles per hour.

There seems to be a little difference of opinion between Mr. Risberg and other baseball celebrities as to the honesty of the game.

One advantage in having goose for dinner is that it heads off all the discussion about having white or dark meat.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—There was an improved inquiry from the United Kingdom for grain on the Montreal market yesterday and a small volume of business was worked. The trade with United States exporters was again fairly active and sales of some round lots of Manitoba Spring wheat and Canadian Western barley were made at c.i.f. prices Buffalo and Bay ports.

The demand for coarse grains was inactive but prices were unchanged.

The export trade in Spring wheat grades of flour continued active, but the local and country demand was quiet and prices were steady. The demand for Winter wheat flour was slow but prices showed no change.

The undertone to the market for all lines of millfeed was firm owing to the continued good demand. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was rather quiet, but prices ruled steady.

Owing to the lower prices ruling in the United States for strictly fresh eggs of late and the liberal offerings from that source, an easy feeling continued to prevail in the local market and the prospects are that prices will be reduced in the near future. The storage situation was fairly active and firm. The receipts were 708 cases.

The demand for potatoes showed a decided improvement and the undertone was strong with indications that prices will be higher. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of 90 lbs., while New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at $1.60 to $1.65 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.45 to $1.50 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a quiet demand. The receipts were 92 packages.

The export trade in cheese was extremely dull, but there was some demand on spot. Sales of about 1,000 boxes of Western June make No. 1 colored were made at 19c to 19 3-8c per pound, and a fair sized lot of Western August make No. 1 colored at 19 3-4c per pound, f.a.s., with current receipts quoted at 17 3-4c to 18c per pound. The receipts were 33 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Price upturns formed the rule yesterday in grain, with corn in the lead. Reports that the corn borer had been discovered in Illinois were largely responsible, and so, too, was evidence that United States wheat exporters are doing busines notwithstanding that domestic values are about world parity.

Domestic wheat both finished strongly corn 5-8 to 1 cent higher, wheat 1-8 cent to 3-4 cent up, Oats unchanged to 1-8 cents advance and provisions showing 10 to 35 cents gain.

Oats were quiet but inclined to sympathize with corn. Rye showed independent strength, ascribed to improved export demand.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.85 5-8.

Sterling cables $4.86 1-8.

ECZEMA ENDED

Madame A. Lariviere of Fall River, Mass., suffered with eczema for three years, and had treatment from several doctors, all of whom gave up the case. "Finally," she says, "I went to a specialist, which cost me another $20, but I was no better.

"A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, which I did, and for which I have ever since been thankful. I very soon felt some relief, and perseverance with Zam-Buk completely rid me of the disease."

SEVERE CUT HEALED

Mr. C. Oakley of Saskatoon, who sustained a terrible cut on his leg, says: "Had I known of Zam-Buk when the accident occurred, I could have saved myself a $40 doctor's bill! A doctor sewed up the cut and attended me for five weeks, but the wound did not heal, and he advised me to go into a hospital.

"I objected, however, and used Zam-Buk instead, and in two weeks' time was back at work."

SAVED OPERATION

"Father developed a painful sore on his face," writes Miss N. Lewis of Silver Lake, Oregon. "Numerous remedies and treatment from several doctors failed to heal it, and the doctor advised an operation. Someone advised him to first try Zam-Buk. A few applications brought relief, and continued use of Zam-Buk entirely healed the sore, saving father from an operation."

Zam-Buk is best for eczema, ringworm, salt rheum, boils, pimples, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, bruises, burns and scalds. All dealers 50c box.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

"No word is the exact equivalent of any other word, as no tool is exactly the same as any other tool. Take such commonplace tools as scissors and shears. All scissors cut by similar motion. It may be possible to cut paper with a tailor's shears and cut clothing with a plumber's shears, but no skilled workman would attempt to do two different jobs with the same pair of shears," says the New York "Evening Mail."

"A man or a woman should take as much pains in the choice and use of words as a skilled workman in the choice and use of shears, saws, chisels, augers and many other tools of common use. It is a waste to use a larger auger where a gimlet would make a right-sized hole.

"The simplest words are the best. As the best dressed men and women are not the most fancifully attired, so the best speaker and writers are not those who use the most grandiose language.

"A good working vocabulary is to every man and woman what a good chest of tools is to a mechanic. Words are the tools of daily life. They should be kept clean, keen and well adapted to express the thoughts and wishes of the user."

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE

THE MEANING OF CATARRH

An acute case of catarrh manifests in two stages: First, there is the dry, congested, swollen, mucous membrane. Then the mucous membrane suddenly becomes moist with abnormally free discharge of mucus which is more or less altered in quality. The extreme inflammation of the membrane exists, whether it is in the nose or throat, or any of the other mucous membranes of the body.

This acute inflammation is usually called a "cold," especially if the inflammation is in the nose or throat.

The irritating cause of the discharge may be the breathing of fine particles of dust, or pollen from flowers, or often the invasion of bacteria. However, it is almost impossible for one of these "colds" to start unless the person who contracts the cold has been enervated for some time, and their resistance to disease is, therefore, below par.

Where chronic catarrh exists, the mucous membranes are constantly throwing out excesses of mucus, containing epithelial cells, white blood cells, and organic mineral matter. This discharge may be present in the air passages, such as the nose, throat or lungs, or may even come from the stomach or alimentary canal with discharges from the rectum, and even excessive discharges of mucus from the genital organs can be placed under the name of catarrh.

The fundamental causes lying back of any of these types of chronic catarrh is always an excess accumulation in the blood of too large a quantity of material formed from the carbohydrates—that is—the sugars and starches, such as white flour, sugar, corn starch, polished rice, etc. These are all acid forming and consequently lower the alkalinity of the blood.

Most commercial sugars are so deprived of their alkalinity that they are also acid forming, and have the effect of producing in the blood a lowered state of alkalinity.

These effete materials, of no use to the body, must be thrown out in some manner, and the body often uses the mucous membrane as a channel for this elimination.

If one is suffering from any form of chronis catarrh, the first thing to do is to eliminate, for a time, at least, all sugars and starches, and give the blood a chance to cleanse itself of these waste products which cannot be used in the building of normal cell structure.

The body will quickly eliminate these unnecessary wastes if one will only give their system a chance to carry on this elimination in an uninterrupted manner. If short fruit fasts are taken occasionally the body will then have a chance to throw out this morbid material, and the blood will once again regain its normal tone.

It is a wise plan, also, to stimulate all the other eliminative organs of the body, such as the skin, kidneys, intestines, etc. Large quantities of water should be taken between meals, a good sweat induced each day, and it is a good plan for some time to take at least one enema daily.

However, it will take considerable time to bring about a complete cure, and one must be patient with these treatments and stay on a rigid diet if a permanent and lasting cure is desired.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

A TURTLE ON ITS BACK

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

Have you ever watched a turtle on its back?

As it twists its neck and waves its legs, unable to touch anything solid, it is an object for laughter or pity, depending upon who sees it.

If it rights itself it is usually after an exhausting struggle.

The world is topsy-turvy, upside down. Everything is empty. There is nothing to grasp hold of. All the solid basis of relationship suddenly has disappeared and he is left beating the empty air.

In older age we learn the sad wisdom of the infidelity of some men.

We learn to expect a certain percentage of failures in mankind.

We are on our guard.

But in childhood being deceived by a supposed friend is meeting the actuality of life suddenly. It leaves an indelible, life-long impression.

The mind and the heart have not had time to become calloused over; the pain of the blister results.

In his mature years the poet James Whitcomb Riley said he could remember every detail of an experience in his childhood when he made the heartbreaking discovery that he had been deceived by a trusted chum.

The too-suspicious man finds himself distrusting everyone.

One who is too trusting finds himself continually imposed upon and heart. That is an individual problem.

Those who, seeing someone else deceived and losing faith in mankind, can show the sincerity, kindness and honesty that are inherent in the great mass of men, do an act of surpassing value.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

The average man has 66 pounds of muscle and 3-3 pounds of brain, according to a physician. Maybe that explains everything.

The quaint belief still persists in some parts of the country that Santa Claus got his start in life as a jury foreman.

Simultaneously, another succoring rush began from the paddock. The little bandy-legged Cockney lead that—his eyes wide with fear and as much, in truth, upon the motionless horse as upon the equally motionless master.

On the sidelines, following an involuntary gasp of dismay, the good breeding of the spectators quickly asserted itself in a general repression of outward emotion. But the sympathy and concern were none the less intense for the silence.

Joan, springing from the car as she saw Ranny go down, paused on the running board—on tiptoe, the better to see a rigid, inscrutable statue. Only Abner, closest to her, could note the delicate, breath-thin quivering of her nostrils and lips, the cloud behind her amber eyes. And jealousy contributed in no small measure to his perception.

"Oh, he's all right," muttered Abner, a blue flame behind his affectation. "Just a tumble. They happen in every game."

Joan said nothing—in fact, gave no sign of even having heard Abner. She grew more tense, in fact. For now the dismounted poloists were extricating Ranny from beneath Milkmaid's ruined bulk of beauty and muscle.

That was the little Cockney, fussing over the mare's head. And that was Clay, kneeling on the closecropped turf, fumblingly taking Ranny's head onto his lap.

Water, fetched by a groom, was dashed on the white face—the pallid wrists. A trainer passed skilful hands over Ranny's entire body, probing delicately then he glanced up reassuringly into the pressing ring of distressed faces: "Nothing broken, at least—"

He hastily applied restoratives. Another moment and everybody looked at everybody else in sheer relief, and breathed freer—for Ranny's eyes had flickered open.

The mists of shock and pain were dissolved in the essence of his brave vitality and, characteristically, as he struggled to sit up, helped by many bronzed and sympathetic hands, his first words were of his faithful partner in play:

"Is—is Milkmaid all right?"

Deeply touched, Ranny gazed in heavy silence for a long minute at the dead pony.

There was unashamed moisture in his eyes—and in the eyes of the mates and rivals, who presently helped him to his feet.

"Strange that the strap should part," mused Clay. "Now, if the buckle had given way, or the stirrup tread itself had broken—hullo, what's this?" He was down on his knees beside Milkmaid's body and now he held up the stirrup and the remnant of the strap: "There was no accident here! This strap was deliberately cut!"

Swiftly the telltale strap was passed from hand to hand, while grim faces reflected the stunned amazement of virile men that any fellow human, however low, could commit so dastardly a deed.

"Who?" and "Why?" These questions, which each man asked his neighbor, were none the less eloquent because looked instead of spoken.

Ranny limped near to the Cockney a team mate and Clay supporting either arm. "Was anyone tampering—" he began.

But the little groom, no less outraged, was ahead of him in thought: "The straps were h'okay when I saddled the mare, sir—I could tyke me dying h'oath to that!"

He turned inquiringly to his stable boy, who stood nervously at hand.

"There was nobody near Milkmaid when I was holding her," the lad avowed anxiously adding, then, as an afterthought of no consequence, "Nobody except one of Mr. Forbes' friends."

"What was that?" Sharp the question rang.

Mr. Gratman."

Clay felt Ranny's muscles flinch beneath his bracing hand. Ranny's face remained a mask—a grim mask, withal, yet an absolute cloak to his inward emotions. He turned—still aided by Clay and a mate—full around to the little group and said lightly, deprecatingly:

"We'll have to look elsewhere for our clue! Meanwhile, carry on! Drake can sub for me the rest of this half. I'll sit out till the fifth chukker."

While unfortunate Milkmaid's body was removed, Ranny, stiff and sore and unsteady, was helped toward his sedan by Clay. The storm of admiring cheers that was the relieved crowd's tribute to his pluck beat unheard about his ears.

"It's got to the point, eh, where he'll even go so far as to kill me off to simplify matters for Joan and himself?"

"It looks that way," said Clay darkly.

When Ranny spoke again there was cold murder in his eyes, and the still keen physical pain that each limping step occasioned fed its intensity: "Sometime, somehow, I'll find out if Abner Gratman really cut that strap. And—if he did—on that day 'Ill give him the most terrible thrashing that any man ever got!"

A sympathetic crowd made a lane for Ranny to his car. Joan, white, and with the quick tears of her impulsive nature gleaming on her long lashes, assisted him into a seat with willing hands. Clay hurried back upon the field to remount and resume his duties.

"I'm awfully sorry, old scout," said Joan, awkwardly.

"Thanks," he said shortly. His eyes were not upon her, but upon Abner, who hovered hypocritically at her elbow.

"Rotten luck, Forbes," said Abner, in his mealy, oily manner. "What happened?"

"You know as much as I do!" snapped Ranny, with an acid look.

"EVERY MOTHER'S SON"

The endurance of the British movie-going public must match the endurance of the British Tommy. "Every Mother's Son" is a very fine British film, if it would only take advantage of several splendid opportunities to stop. Within the last half hour of its filming, it keps its audiences reaching for hats and coats every few minutes, in the firm belief that at last it has reached a climax, and then—it goes on again. Even at that, it doesn't end up satisfactorily, but leaves the two chief characters dangling, as it were, at its conclusion. One may imagine the denouement. Either David marries Janet or he doesn't, which ever you prefer. You can take your choice.

Aside from this element of anti-climax, it is a very entertaining picture and gives a seldom-seen side of humanity in its delineation, true to life in every detail, of the daily careers of those who live in England, the land of happy homes and the caste system. Here is the Squire, riding over his estate, and his son, taking from the farm workman the lady of his choice, here is the village girl taken into service as maid-companion to the lady of the hall, and here is the home of the mother of the two lads, David and Jonathan, urging her sons to war in the days of the first glory of the conflict, and then dying in her chair when the news comes home to her of their taking off. Here is the fat cook in the servants' hall, with the maids in trim caps and aprons, and here is the country of rural England, peaceful and mild, with gentle farm horses plowing through soft loam. Here, too, is Westminster Abbey, and the tomb of the "Unknown Soldier," the motif of the story, for "Every Mother's Son" in the title resolves itself finally into the unknown man who might be any mother's son, coming back to console the hearts of those who have been bereft in the Great War.

The scenes from the trenches are real and vivid and the home-coming of Tommy Atkins is portrayed in realistic fashion also. The pathos and the comedy of the war have been filmed in this picture, which only falls short of being a really notable production by the stodginess of an occasional heavy British finger in its manufacture.

The comedy is a Charley Chase affair, "Tell 'Em Nothing," a flurry in married life, and there is a very interesting section of the new comic serial affair, "Bill Grimm's Progress."—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

In the flashing highlights and shadows of the modern motion picture, there was unfolded yesterday at the Regent Theatre a stirring drama of the days when America was young and the future a desperate enigma. No ordinary story this! It was "The Devil Horse," written and produced by Hal Roach, with Rex, the king of wild horses, once again flashing his black, gleaming beauty across the scenes in this tremendously thrilling and spectacular picture.

It is the tale of a horse who, as a colt, is separated from his only friend and protector, a little boy, as the result of an Indian raid on the band of pioneers who are struggling their weary way across the great unknown to a new and better land where they might begin life anew. In the rugged hills of this strange country little Rex grows into a great black stallion with a deadly and undying hate in his heart for the race that has taken from him the only friend he ever had.

And thus we see him, hiding in ambush to waylay any redskin who should cross his path, his mighty hoofs ever on the alert to lash out and kill his sworn enemy. In vain did the Medicine Men call on the Great Spirit to save them from the wrath of this slaying steed. But no prayer of theirs could stay the indomitable enmity of Rex. All he ever knew of love and kindness they had taken from him, and as long as he lived he would make them pay his price.

But one day there came into his wild life, like a bolt from the blue, a remembrance of his youth. Dave Garson, an Army scout captured by the Indians and left to die at the merciless hoofs of the devil horse, gazed at Rex as he came plunging at him with red fury in his heart. In that instant Dave knew he had found his long-lost colt, and Rex knew he had found at last the boy who had brought him up and loved him.

United, these two are more than a match for the treachery of the Indians. In the sweep of battle, with the fort beseiged and the troops far away in the Big Horn Valley, Rex saves the day and Dave lives to see once more his sweetheart, Marion Morrow, the daughter of the regiment.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir.—I read your editorial, re appointment of an Alderman in ex-Alderman Turner's place, with great interest and surprise not to say chagrin. I agree with you, Mr. Editor, that one of the first duties of the 1927 Council is that of appointing or selecting a member to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of a shrewd, young Councillor known all over the city. I take issue with you, Mr. Editor, in naming any one particular person, but now you have broken the ice, let us analyse your selection compared with the ex-Alderman mentioned. Mr. Turner cannot be called an agitator, a waster of time, a beater of boys, nor gentleman of leisure. Can the same or anything approaching be said of your recommendation? Gentlemen or leisure are not wanted on a progressive City Council and in the district where your choice lives. I have spoken to many who scorn the idea of such a man being foisted on them as their representative. I have not extensive interests in this city, but I have two votes and neither of them were given to aid such as you name. However, it is neither my business nor The Examiner's as to whom they appoint, but I have such confidence in this year's Council that I feel sure they will steer clear of making such a choice as you put forward for once bitten twice shy. There are many good men such as ex-Mayor Duncan, Mr. Stan. Lowe, ex-Mayor McIntyre, John R. Marshall, who would, I have no doubt, be pleased to give their valuable services free and they would be a great help to our Council, not a pest or hindrance.

Yours truly,

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, lumber king with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman! Abner, unobserved, maliciously cuts Ranny's stirrup strap. Distracted as he watches Joan flirt with Abner, Ranny neglects his playing. The rival captain is about to score. Ranny pursues—

If a pony had speed Ranny was the man to draw it out. Milkmaid had speed, and Ranny tugged it out of her dead game little heart now. Breath-fast, like a gull scudding in the teeth of a stormy wind, Ranny and Milkmaid floated rather than raced down that field through the six streaming players as though they had been standing stock still, and foot by foot drawing up on the thundering Argentine captain. Not an ounce of Ranny's weight was in the stirrups—knees and flanks glued him to Milkmaid's neck, and the holding touch of the ball of his foot in the stirrup was light as feather down.

Now the Argentine captain swung his mallet at the ball. Just a mechanical formality seemed necessary to register the goal. But Ranny frantically threw Milkmaid forward and stood up in his stirrups for a counter stroke.

The heavy strain of his foot was all that was needed to tear through the film of strap left by Abner's knife. The stirrup broke away, swaying Ranny's weight out of the saddle, off side.

Good horseman though Ranny was, sure footed though Milkmaid was, their charge had too much impetuosity for the disaster to be averted. As Ranny pitched loose from the saddle, his mallet became entangled in the little pony's forelegs. Milkmaid somersaulted, pivoted on her head while her legs thrashed wildly in air, then collapsed in a heap and lay very still.

And pinioned beneath her lay Ranny, also very still.

CHAPTER III.

Even as the goal watcher's flag went up and down, signalling a point for the Saffron, all elation went out of the minds of the Argentine Captain and his comrades, all chagrin was forgotten by the Americans, and all official austerity forsook Clay Varick. A common impulse dominated each

THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS

THE PERSONAL ELEMENT AND THE MAIL ORDER CATALOGUE

"IT can't be described in the printed word or illustrated in a catalogue---"

In our initial little message on the spirit of neighborliness as exemplified in the borrowing of a cup of sugar, we emphasized, if you'll remember, the personal element in prompt, efficient, honest service. You know that it's good sugar that is immediately handed over the fence because it comes directly from your neighbor's table.

Now, where or how you buy is your affair. And to our mind, a would-be neighbor who interferes in your affairs ceases to be a good neighbor. He's a busy-body.

But may we offer this suggestion? After you've looked through the mail order catalogue, would it be worth while to compare the pictured articles with those right at hand—that you can see and touch and instinctively determine the quality because a neighborly sales person offers you a choice across our counters? Then compare the neighbor's prices with the catalogue quotations plus postage and postal delays? You may be surprised.

THANK YOU

RAEBURN'S WORK STUDIED BY CLUB

Paper Read By Mrs. H. W. Morphet at Art Study Club Meeting.

SCOTTISH ARTIST.

A meeting of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association was held this week at the home of Mrs. E. R. Shirley, when a paper on Sir Henry Raeburn was given by Mrs. H. W. Morphet. The response to the roll call was a quotation from the works of Sir Walter Scott.

Mrs. Morphet's paper dealt interestingly with the life and work of Sir Henry Raeburn, who was born in Edinburgh in 1756. The Raeburns were of border origin and a hill farm in Annandale, the property of Sir Walter Scott's family, still bears their name. In the peaceful times which succeeded the union of the two kingdoms, the Raeburns, like other border lairds, settled down to a pastoral life devoted to culture of the land. The father tried his hand at trade and became a mill owner, leaving on his death a considerable business to be carried on by his elder son, William. This son, on the death of his parents, assumed guardianship of the younger brother, Henry, who was apprenticed to an Edinburgh goldsmith named Gilliland. Later, however, he worked under David Martin, painted miniatures and at the age of twenty-two years, married a wife with means who enabled him to visit Italy. He went there under the best of auspices, having letters of introduction from Sir Joshua Reynolds, who recognized his budding talent.

Later, he became the undisputed leader of art in the north of England and in Scotland. He visited London only three times in his life, but was elected an "R.A." He was also a member of the Imperial Academy at Florence, and an honorary member in 1817 of the Academy of Fine Arts in New York. In 1821, he was elected to the same honor in the Academy of Arts in South Carolina. He was also a fellow of the Royal Academy in Edinburgh. In 1822, George IV. conferred knighthood upon him, when he was sixty-seven years of age. He remained all his life, hale, vigorous, and temperate, and of a singularly lovable disposition. His tastes were simple and wholesome and he was a great lover of fishing. It was after an excursion of this type with Sir Walter Scott (whose portrait was his last work) that he took ill and died, after a week's illness, in 1823.

The style of Raeburn was obviously sincere, quite different from what he saw about him. It has since become a European ideal in art. So far as we can now guess, his school was the portrait of Pope Innocent Tenth by Velasquez, in the Pamfili Palace. His art improved steadily until the end of his life, and he developed from an excessive breadth of touch to a rounded modelling. The Edinburgh National Gallery and the Glasgow Museum contain the chief Scottish collections of his work. Among his best works in these collections are portraits of Mrs. Campbell of Balliemore, Lord Newton, Glengarry, John Wauchope, Major Clune, his own portrait, Nathaniel Spens, Viscount Duncan, Mrs. Urquhart and Sir John Sinclair of Ulster, Sir George Douglas Clark, Sir John and Lady Clarke, Sir Robert Dundas, Mr. Munro Ferguson, the Macdonalds of Clanranald, Mr. Lionel Muirhead, Hon. Mrs. Baillie Hamilton, the MacNab, and others too numerous to mention.

Raeburn was the most vigorous of all the eighteenth century British portrait painters, and none of them succeeded as well as he in setting on canvas the splendid figure of a man. Though he has left us many dignified and noble portraits of women, he is held to have excelled himself in his portrayal of men. His masterpiece, Sir John Sinclair, the Highland chieftain, can hold its own for vitality, solidity and dignity, with any painted man in existence.

He was very methodical and industrious in his habits, rising at seven o'clock, breakfasting at eight, and working until five in the afternoon. He had the habit of searching the countenance of his sitter until he had penetrated to the character beneath, and then, beginning with the forehead, he would paint the chin, nose and mouth, working very rapidly without any preliminary drawing or without use of the mahlstick to support his brush.

The salesroom record for a British portrait was made in 1911 by a Raeburn, which brought the sum of 21,309 guineas at Christie's.

It is interesting to note that a recent press despatch gives the receipt of a spirit message by a collector of antiques in the City of London of a complaint from the long-dead Bobbie Burns over the portrait of his which is high in popular favor. It seems that the spirit of the poet wished to have a certain old painting discovered and cleaned up, which represent him in a handsomer light than the majority of his portraits, and when this old portrait was found, after directions were given as to its location, it was thought to be a Raeburn. The portrait is to be offered to the National Gallery, and the message appears to be a proof, says a commentator on the occurrence, that vanity, at least, does not expire with the physical part of the body.

The next meeting of the Art Study Club will be held on Tuesday, January 18th, at the home of Mrs. C. B. Waite, when a paper on "The Romance of Artists" will be given by Mrs. F. C. Neal.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE DISMISSED

Magistrate Finds No Reason For Committing Nick Ricci.

POISON ALCOHOL.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., January 7. — Nick Ricci, Thorold, the last of nine men charged with manslaughter in connection with deaths from poison alcohol at Allanburg, was dismissed yesterday. After hearing lengthy evidence, practically a repetition of that given at the inquest, Magistrate Fraser said: "I don't think there is sufficient evidence to put the man on trial, and the charge is dismissed."

F. W. Griffiths, acting for the Minister of Justice, withdrew the charges of violation of the Customs Act. Mr. Griffith expressed the opinion that the charges should never have been laid, because the Crown never had evidence to prove smuggling on the part of Ricci. James MacGregor Young acted for the Crown in the manslaughter case, and John McMany appeared for the defence.

LEGION NOTES

Members are reminded that the dues for the next quarter are now due as from Jan. 1st. Applicants for membership are advised that the fee is payable from the commencement of the first quarter, no arrears are included, the amount being $1.50.

Membership in the Legion is taking on new strength and bids well to realize all that the present officers anticipated of it.

During the past month a great deal of relief work was accomplished and the efforts of the chairman, Comrade J. Abraham, who worked strenuously on behalf of all cases reported to him, was appreciated by all concerned.

Owing to the Christmas festivities, the regular monthly meeting was postponed, as in other years. A meeting will be held shortly, the date of which will be announced later.

During the past month, the social activities were many, the principal event being the euchre dance and draw, which attracted a crowd of 1600 persons. The chairman, Comrade N. E. Crow, and his committee, are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts; it is largely through their unsolicited work and service that the relief work is able to be carried on. Their effort is an example of that measure of service that the Canadian version of the B.E.S.L. calls upon its members to exemplify.

The president and officers of the branch appeal to all ex-service men who have not yet signed their application form for membership to come along and make Branch 52 a real letter one for the Dominion. The Legion requires the service of all ex-service men. Join now, come and visit the hall and enjoy the comforts that have been recently provided for the benefit of the members.

There are a considerable number of badges and membership cards at the office, and those members who have not received theirs are asked to make an effort to be at the next regular meeting and receive them.

On Monday evening next the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion will hold their annual meeting in the hall, when the reports of the year's activities will be submitted, and the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

It would be appreciated by the officers and members of the local branch if any persons having reading material, such as magazines, etc., to spare, would kindly send them to the hall, or phone 141, when they will be called for.

Notice has been received that the first annual convention of the Dominion Command of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, will be held at Winnipeg on Monday, January 24th, when delegates from all over Canada will assemble to further the great objects of unity for which the Legion stands. The National Council will meet on the 23rd inst.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

CHRISTIANITY OF CHRIST

Text: Luke 6:27-38.

But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you,

Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloke forbid not to take thy coat also.

Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil.

Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:

Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for January 9. The Christianity of Christ. Luke 6:27-38.

* * *

The soul of this lesson, taken from Luke's account of the Sermon on the Mount, is found in the Golden Text taken from Matthew's account of the same sermon: "Be ye therefore even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect."

What is Christianity? Scholars and critics in recent years have argued very much over the question, and one book of this title by a learned German has been made the occasion of a great deal of controversy.

Here in our lesson we have set before us some phases of the Christianity of Christ. It ought to be evident to every discerning man that whatever differences of opinion there may be about many things there were certain things that were fundamental in the teaching and practice of Jesus himself.

While the question at issue is often whether Christianity consists in doctrines concerning Jesus or in what Jesus himself taught and lived, surely it ought to be evident that doctrines concerning Jesus are of value only as they emphasize the richness and beauty of his life and make his power known in the hearts of men.

Religion of Love.

The significance of Jesus was that he founded his religion in love; not primarily in the love that man has to God, nor even in the love that man has to his fellow men, but first of all in the love of God for us, the love revealed in Jesus himself, "who loved us and gave himself for us."

Jesus found that the center and soul of the world was a Father of love and mercy who caused his sun to shine on the evil and the good, and who sent his rain on the just and unjust. It is this gracious God whom he sets before us as the pattern for the life of his children.

He says that we are in deed and in truth the children of God only as we live in accordance with the goodness of this Father. "Be ye therefore perfect," he says, "even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect."

How can man be perfect? How can man be like God? Does not this high command, this glorious ideal of perfection, seem almost a mockery of human weakness? Yet if we think for a moment, how could a great Savior and Master of men, who came to give them the highest truth, set up anything less than perfection as the standard of life.

The test of this great ideal of love in daily life is made very practical and real in the teaching of Jesus. The measure of a man's love is his love for his enemies. The truth of his life is revealed in his relationship to his fellow men.

Is he simply a man dealing with his fellow men in moral and spiritual things upon the same basis of give and take in the spirit of barter? There is nothing then unusual about his life. That is simply what the great multitude of unthinking men do. Man becomes Godlike as he brings into his life some new element of magnanimity, some richness of grace that lifts him above this plane of mere barter.

Love of Enemies.

When one comes to think of it, how can the world ever be bettered except as this high ideal of Jesus becomes expressed in life? If men love only those who love them there is no gain. Life simply proceeds upon the same level.

But when a man with Godlike aspirations rises to the point where he can love his enemies, he has brought into life a new and conquering principle. By his ideals and his actions he is doing all in his power to lift life to a new plane and to create a new world.

Is it worth our while to consider the meaning of these words that we see so often in life, magnanimity, grace, mercy, forgiveness? They all express deep realities in a world where there is much sin and wrong, in a world where men suffer deeply sometimes from the unfair and injurious action of their fellows.

Nobility of Doctrine.

Is then love, such as Jesus preaches and such as he practiced, a good thing, or is man at his noblest in intense and unwavering determinations of revenge?

Is it in self-assertion or in the dominance of the self by God that life attains its highest?

To ask these questions is to answer them, though it depends, of course, upon what we set before ourselves as good. But if we think of man as living among his fellows in human society, can we question that Jesus has defined the only truth for the guidance of individual life, if men are to make their social relationships helpful and conducive to the upbuilding of true society?

While the application of this is primarily to the individual life, if men are to make their social relationships helpful and conducive to the upbuilding of true society?

While the application of this is primarily to the individual, and love can have power in life only as it becomes enthroned and expressed in the lives of men, one can hardly think of a lesson like this without picturing the needs of the world to-day internationally and socially.

How shall we rid the world of war, of racial and class prejudice, of conflicts between nations except as we enthrone this ideal of love in our conceptions of social relationship and well being?

STILL A CHANCE OF NEW ARCTIC LANDS

More Polar Explorations Are Planned This Year, Says Stefansson.

It seems certain that no new land can be discovered in the Antarctic; ther is a fifty-fifty chance that islands will be discovered in the Arctic, according to Vilhjalmur Stefanson, famous Arctic explorer.

"In every respect but one, the sensational Arctic flights of 1926 merely advertised to the public the tried knowledge and accepted deductions of the scientists. The one exception was when Wilkins reported the definite absence of land in a previously unexplored area of ten thousand square miles north of Alaska, and when Amundsen reported the same thing a few weeks later for a previously unknown strip also on the Alaska side of the Pole. These results were expected by about half the scientists and unexpected by the other half.

"Two things that were much debated, and which therefore come near the field of actual discovery, were settled by Byrd and Wilkins. These two fliers showed not only that the winter Arctic climate is peculiarly favorable for flying, as compared with average temperate or tropic climates, but also the air bumps, air holes and roughness of the air generally, while appearing in spring and (doubtless) throught the summer, are absent in the Arctic in winter.

"The Argentinians are to fly in the Antarctic the coming year; Wilkins Nobile and others have announced they will fly in the North. Others, such as Byrd, may fly there also. What we may expect is that these flights, if made, will further confirm scientific opinions."

FOOD AND HEALTH

THE VERSATILITY OF DIET

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs Food Specialist.

From the standpoint of one who receives many letters asking questions about diet and disease, I am struck especially with one point. There is a surprisingly limited number of conditions concerning which my friends ask questions. From noting this point I went on to reflect that a diet plan for one of the disturbances that seem most prevalent will frequently be of definite help in correcting others.

Take the letter for example, that asks for a "diet for high blood pressure." "Can I eat potatoes every day?" says the writer of this letter. "I am very fond of them and also rolled oats."

As I began to think over what I should say to this friend I realized that if he will but follow the diet suggested for high blood pressure, I will answer my correspondent's question about potatoes first. Potatoes do have a very slight quantity of the element that is bad for high blood pressure and for rheumatism. I should, therefore, advise this correspondent not to eat them very often. He may choose his diet from the following list. Eggs, white bread, omitting graham and entire wheat. Better than oatmeal for this condition are farina, rice and hominy. Sugar, cream, marmalade, jam, creamed soups, cauliflower, lettuce, cottage cheese, nuts, ice cream, corn starch, tapioca, or custard pudding and milk.

After the blood pressure is reduced, then potatoes and oatmeal may be eaten in moderate quantities. After one has had even slight experience in planning diets, he will realize that such a diet as that outlined will be very good for one who is suffering from constipation or putrefaction in the intestines, or rheumatism. In short, almost any disease that is complicated by the secretion of too much acid in the system will be benefited thereby.

My readers will notice that although meat is not included in this list, body building material is supplied by eggs and milk. Notice also that the old bugaboo about white bread is destroyed. This is one of the conditions where white bread must be used.

In preparing dishes from the foods in the diet list given earlier in this paper, one should be careful first to study possible variety in combinations. Second, he should take special pains to plan simple dishes with as few ingredients as possible represented in their composition. Vegetables, for example, should be cooked as simply as possible with the addition only of salt and these are to be served either plain or with a white sauce made from part of the milk allowed in the dietary.

WALES HALTS HORSE.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—It has happened at last—the Prince of Wales has conquered a horse. During a recent hunt, the Prince, after a hot chase, captured a runaway which had thrown its rider, Capt. Alfred Loewenstein. Lowenstein recently won wide notice by his offer to stabilize the Belgian franc, and his habit of riding about over Europe in airplanes.

THE MOST DANGEROUS WORD IN THE LANGUAGE.

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS

If Mussolini is right and 1926 is going to be "the Napoleonic year for Fascism," the world is going to suffer a further setback to its unceasing pursuit of liberty, and the reaction which will inevitably follow in the train of despotism may bring about a European upheaval.

Sir Philip Gibbs, in this striking article, discusses this question of liberty in all its aspects. "There is," he declares, "no such thing as liberty and the cry for it is a mocking voice."

The word "Liberty" is the most dangerous in our languages. It has caused not only rivers of tears but rivers of blood. It has broken up civilizations, dynasties, and kingdoms. It has let loose innumerable devils of cruelty.

It has overthrown religions and broken many codes of honor and old loyalties, for in the quest of liberty men have gone mad and done desperate and bloody things beyond the ferocity of wild beasts.

It is today in our very homes, and in this nation of ours, the most dangerous, the most abused word, and the cause of many of our social troubles. It is for liberty's sake that many wives leave many husbands, and many husbands leave many wives, breaking their vows, forgetting old loyalties, smashing their home life. It is for the sake of "liberty" that young girls flout their worried mothers, quarrel with their anxious fathers, take risks which end sometimes in frightful tragedy.

It is for "liberty" that people abandon the restraints and checks of the conventional code which safeguarded the morals of their predecessors. It is in the sacred name of "liberty" that political agitators and youthful Communists advocate a complete overthrow of our system of civilization, even by way of violence and bloodshed.

Rebellious Youth.

All over the world today, and in this country of ours, youth is restless, intelectually rebellious, dissatisfied with the conditions of life because it desires the fulfilment of some vague dream of liberty which will give it the right and the power to do as it jolly well likes.

"O Liberty, what games have been played in thy name!"

That was the cry of a woman going to her death by the guillotine when the French Revolution was drenching her people in blood, and when the tyranny of Robespierre was enormously worse than the weak oppression of the later Bourbons.

Before the Revolution, in the salons of Paris the intellectuals had talked a great deal, by the light of candles in panelled rooms, about the divine light of liberty. They had proclaimed Jean Jacques Rousseau to be the new Prophet, because in his "Social Contract" he asserted his faith in the "natural man" liberated from all tryannies of dogma and authority.

When the mob of Paris carried this theory into practice the intellectual were the first to be hanged on the lamp-posts, and the terrible cry of "A La Lanterne!" rang out below those gilded salons where pretty ladies had prattled so brightly—in the sacred name of Liberty.

Ireland and Russia.

All through history this word has been the cause of mob-risings, religious warfare, and political strife of the fiercest kind. The desire for liberty is a passion in the human heart, stronger than hunger, and unafraid of death.

The history of Ireland is one long struggle for liberty. Even now De Valera and his Republicans are not satisfied with the liberty of that country, and desire more blood, more murders, more tears of women, to attain its perfect fulfilment.

In Russia, for hundreds of years men plotted secretly, women risked their lives and bodies, suffered floggings, torture, execution, and a living death itself so that Russia might be liberated from its chains.

And when at last their Revolution swept away the monarchy and all its tryannies, a man named Lenin, with a little gang of ruthless friends, set up a new form of Government which, to say the least of it, was not, nor is not, liberty.

There is no free speech in Russia, no free Press, no freedom of the individual to trade, or live, or even think as he likes. He is under a new law, harder than the old, more intolerant terribly cruel if anyone dares to defy it.

A Will-O'-The-Wisp.

This eternal search for liberty is like the unending search for human happiness. It is a will-o'-the-wisp, always eluding us. We never get to the journey's end.

There is no such thing as liberty for the individual soul. A nation has a right to a certain measure of liberty, which, I think, on the whole we have gained.

But in the end each one of us must realize, sadly, that as long as life lasts we cannot liberate ourselves from laws, restraints, taboos, social prohibitions, spiritual checks within our own conciousness which must be obeyed, unless we become outlaws among our fellows and traitors to our code.

There is no such thing as liberty. It is unfortunate, but none of us can do as we like! All along the road of life, from the cradle to the grave, there are signposts and danger signals.

"Verboten," as they say in Germany.

"Keep off the grass," as we say in English.

"No admittance, this way," "Safety first."

"No exit," "Defendu," as the French say.

It is all most annoying, sometimes highly exasperating. a Often if we obey those signposts, we miss a very jolly by-path in life, or give up an hour of good fun, perhaps even sacrificing the happiness for which our soul most yearns. But long experience has taught us that if we disobey the warnings and claim our liberty the price is higher than the profit.

There is no liberty, for there must be law, and all the law is a restraint of liberty. The youth of today, so restless and so rebellious sometimes, is up against the inherited experience of the ages— and of that middle age for which it has such scorn—when it demands the liberty to live and love as it likes, to deny obedience, to ridicule duty, to laugh at convention.

The code of honor, the rules of the game of life, are denials of liberty To play the game properly we have to deny outselves—which is terribly irksome—lest we should hurt others, in an unfair, unsportsmanlike way.

Some of those husbands and wives who leave each other in the name of liberty by way of the Divorce Court has not always played the game by each other. They have not played fair. In seeking liberty they have perhaps smashed a wretched woman's life or wrecked an honest man's home so that liberty is poisoned fruit when it comes, and a new tyranny in which their conscience has no freedom but a secret torture.

Loyalty is often opposed to liberty because to be loyal we have to sacrifce our desires, our passions, our desperate temptations. Duty is opposed to liberty, because it means obedience to other people's will, to drudgery, to boredom. We have to turn a deaf ear when pleasure calls, so temptingly, when beauty lures us, when there is good fun outside the window.

A Mocking Voice.

We may have no religious faith to say "Thou shalt" and "shalt not". It is easier, though hard still, to obey the law of self-denial if we believe in Divine as well as human prohibitions.

But I suppose most of us believe in kindness rather than in cruelty, in tolerance rather than intolerance, in some decent code of honor which is based on courtesy and fair play, and pity for the weak. If we do believe in these things, there is no such thing as absolute liberty, because to be kind instead of cruel is the law of self-denial.

This cry for liberty, therefore, is a mocking voice. Not even on a desert island with one man and one woman can there be absolute liberty for either of them. Those two must compromise, yield up self-desire, submit something to the other.

The best one can hope from liberty is freedom to think fearlessly, to be secure in our work and home, to have access to the world of knowledge and of beauty, to have a fair share in making or shaping the social code in which we live, and to be free from interference by evil powers of governments, police, or public opinion, claiming authority over our souls and bodies beyond the limits of justice and fair play. Even that is hard to get.

I am all for liberty. But I realize its limitations, and the danger of that word which in the months of fanatics, libertiness, and rebels has caused much agony, crime, and dissillusion.

DO YOU COUGH?

Guelph, Ont.—"I caught a severe cold and could not seem to get rid of it. It just clung to me and finally settled in my bronchial tubes causing me a lot of trouble. The cough would be more severe at night than during the day, causing sleeplessness. I finally decided I would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and by the time I had taken one bottle I was entirely relieved of the bronchial trouble—my cough disappeared and I have had no trouble with a cough since. I do not think a person can take anything better for bronchial weakness or deep-seated coughs than the 'Golden Medical Discovery'."—Miss Mary Duggan, 170 Ontario St.

BABIES' CLINIC REPORTS GOOD

Past Six Months Have Been Most Successful in Many Ways.

BALANCE ON HAND.

The half-yearly meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic was held recently in the Clinic rooms at the Canadian Legion hall, the vice president, Mrs. A. Stevenson, in the chair. Reports of the six months' period were given by the supervisor, Dr. Birnie the treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal, and the nurse, Miss Mamie Foote.

The treasurer's report was very encouraging, showing a balance on hand of $303.09. Donations during the period included $40 from the Misses Dickson, Mrs. Hazlett, and Mrs. Walsh, $10 from the Female Voice Choir, $10 from the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, $15 from the Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E., $25 from the 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E., $25 from the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., $175 from the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., $25 from the Kiwanis Club, $15 from the Business Girls Club and $100 from the Red Cross Society.

A vote of thanks was passed by the Board to the doctors who attend the Clinic, the voluntary workers, the King's Daughters and the Canadian Legion, for very generous use of their building.

Dr. Birnie reported a very successful period in the past six months, with a slight increase in attendance, which would have been greater with more favorable weather in the autumn months. Dr. Birnie spoke of the gratifying result of the spade work of the past few years, as shown in the interest taken in the workings of the Clinic, and the manner in which the mothers respond to advice given there. Subtracting from the list of infantile deaths in the first few days or months of life, those cases which are actually non-preventable, and over which the Clinic's endeavors could have no possible effect, it is found that the infantile mortality rate in the city is gratifyingly low. A good deal of work is necessary in teaching women the importance of proper pre-natal care, and Dr. Birnie is giving talks on this subject almost weekly at the Clinic.

Visitors from outside points have had occasion to remark, in almost every instance, on the personal touch afforded at the Peterborough Clinic, as being in contrast with treatment at other centres, and have warmly thanked the local workers on leaving. One case from the outside that was of especial interest was that of a child between three and four years of age suffering from mal-nutrition, its mother having not the slightest idea how to feed it properly. A complete change of diet was advised and the child improved thereby.

Often destitute cases are discovered in connection with the work and these are investigated by the nurse and immediately helped. The Clinic also took a great deal of interest and assumed most of the supervision of the recent successful Baby Show, conducted by the Kiwanis Club in connection with their Fair.

The report of the Clinic nurse follows:

The report of the Well Babies' Clinic for the past six months is as follows:

Our attendance totalled 449, being a small increase over the previous six months. This would have been greater had it not been for the very unfavorable weather during the late autumn, which prevented the mothers coming out in the usual numbers. No meetings were held for two months, due to the necessary alterations which were being made at the Clinic rooms.

The calls made were 285. These included registrations, special calls, and follow up work. The follow up work was less than usual, attributed to the cool summer, lessening of intestinal conditions and also to the work of the clinic being more recognized and the mothers bringing their children to us in the early months for supervision, thus preventing errors in diet, causing children's ailments heretofore prevalent.

Special calls were dealt with and several layettes given out, which were gratefully received.

Some charities were dealt with to the best of our resources.

We were also pleased to assist the Kiwanians, in putting on the baby show at their Fair in October.

The parental work is being taken care of by Dr. Birnie. A fifteen minutes talk given previous to the day's activities at the clinic and are proving most valuable to the mothers.

On the daily calls it is gratifying to receive so many expressions of appreciation for the benefits the mothers have obtained through this branch of welfare work.

Mamie Foote,
Well Babies' Clinic Nurse.

WEDDING BELLS.

BRUNTON—ROWE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 7.—A quiet wedding took place on Tuesday afternoon at the Hastings parsonage, when Mabel Evelyn, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowe, Stanwood, became the wife of Harold Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brunton, of Stanwood. Rev. M. L. Hinton performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride was charmingly gowned in peach crepe with black velvet hat and velvet shoes. Her bridesmaid, Miss Jessie Cochrane, of Campbellford, wore a blue crepe gown. Mr. Murray Petherick of Stanwood supported the groom.

After a wedding supper in Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. Brunton left on the evening train for a honeymoon in Toronto and Niagara Falls. They will reside on the groom's farm at Stanwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Brunton are both popular young people and their many friends join in wishing them hearty congratulations.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 7.—A quiet wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McCorry, on Monday, January 3rd, at 3 p.m., when their second daughter, Susan Irene, became the bride of Mr. Norman Clendenning, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly gowned in a dainty dress of ivory radium lace, satin-trimmed, and worn over a silk slip of the same shade. Rev. Canon Allen, rector of St. Thomas church, performed the ceremony. The guests included only the immediate relatives and friends.

The wedding lunch was served immediately following the ceremony, one or two of the bride's girl friends helping to wait upon the guests.

After a week or two spent at Oshawa and other points Mr. and Mrs. Clendenning will leave for their home in Cleveland.

SALVATION ARMY PRIZES GIVEN

Annual Concert Held at the Temple New Year's Night.

GOOD PROGRAMME.

New Year's night was the night of hopes realized for many of the young people of the Salvation Army Sunday School.

J. A. McKone, Principal of the Peterborough Business College, presided over the happy event, and ably directed the proceedings, presenting the prizes to the fortunate prize-winners.

The following programme was given by the scholars, who were succesfully trained by Mr. G. Leggott and workers of the Sunday School:

Chairman's Remarks.
Recitation—Fank Cunningham.

Dialogue—"The Rainbow."
Presentation of Primary Prizes.
Exercise—"What Shall We Bring Him."

Selection—Junior Band.

Doxology.

Every item was given with precision and to the delight of the splendid audience who found this a very pleasant manner by which they could enjoy the holiday evening.

The long list of prize winners, and the lowest marks for attendance that merits a prize were 40, proved the efficiency of the teachers as well as the interest of the scholars and parents.

Sergt.-Major R. C. Brand gave an address dealing with the year's work, and outlined the programme to be followed this year.

Are Pleased To Announce Their

JANUARY PIANO CLUB

Limited to 20. Every Member Receives Special Club Prices, Terms and Privileges

Club Opens Saturday, Jan. 8th, at 8 a.m. Closes Positively With 20 Members

It is fitting in a community like Peterborough to have such an extraordinary Piano selling event as the Greene Piano Club. It enables parents to give the children whose birthright it is to know and enjoy the inexhaustible beauties and delights of music, the opportunity to purchase a Piano—so conveniently NOW—when the child should be taking lessons, and not have to miss the golden age period through waiting for a more convenient time.

The Greene Piano Club gives every parent the opportunity to have the music study begin NOW. The earlier the better, but, start right, with a good Piano, having a good action and good tone, the proper foundation for the child's musical ear and an instrument that all in all it will be a pleasure to own.

The Greatest Piano in Canada

We have conducted this tremendous Piano event on seven occasions. It has grown in volume and popularity because it is undoubtedly the most attractive Piano offer made in Canada. A great many families are owners of instruments secured through this Club. And they are pleased. Its low price offer, easy terms, no interest and special privileges are the magnet that draws them. You cannot equal elsewhere the value offered here.

An evidence of the public confidence in the old established firm of Greene Music Co. and their Piano Club is the fact that many people telephone or write in to join without ever seeing the Piano.

The Deal and The Instrument

The deal is a straight-out offer of 20 Pianos. The instruments are of the most reliable, trustworthy character—THE ENNIS (Boudoir style), in which the real value is put on the INSIDE rather than in fancy cases, although the cases are of genuine walnut, mahogany or oak. We have known the instruments for years. We know them to be as reliable a Piano as was ever put in a home. They are made by good Canadian workmen in one of the best factories in the world.

Club Books Open On Saturday

The Club books open at 8.00 a.m. Saturday. In other words, Saturday will be the first day you can join the Club. The Pianos, however, are now on display in our warerooms, where you can see and hear them. You are cordially invited. The Piano will be delivered upon your becoming a member, making the initial payment of $6.00 and the two succeeding payments of $2.00 each. During the first few days of the Club's life we hope to give everyone their choice of three woods—mahogany, walnut or oak.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

ANNIE

This quaint but charming and undeniably popular name has no etymological right to existence. Though it signifies grace and is of course closely related to Anne and Anna, it has no scientific excuse for being. It seems rather to be the natural endearment rising out of the chill dignity of Anne.

It is hardly possible that Annie may have come to us by a more direct route than colloquialism. A favorite name in early Gaelic times was Anne, signifying joy. The pronunciation of this name is very similar to Annie. In England, however, there has arisen a fashion of christening Annie, probably from some confusion as to the spelling of Ann or Anne.

With the exception of Anna, the quaint name of Annie is the most popular of all forms in this country. Anne is piquant and Anna slightly forbidding, but Annie appeals to the popular taste and Yankee love of endearment.

Amber is Annie's talismanic stone. It will bring her health and guard her from disease. Tuesday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Dad, darling, won't you please go on to bed? You look utterly exhausted," Faith pleaded with her father. "It's nearly twelve o'clock, dear. I'll wait up for Cherry and tell her how much she has hurt and distressed you. I don't think she'll do it again."

Mr. Lane closed the worn, limp Bible over a finger to mark his place and gazed up at his daughter with stern, sad eyes. "I'm going to wait up till she comes if I have to sit here all night," he told her implacably.

"I've been reading Proverbs, Faith, and it's come home to me this night that I'm to blame for Cherry's waywardness. No one controlled her when she was little, and now she don't know the meaning of the word "obey."

"I'm willing to take the blame, Dad," Faith's voice trembled slightly. "I've realized tonight that I've been a mighty poor sister to Joy, too. The poor little thing hardly knows what a mother is, and I, who should have been a second mother to her, have let her grow up like a little weed."

"There, there, daughter," Jim Lane put stiff, awkward arms around his eldest daughter. "I don't know what would have become of the Lane family without you."

"Are you two goin' to set up all night?"

They both started guiltily, for they had not heard Mrs. Lane's footsteps. She stood in the doorway. She had been crying and there were streaks of tears down her puffy cheeks.

"I can't sleep," her mother whimpered pathetically. "I'm worried about Cherry. You all don't tell me anything any more. I'm just like an old shoe that the rest of you don't want lying around in the way."

"Mother Mother, you mustn't talk like that! We don't want to bother you, that's all. We're waiting up for Cherry. Dad wanted to have a little talk with her—about her wedding," she added hastily as her mother flushed with instant resentment.

"It ain't about her wedding," Mr. Lane contradicted his daughter flatly. "If you really want to be let in on things, Martha, I'll tell you the truth. Cherry's cuttin' up scandalous, and I'm goin' to do my best to put a stop to it."

"You're always pickin' on Cherry!" Mrs. Lane began to cry again. "Never a kind word for the poor little thing. Here she's marryin' a rich man, to help out her family—"

"Has she been sayin' that?" Jim Lane demanded in a thunderous voice. "By God—"

"Now, Jim Lane, don't you swear at me!" his wife's tears dried in a blaze of anger. "Even if you do act like a pig-headed fool about Mr. Cluny and his money, you know good and well he'll see that Cherry's mother and sisters and brother don't suffer after she marries him. I think it's real noble of her to sacrifice herself for her family."

"It ain't about Mr. Cluny," Jim Lane cut in angrily. "If you want to know the truth, she's traipsin' around with that blackguard Chris Wiley again, and I'm going to put a stop to it if I have to lock her in the house."

"I hear a car, Dad," Faith ran to the door and opened it a crack. "It's Cherry and—oh, it's Bill Warren with her. He's coming in, too. She's been with Bill, Dad." Her voice was almost hysterical with gladness. "You'd better go back to bed, Mother. Bill's coming in"

"You go get my kimono," Mrs. Lane stepped into the dining room out of sight of the arriving couple.

When Faith returned with her mother's old, dark blue corduroy dressing robe, she heard Cherry's light, gay laugh and the deeper note of Bill Warren's pleasant voice.

"But Daddy, darling, it's twelve o'clock. You ought to have been asleep hours ago! Poor, tired old Daddy, reading his Bible like the angel he is! I'll bet he's read it clean through a dozen times, Bill. No wonder I'm such a good little girl, with a pious old Daddy like him!"

"I want to have a talk with you, young lady." Faith heard her father's stern voice reply. "Send your young man home. I'm not going to be put off this time."

Mrs. Lane, wrapping the kimono about her vast body, stepped into the living room. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, Jim Lane, ordering Cherry's company off the place. Sit down, Bill," she nodded and smiled at the embarrassed young man. "You come along to bed with me, Jim Lane. You've cut enough didoes for one night."

Mr. Lane rose, and extended a hand to Bill Warren. "I've been mindin' Martha a good many years, Mr. Warren. I'm sorry if I sounded rude just now. Good night. I'll speak to you in the morning, miss," he turned to glare for a moment at Cherry, whose bright eyes met his with untroubled gayety.

"Don't you go, Faith," Cherry whispered, as her mother and father left the room.

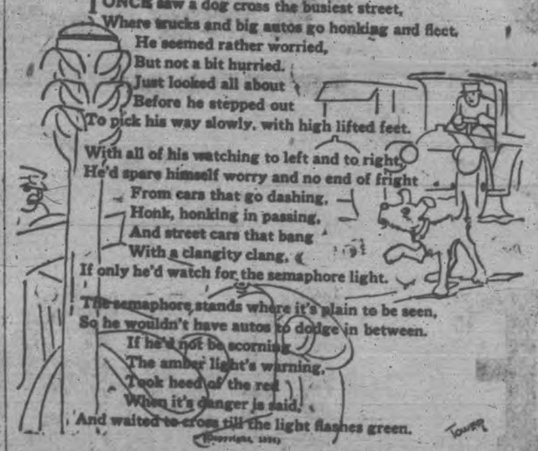
A Metropolitan Dog

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WE watched a dog cross the street in traffic and marveled at the discretion he showed. He stepped from the curb watching oncoming traffic, advanced slowly, waited for a car, dodged a careless driver and reached the middle of the street where he paused definitely. Then he turned his attention to the traffic flowing the other way and proceeded in the same manner till the opposite curb received him in safety. "Isn't he a wise dog?" I said. "Yes," answered Joan, who has been repeatedly instructed in traffic etiquette, "but if he's as smart as that why doesn't he watch the semaphore?" Just then a woman left the curb and proceeded to ignore semaphore law and to interfere with traffic progress by threading her way in and out between moving cars. "Oh," exclaimed Joan, "I know, that dog is just like that, lady, they think they're too smart to have to watch a semaphore!"



I ONCE saw a dog cross the busiest street,
Where trucks and big autos go honking and fleet.
He seemed rather worried,
But not a bit hurried.
Just looked all about
Before he stepped out
To pick his way slowly, with high lifted feet.

With all of his watching to left and to right,
He'd spare himself worry and no end of fright
From cars that go dashing,
Honk, honking in passing,
And street cars that bang
With a clangity clang,
If only he'd watch for the semaphore light.

The semaphore stands where it's plain to be seen,
So he wouldn't have autos to dodge in between.
If he'd not be scorning
The amber light's warning,
Took heed of the red
When it's danger is said,
And waited to cross till the light flashes green.

DRESS

This white crepe satin frock made for the South is trimmed with shaded green fringe and a band of green on the crepe de chine slip.

• • •

There are some of us who are very much more sensitive to the effect of color than others—just as some are much keener about musical tones than others. For instance, you may see a red frock draped in a new and original manner at the side—and the first thing you see is a frock that is interestingly draped. After that you notice that it is red. Or you may see a black frock—all black save for a single enormous green rose on one shoulder, and you may see nothing but the smart black dress. Later you may reflect that there was a rose on the shoulder. Yes, a green rose, you realize when you come to think about it.

There are some people you know who would have seen first a red dress. They would have felt a sort of thrill, pleasant or otherwise, at the sight of an all-red dress—the drapery they might not even have noticed. And the green shoulder flower would have been the first thing to strike their notice when seeing the new black frock.

The greatest faults in color are perhaps committed by women who have not themselves this keen sensitiveness to color. With them color is a second consideration.

Almost all the great dress designers are sensitive to color as well as to line. So important is color with them that the color is definitely linked with the design in the creation of any frock. Certain designs call for certain colors or certain color combinations. Certain frocks could be reproduced in any one of certain colors but not in others. There are black frocks that they could not conscientiously produce in anything but black and green or blue or rose, but not in black. A certain black evening frock must be supplemented with a red fan. The designer had a red fan in mind when he made the frock. Of course you can do as you choose, but a green fan just wouldn't do with that particular frock.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The talismanic gem for today is the amethyst. It was declared by the great Leonardo to make its wearer astute, shrewd in business and logical. The traveler and the soldier should adopt the amethyst as a charm, since it is sure to bring them good luck.

The Romans believed that those born on an anniversary of this date should wear an emerald, the stone sacred to Venus, goddess of love. Those wearing it were believed to be endowed with unusually clear vision.

The verbena is today's flower. Unforseen danger cannot approach the house which it adorns.

'DRAMA IN LIFE' LECTURE TOPIC

MUCH APPRECIATED.

An interesting and rather out-of-the-ordinary address on "The Drama in Life," was delivered before the Women's Canadian Club in the auditorium of the Public Library yesterday afternoon, by Charles Bell, K.C., of Hamilton, who illustrated the latter part of his discourse by personal experiences gleaned from his experience on the stage as a producer of dramas and musical plays.

Mr. Bell's address had an odd flavor by reason of the varying nature of his avocations. When he spoke of his experiences in legal life, his delivery was marked by clarity and pungency of utterance, and his relation of outstanding incidents encountered on the stage had a histrionic touch in the dramatic fervor of his style. He opened his discourse with a regret for the passing, to a great extent, of an active interest in the drama, in recent years. While the drama itself had suffered through this neglect, he thought that the public had suffered to a greater extent, in a mental, emotional and spiritual way, "because there is nothing that is quite so important to the individual as the dramatic side of expression of feeling.' The tendency toward suppression of emotional feeling, he said, had stunted and warped modern life to a great extent. "Once, the very greatest of events in the life of the world were dependent upon the exercise of the best and the most powerful emotions. Today, more is the pity, we try to conceal from ourselves and from others the fact that we have any emotions at all."

The Biblical stories of the Old and New Testament were cited as examples of the dramatic way in which appeal was made through them to the emotions of men, and in the early church, the same element of dramatic expression was used in ceremonies and ritual. In the days of Drake and Hawkins and Frobisher, colorful figures carried out this idea of dramatic expression.

"Today, a lot of the glamor and the color and light has passed out of the life of our national figures. The man who forms a great corporation or who heads a great egg trust is not dramatic to us. The boy who seeks an education today goes through "prep" school and then on to college, where he studies the wonderful imagery and the wonderful pictorial ideas of Shakespeare, sees the red glow and the tinsel of Marlowe, the quaint fancies of Goldsmith and the glitter and sparkle of Sheridan. Then he goes out to the world with his degree and becomes a lawyer or a doctor or a bond salesman, or even, God help him, he may go into politics, and he finds that everything in his life is fighting against expression of the emotional side."

Mr. Bell quoted some beautiful passages from Wordsworth's "Ode to Immortality," as illustrative of the romantic side of life, and spoke of the importance of keeping alive the emotional side of our natures, "because it is through expression of our better side that we benefit ourselves."

Going on to speak of his favorites in literature, he mentioned among the five great writers whom he regarded as most notable: George Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde, Henrik Ibsen, Sir Arthur Pinero and John Galsworthy. He quoted briefly from Wilde's satirical comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," and related some of the story of Galsworthy's play, "Justice," illustrating the dramatist's power of centering interest, not on one character, as is usually the case, but on five different people in the play, with all of whom the audience becomes sympathetic in differing ways.

Mr. Bell also related several humorous anecdotes gleaned from his experience at the Bar, citing in one instance the Polack who, through a clever tongue, had just cleared himself of a charge of bootlegging. He was mainly interested, on being released from court, in at once getting hold of his automobile, as he had a large load of liquor to take charge of that afternoon.

Mr. Bell's recollections with regard to stage life centered about several stories illustrating the loyalty of stage people to their profession and the manner in which they respond to sudden calls on their time and skill. He was very enthusiastic about this attribute of actors and actresses, and thought that much of the so-called decadence of the stage was due, as in so many other callings in life, to the actions of one or two who might not be as careful as others. He mentioned during his discourse, several of his own productions, in "A Dislocated Honeymoon," "Thy Neighbor's Wife," and a musical play entitled "Elsie."

Mr. Bell was also very enthusiastic over a project to form a small Canadian circuit for the production of plays such as the Provincetown Players, the McDougall Street Players and the Theatre Guild have charge of, and asked for the support of the local Women's Canadian Club, should such a project ever reach a satisfactory climax.

A hearty appreciation of Mr. Bell's fine address was voiced at its conclusion by the president, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, in the chair, and was supported by a standing vote from the audience. Mrs. Allan spoke of the dilatory manner in which local audiences respond to efforts of theatrical managers to bring good plays to the city, and thought that the good audiences which patronized such performances as the "Scandals" and "Bringing Up Father" were proof of the type of shows that Peterborough people seemed to prefer. "As managers must live, like everyone else, they bring what the people patronize best."

LOVE'S LABOR NEVER LOST

(By Alma Whitaker.)

One hundred years ago George Borrow was inspired to translate the Gospel into the Manchurian language. It took him years of patient endeavor. A large edition was printed at his own expense.

And then he discovered that the Manchurians did not speak Manchurian, but that the regular Chinese language had supplanted it, to an even more complete extent than English has supplanted Irish. It broke his heart. He felt that years of love's labor had been lost.

But it wasn't lost. It has just proven a happy find for the Bible Society. An English traveller penetrated far into the interior of unexplored Manchuria a couple of years ago—eighty days on camel-back. And he discovered three tribes of ancient Manchurians who spoke nothing but the ancient original Manchurian language.

A young man in Ireland heard about this discovery, and recalled his grandfather telling him of the wasted life work of old George Borrow, and the young man told the Bible Society about it. Investigation discovered some of the fated Manchurian Bibles—and within an incredibly short time those ancient Manchurian tribes were learning to read the Gospel in their own language. The soul of George Borrow must be rejoicing.

In another case, nearer home, I know a little old lady that is seeing her love's labor rescued for her. In her girlhood she became fired with the desire to minister to prisoners, to change jail conditions, to build sanitary, healthy institutions in which prisoners could be restored to life and society after they had paid their penalty. She devoted her life and her income to this cause, and particularly concentrating on her own city.

But the years passed and no one seemed to take the slightest interest, evince any sympathy in her scheme. No conditions were too bad for the criminal, seemed to be the popular attitude.

Just before the war, when she was nearing 70, things began to look more hopeful. She published an exposure of unwholesome conditions in her own city's jail. She fired the clubwomen with the cause. And just when a committee was formed to plan a new jail and better conditions; the war held up all ventures. Nothing was done, all interest in her scheme died, and she felt that her life work had been wasted.

But to-day a new Hall of Justice stands in her city, a model jail, where at least prisoners can maintain their health and leave prison in as good, if not better, physical condition than when they entered it. And any number of human innovations have been adopted to give prisoners a chance to redeem themselves. The only fly in the ointment of her joy is that no one remembers it was she who started this reform upon its way. But she is very old and she sighs happily. After all, personal recognition can mean very little to her now, but the fact that her love's labor has born fruit is very precious. It was not wasted. And she is pathetically grateful that she has seen that new Hall of Justic rise up in her city before she died.

I can never believe that love's labor is ever really wanted sometimes we may not live to see it materialize, but it's strength, its ideals go marching on. If the idea is born in unselfish love, if we put our heart and soul into it, sometimes, somewhere it will bear good fruit—and our soul will be blessed for it.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SATURDAY JANUARY 8 1927

Good and evil influences are prevalent to-day, according to astrology. The morning is more favorable for Earth activities than the afternoon or evening.

In the early hours it is held lucky to seek employment or to solicit financial aid.

Politicians who have any sort of an axe to grind should go to the grindstone shortly after sun-up, the seers declare.

Serious schisms in political parties again are prognosticated. They may split states as well as parties.

While this rule prevails there may be a tendency to hasty speech. It is well to count ten before indulging in any sarcasm under this direction of the stars.

This is a menacing rule for aviation and aviators. Accidents are indicated and there may be heated discussions where government appropriations are under consideration.

According to foreign seer, San Diego may be visited by severe storms and seismic shocks, since that city is subject to the same planetary direction that will affect the states of Oregon and Washington.

Sedition and revolution in India are to spread under aspects that are read as exceedingly threatening to the British Empire.

A man who will be practically a dictator in England is to rise to power, according to a London astrologer.

Germany, Austria and Russia are to become powerful allies, according to this same authority.

Mars is supposed to give renewed activity to radical political parties in all parts of Europe, which is to see startling upheavals, it is foretold.

Neptune is in a place that is believed to encourage socialism along with militarism, a combination hitherto deemed not probable.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of change and travel in which idealism will have an opportunity to develop.

Children born on this day probably will have scientific gifts. Many under this sign have become pioneers.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

The correct way to cook fish is a subject that has been discussed and argued about for centuries. Walton, noted English angler, has something to say on the subject, and tells us that trout should be cooked "with much hard stale beer, vinegar and a little white wine and water." Most old-time epicures stipulate that fish should be cooked over a wood fire, and some go so far as to state the sort of wood employed. There seems to be a general feeling among them that fish should not be washed, but wiped with a clean, dry cloth, and some are of the opinion that when frying fish it should never be dipped in flour or crumbs.

We don't hear much about paper-bag cookery nowadays, but there are still chefs who cook delicately flavored fish in oiled paper. Grilling or broiling is an excellent way to cook many sorts of fish, and this should be done if possible over coals. However, with care the broiler of a gas stove may be used as a substitute. If you want to simplify this task of broiling or grilling fish get a pair of fish tongs so that the fish may be lifted on the grill without breaking it.

In frying fish many good cooks prefer to use good olive oil. There seems to be a feeling that lard imparts an unpleasant flavor. A tool called a fish slice is a great help in frying fish. Small fish are perhaps best cooked in quite deep fat and held in a wire basket, but large pieces of fish are conveniently cooked in a pan with fat or oil on the bottom.

NEW WAYS WITH OLD POTATOES

Potatoes Rebaked.—To serve six people you will need three rather large potatoes which should be scrubbed and baked in the skins. Cut in halves and scoop out the insides into a stewpan, add one beaten egg yolk, two level tablespoons of grated cheese, two tablespoons of milk, two level tablespoons of melted butter, a little chopped parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Stir well. Beat up two whites of egg and add to the mixture. Fold in lightly and refill the potato shells. Brush over with the beaten yolk of an egg, place on a baking tin and bake for about fifteen minutes. Left-over baked potatoes may be used in this way, but the dish is a little better when freshly baked potatoes are used.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

NAPOLEON III AND MARGUERITE BOULANGER

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

One of the strange characters that has passed across the stage of the world's history is Napoleon III, the third son of Louis Bonaparte, brother of the first Napoleon. After all the fortunes of his celebrated family had turned to veritable ashes, a derided, exiled and laughed-at pretender himself, this man hung tenaciously to his dream of a French throne—and the miracle came to pass when his phantasy became a reality and the pretender was enthroned emperor of France, Napoleon III.

During his long exile and afterward, Napoleon III was never happy without a love, which, in this case, meant a mistress. In prison, where he once found himself, he managed to interest a serving maid, for want of a higher born companion, and his intimate gallery of women ranged from Italian noblewomen to English ladies of easy morality.

One of this Bonaparte's loves was Marguerite Boulanger, a French girl. Marguerite's real name was Julie Lebouef and she was born a peasant. Julie was buxom and attractive, and was desirous of seeing the world. So when a handsome young man came to her village and made love to her, she listened thankfully and left with him for Nantes. The young man turned out to be a procurer and at Nantes put her under the care of a protector.

Julie accepted her fate without tears and having advanced so far she went further and came to Paris. There she became Marguerite Boulanger and entered her name in the Who's Who of the demi-mondaine and there also, in his researches, Napoleon found her.

"Chere belle: Come and see me on Monday—you know where.

"We shall not stay there for long as I want to see you in your own home. I shall take you to a charming villa which I have bought and furnished for you."

And as a proper sequence, comes this note from Marguerite:

Dear little father: I have bought two fine horses; they will do honour to your taste and purse. They cost 25,000 francs and that is not too much to give me pleasure. Give orders that that sum be paid to the bearer. I will return the amount in kisses."

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RED BOX

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"Mother, what is Daddicums doing down cellar?" asked Jingle Longears one evening in the hollow stump school.

"He is fixing the furnace, I guess," answered Bubbles, another little rabbit girl.

"No, he is hammering and pounding," said Troubles, who was sister to Bubbles. "And he doesn't need to do that to the furnace."

"Oh, well, I suppose he is doing something," spoke Mrs. Longears. "And you children had better be doing your homework or the Lady Mouse Teacher will keep you after classes in the Hollow Stump School tomorrow."

So the forty 'leven little rabbit boys and girls (forty twelve, if you count Baby Bunty, as I do), the forty twelve began studying again, while Uncle Wiggily was down cellar.

After a while Bubbles said:

"I want Daddicums to hear my spelling lessons. I'm going to take my book down there where he is in the cellar."

"So am I! And I! And I!" shouted Jingle and Jangle and Stumble and Bumble and all the others.

Uncle Wiggily climbed the icicle ladder

There was such a rush of rabbit children to go down cellar to see what mysterious thing Uncle Wiggily was doing that the bunny gentleman exclaimed:

"What's the matter up there? Is the bungalow tumbling down?"

"Oh, no, Daddicums Uncle Wiggily," sweetly answered Baby Bunty. "That was only Stumble falling off a chair." And so it was, for the little rabbit boy, who was always falling, more or less, had fallen more this time, and, in his hurry, had toppled off his chair.

Down the cellar stairs, after Stumble had picked himself up, clattered the forty twelve little rabbits, and they saw Mr. Longears at his work-bench, with a red brush in his paw.

"What are you doing?" asked Jingle, "I mean if you please," she added, remembering to be polite.

"I am making a box," answered Uncle Wiggily. "To be more correct I am painting red a box I have just made," and he pointed with his brush to the bench on which was a small box, the painting almost finished.

"What is in the box?" asked Bubbles, remembering how near Christmas it was. "What is in the red box, Daddicums?"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Don't you wish you knew! Ha! Ha!" and he pretended to get in front of the box which made the rabbit children all the more eager to see.

"Oh, please tell us!" begged Jickle.

"If you promise that, I'll tell you," chuckled the bunny gentleman. Then, walking on his tiptoes and whispering loudly he said: "There is nothing at all in the box. Nothing at all!"

"Oh, Daddicums!" cried all the little bunnies.

"You may look for yourselves," went on Mr. Longears. With his brush he raised the lid of the red box and they could all see nothing inside except red paint. Bubbles leaned so far over to look to make sure she was missing nothing, that when Uncle Wiggily closed the cover he nearly caught Bubble's nose in it.

"I am making this red box to hold my collar buttons," said Uncle Wiggily. "Always I am losing collar buttons. They go rolling away. But I thought if I gave them a pretty red box to live in they would stay home. So now you know all about the red box and what is in it—nothing now, though soon there will be collar buttons."

The little bunnies were going up out of the cellar when, all at once, the snooping Fuzzy Fox came in the outside door which had been left open. Uncle Wiggily asked the Fox what he wanted.

"I want your ears!" barked the bad chap. "But first I want to see what is in that red box."

"There is nothing at all in it," answered the bunny. "Look!" The Fox leaned close over to look, as than did the little rabbit girl, and, all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily banged the cover of the box shut and caught the nose of the Fox.

"Wowch! Ow! Schoch! Let me go!" howled the bad chap, and when Mr. Longears had properly pinched the bad chap's nose he opened the red box and let him go. So there was no ear nibbling that night.

And if the rag doll's red dress doesn't turn green in the night, trying to look like a cucumber, I'll tell you again about Uncle Wiggily.

CRITICISES USE OF THE TERM "HE'S YELLOW"

Never Were Words More Abused Than in Sporting Field.

MOST UNDESERVED.

Recalls Coveleskie's Case as Promising Southpaw Back in 1908.

"He's yellow."

That is a much-used expression in the world of sport. Never were three words more abused.

Being yellow, is supposed to designate lack of courage, a tendency to quit in the pinches or mere failure to deliver, regardless of the reason.

Never was a word used more indiscriminately than the word "yellow" was applied to sport. I know of a score of cases where it was tacked on some athlete and stuck, despite the fact that said individual anything but deserved it.

The recent appointment of George Moriarty to manager Detroit, and Donie Bush to pilot Pittsburgh, recalls a very interesting yarn that has the word "yellow" back of the story.

Coveleskie's Case.

In the fall of 1908, there sprung into prominence a southpaw by the name of Harry Coveleskie. Fame came his way literally overnight. In the short space of a week he scored three victories over the New York Giants.

At the time the Giants were in a bitter struggle for the pennant and the success of Coveleskie just about killed the chances of McGraw's aggregation.

The Giants argued that Coveleskie was yellow, that he would quit under a tight pull, that he couldn't stand the "riding" that is a part of baseball.

The fact that Coveleskie passed to the minors early the next spring made it seem as if the Giants had the right dope. A few years in the "bushes" and he came back to the Cincinnati Reds for a second trial.

He tarried only a short time, for he simply couldn't get the opposition out. That seemed to settle the question as to Coveleskie's courage.

Unique Suggestion.

Some years later, the Detroit club, in need of pitchers, decided to give Coveleskie his third chance to make good in the majors.

In the Detroit infield at the time, were George Moriarty at third and Donie Bush at short. These two players did all the "riding" for the Detroit club.

The pair always kept up an incessant chatter at the Tiger pitcher and often the comment was far from complimentary and decidedly sarcastic.

At one of the players' meetings prior to the joining of the club by Coveleskie, his case was thoroughly discussed.

Moriarty held to the belief that Coveleskie was anything but yellow and could be made into a great pitcher if properly handled. He advanced the idea that a sensitive nature rather than a weak heart was the trouble.

The Detroit club agreed that Coveleskie could pitch and that the best way to get results from him was to constantly pat him on the back. The task of making Coveleskie believe in himself was put up to Moriarty and Bush.

Theory Succeeded.

I worked many ball games in which Coveleskie figured as the Tiger pitcher and never once during his connection with the club did I hear a single player make any adverse comment as to his ability.

I have, however, heard both Moriarty and Bush talk to themselves in a whisper expressing a contrary opinion to the words of praise they had just showered on the southpaw, but Coveleskie didn't get it.

Under such treatment Coveleskie thrived, became one of the best southpaws in the American League. No spot was too tough for him. Any time the Tigers were hard pressed Coveleskie would invariably request Manager Jennings that he be permitted to pitch the game.

The word yellow as applied to Coveleskie was most undeserved, yet for years he worked under that handicap. Sport is filled with similar cases.

SPEED AND COMBINATION

Speed and combination on the forward line are the strong points of the Toronto St. Pats this season. Dr. Carson (LEFT), Irvin Bailey (RIGHT), are the two chiefly responsible for this aggression.

MILLBROOK Jan. 7—The inter-rink play for the Allen cup began on Monday evening, according to schedule, and considerable interest was manifested.

Rinks 1 and 2, and 3 and 4 were in the start-off, and a particularly brilliant play by Skip H. B. Allen, the donor of the trophy, brought the 'gallery to its feet, and won the victory for his rink by 1 point. It was a 'called' shot, and its skilful execution guarantees it a place on the list of those recalled with enthusiasm by devotees of the 'roarin' game' when they happen to meet in conclave, and relate reminiscences of the ice, either of the current season, or belonging to former years. ALL CHARGES FALLEN FLAT

No Voice Raised To Support Allegations of "Swede" Risberg.

AWAIT GANDIL.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (United Press) — The precedent of the Cobb and Speaker case seemed the only leg on which charges of 'graft' against Detroit and Chicago players in 1917 series, could stand yesterday.

Twenty-six baseball players on Wednesday denied the statement of Charles "Swede" Risberg that a series between the two teams in 1917 and another in 1919 were "framed."

Risberg's charges stand alone until the arrival of Chick Gandil, who has said he would corroborate Risberg's claims.

Judge Landis, in deciding the case, will find himself in a dangerous position.

If he finds that Risberg's accusations do not carry the weight of the statements of baseball's great stars, he will be asked whether he took the word of a disgruntled player, Hubert (Dutch) Leonard, in the earlier case, and did not mete out the same punishment to those accused by another disgruntled man, Risberg.

A half dozen others besides Gandil will testify before the baseball commissioner to-day. They include Bill James, former Detroit pitcher, who was said to have been the man paid by the White Sox.

The Sox players admitted that they contributed to a pot, but said it was a reward to Detroit pitchers for beating the strong Boston club.

SYMPATHY SHOWN BY TOWN LEAGUE

Resolution of Condolence For Jack Cowell Passed By Executive.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 7.—The Town Hockey League executive has forwarded the following resolution of sympathy to Jack Cowell, one of the stars of the Town League, whose father died a short time ago:

Town Hockey League.

Dear Jack:

As a group of fellows who associate with you daily in the active affairs of life, we yould like you to know that in your hour of bereavement you have our sincere sympathy, and so we try to express ourselves in this way. Words at such a time fail to express one's deepest thoughts, and we know that no words of ours will heal the wound made by the loss of a father. However, we would like you to know that we feel deeply for you at this time and also for your mother and sisters. We also feel that your deepest comfort will come from Him to Whom your father has been called, who, we believe, in His gracious providence is too wise to err and too good to be unkind.

Yours faithfully,

J. H. Bell, president; H. D. Atkinson, secretary-treasurer.

Riviera Tennis Clubs Say Lenglen Took Right Step

MONTE CARLO, Jan. 7.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen's defection from the ranks of amateur tennis has not caused a single murmur of protest along the Riviera. Leading club secretaries seem agreed that "Mlle. Lenglen did the right thing at the right time." They believe she was at the top of her form last season and that another two years would have seen her fighting hard to keep her title. "If Suzanne can come home and retired in 1928 with an income of $5,000 a year there is no one who would question her move," one said.

ENGLISH TEAMS SETTLED DOWN IN RACE FOR CUP COMPETITION

League Schedule Practically Be Suspended For Most Part Saturday.

WEAKEST OUSTED.

Title Holders Drawn Against Second-Rate For Initial Appearance.

LONDON, January 7. Canadian Press Cable. — The league schedule of the English Football Association, will be suspended for the most part on Saturday next, when, all qualifying and preliminary rounds over, the league clubs get down in real earnest to the business of the annual English Cup competition.

Saturday's games will see 64 teams, comprising the two major divisions, and what is left of the minor divisions after the elimination contests, striving to get over the third hurdle on their passage to Wembley Stadium.

For the first and second string clubs, the gains signalize their first appearance in this season's competition, the previous tilts having taken place for the purpose of ousting the weaker brethren.

It is not unnatural that chief interest will be centred upon the present cup-holders, Bolton Wanderers, who defeated Manchester City in the final round last year by one goal to nothing. For their initial appearance the title holders are drawn against a second string club, Blackpool, and the game is slated for the seaside resort. To Bolton's supporters this should not support an insuperable obstacle for their team inasmuch as Bolton are running strong in the league game this season, while in their own department Blackpool are from fair to mediocre.

Last year's finalists, Manchester City, have a tougher nut to crack when they appear at Birmingham against the Midlanders. While the league game is totally different from the brand of soccer served up at the cup-ties, it is nevertheless some criterion of form, and it is noted that Manchester have lately suffered a bad relapse. For a while they were carrying everything their own way and looked as if they were headed straight for the championship of the second division, but a slump set in about a month ago, since when they have run into a string of four straight defeats. This should augur well for Birmingham's chances and the Midlanders are ranking on Manchester's continuing with them.

The first division leaders, Newcastle United, are regarded as having a "soft" thing on their own ground, opposed by Notts County, and their advance into the fourth round is confidently predicted on the Tyneside. Notts County have been indifferent throughout the season and cannot be accepted as formidable antagonists for the Northumbrians.

Sunderland are engaged away from home at Leeds, and this ought to furnish an interesting encounter. In the one league game played between these teams this season, at Leeds, the engagement terminated in a two-goal draw; Leeds have the advantage of locale on Saturday and may be relied on to get every benefit they can out of it.

The Metropolitan district, however, will see the most stirring game of the round, for at Upton Park, the homesters, West Ham United, will entertain their ancient rivals, Tottenham Hotspur. This pair have not yet met this season in a league game, nor will they do so until April 15, with the return game April 18, so that their draw in the third round of the cup competition is to some extent unique. On league play there is little between them, both teams travelling in close proximity in the standing but where the 'Spurs have displayed a tendency to weaken, the Hamers have been staging a strong come back in recent weeks. Whatever the result Londoners are assured of a sterling contest, and it is anticipated that a large crowd will be attracted.

The other first string London club are engaged at Dranall Lane where they meet Sheffield United, the cup-winners of two years ago.

Three Welsh teams, Cardiff City of the first division, Swansea Town of the second, and Rhyl, who play in the northern section of the Welsh National League, will uphold the honor of of the principality, with Cardiff entertaining Aston Villa, Swansea at home to Bury, and Rhyl the guests of Darlington.

Middlesborough, leaders of the second division, are the hosts of Leicester City, and in view of the strong game being played by each of these clubs some strenuous football is bound to ensue.

Both Third Division leaders, Stoke City of the Northern Section, and Swindon Town of the Southern have already been eliminated.

ELKS TAKE LEAD AT CAMPBELLFORD

Menie Pulls Out 4 To 2 Victory Over the Mill.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 7—There were two exciting contests in the Town League games at Covert's Arena Wednesday night. The Elks went to the front of the Midget series by defeating the Bear Cats 2 to 1 while Menie pulled out a 4 to 2 win over the Mill.

The Bear Cats had the best of the first period and Heptonstall in the Elks net was kept busy. He stopped a multitude of shots, but was finally beaten by "Doug" Runions from close in. In the dressing room at half time the Elks absorbed some advice from their handlers and played more effectively in the last half. They had slightly the better of the period and Harry Lambert bulged the twine twice to win the game for the Elks.

The goaltending of Heptonstall was the best shown by any of the Midgets so far. Lambert was the best of the two teams out there. Dooher and Hendy showed up well for the Elks and Dunk and Runions were the pick of the Bear Cats.

The Midget teams appear evenly matched and are dishing up some good hockey. They go at top speed all the time and there are few dull moments while the puck is in play.

The first period of the Senior game was all Menie. The Mill boys couldn't get going and play was in the Mill end most of the period. Kerr opened the scoring half way through the period batting the puck in from a scrimmage in front of the Mill goal. Rannie staged a rink length rush through the centre to make it 2 to 0. Then the Mill took a hand in attacking and had every man up front when Kerr broke away alone and beat Stewart from close in, making it 3 to 0 at the first rest.

The Mill went better in the second period. They swarmed around the Menie goal and kept the Orange and Black shirted gang hemmed in their own end for minutes at a time. Ayrhart got the only score of the period when he grabbed the rebound of Lambert's shot and shoved it past Owens.

The last period was a repetition of the second and the Mill had the better of the argument. Ayrhart scored again when he relieved a Menie player of the puck, at the blue line and walked right in on top of Owens. It was a nice bit of work by the Mill wing man. The Mill continued to press and it looked as if they might sew up the game when a break in the game that at first seemed in their favor, turned to the advantage of Menie and their chances were gone. Stewart cracked Kerr over the toes when the Menie star crossed in front of his cage and Kerr swung his stick over Stewart's back, and then started in with his fists and both teams were joined in the fracas. When the smoke cleared away, Stewart and Ayrhart of the Mill and Kerr, Rannie and Coulter of Menie were in the bull pen. Lambert went between the posts for the Mill and they had three men to Menies' two out in centre ice, but before any damage had been done Cochrane was chased and Lynn got away from the Mill pair and had no trouble beating the substitute goalie making it 4 to 2 for Menie.

Both goalies turned in a smart performance and Kerr and Rannie were the bright lights for Menie. Ayrhart was the most effective for the Mill. Cochrane and Brown could never get going right; both are bound to show improvement; and Wilks and Lambert turned in pretty fair games.

TUNNEY SIGNED TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST RICKARD'S CHOICE

Signs of What Is Known To Be the Largest Guarantee Ever Made.

AFTER JULY 1ST.

Promoter Has Six Candidates in Mind as Possible Contender.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 7.—Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, yesterday agreed to defend his title next September against any contender selected by Tex Rickard, promoter, for what was declared to be the largest guarantee ever made for a fight.

The contract, it was learned, calls for Tunney's services any time after July 1 and provides he is not to engage in any title bout in the meantime.

Rickard has six candidates in mind to oppose the champion. They are Jack Dempsey, former titleholder; Jack Sharkey, Jack Delaney, Paolino Ucudun, Jim Maloney and Paul Berlenbach. Starting next month he plans to hold elimination tournaments, the first being Berlenbach and Paolino. The survivor of the eliminations would get a crack at Dempsey, and the winner of this bout would be awarded the privilege of fighting Tunney.

In addition to the promoter and the champion those present were Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, and Dudley Field Malone, his legal adviser.

The contract was signed yesterday afternoon. The agreement is reported to call for a flat guarantee of $400,000 for Tunney, and 30 per cent. of net proceeds over $1,000,000. The percentage is expected to net Tunney as much or more than Jack Dempsey received in the Philadelphia encounter.

Rickard is to post $100,000 by January 11 and another $100,000 May 1. He is to announce Tunney's opponent not later than June 15.

Peace With Gibson.

"Rickard's bid exceeds that made by Humbert Fugazy by a considerable amount, and in addition to that I am delighted to be able to give my services to the promoter who made it possible for me to win the championship," Tunney said.

Just before the agreement was signed Tunney and Billy Gibson settled all reports that there was friction between them by signing a new agreement whereby Gibson continued as Tunney's manager.

Fugazy's Offer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—"Tex must have offered Tunney more than I could," Humbert Fugazy, promoter, who had bid for Gene Tunney's services, said yesterday when told by the United Press that the heavyweight champion had signed a contract with Tex Rickard.

"Now that I've lost, I don't mind saying that I offered Tunney $830,000 cash to fight Jack Delaney. If Rickard's proposition was better than that, I compliment him."

Asked if he would consider promoting a heavyweight championship fight before July 1, when the Tunney-Rickard contract goes into effect, Fugazy said:

"No, the time's too short for that."

SOX OUTFIELDER SETS A RECORD

Takes Part in Three Double Plays as an Outfielder.

NEEDS ACCURATE ARM.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—Despite the lively ball, a strong, accurate throwing arm is much to be prized by a big league outfielder.

Last season Ira Flagstead of the Boston Red Sox, broke a record that has stood for 25 years, by taking part in three double plays as an outfielder.

On one occasion, Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Indians figured in two double plays. As a matter of facstor he hogged both of them, making the two-ply killings unassisted.

However, it was Flagstead who set a new American League record and tied the National League Way back in 1905, Jack McCarthy of that organization, figured in a trio of them.

Flagstead established his record on April 19, Patriots' Day in Boston, in a game with the Philadelphia Athletics. He was stationed in center field.

On two occasions, with runners on third, batters hit long drives to center field on which the runners felt sure they could score after the catch. In each instance a perfect throw cut them down.

The third doubleplay was a trifle more unusual. In this play Flagstead got the hit and threw to Haney at third, who relayed to Herrera at second, getting the man there; when the runner on third tried to score during the operation, he was thrown out at the plate, Catcher Bischoff handling the ball.

Each play figured in saving the game, since Flagstead cut off three runs, while the best his team could do was trim the Athletics by a one-run margin, 2-1.

Flagstead's career as an outfielder has been a most unusual one. He came to the Detroit Tigers in 1919 and stuck around for all of four years, doing bench duty most of the time. After Ty Cobb was appointed manager, he decided that Flagstead wouldn't do, and sent him to the Boston Red Sox.

Under Lee Fohl's direction, Flagstead took on a new lease of life, was a different ball player and inside of two years was rated one of the best outfielders in the American League. His batting has been on par with his fielding.

Thus Cobbs' inability to see Flagstead as a prospect cost the Detroit club an outfielder who could now be used to advantage. He is the equal of any of the Tiger outfielders, and they are a classy lot.

SWIMMERS FOR DISTANCE RACE

Six Nations of Note Plan Immediate Preparations For Event.

WORKED WAY.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5. — The array of swimming talent in training for the $40,000 Wrigley marathon channel swim, scheduled for January 15th, was augmented yesterday by six natators of note, who planned to immediately begin their preparations for the event.

Antony Isele came the longest distance to have a crack at the "pot of gold" at stake, having travelled from Lake Constance, Austria. Isele had only enough money to pay his expenses to New York. There he obtained a job in the galley on the liner Mongolia and worked his way to Los Angeles. He claims to hold a number of swimming records made on Lake Constance. From the eastern part of the United States came the five others.

They are Louis Timson, of Lynn, Mass, representing the American Legion of that state; Hardy J. Reynolds, claimant of the Ohio long-distance championship; Miss Ethel Hertel, representing the New York Women's Swimming Association; Pete Myers, of Cincinnati, and Miss Pauline Jackson of New York. There are also already here Shier Mendelson and George Young, natators of note, from Toronto.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

Martin Dempsey, Jack's older brother, was a wrestler and tried his hardest to make Jack and me into matmen shortly after we became acquainted through a chance mutual friend and meeting on the Bowery.

But Jack and I kept right on working as coopers. We used to read in the Clipper about the famous fighters of the period, Jem Mace, Mike McCool, Joe Coss and Tom Early. We learned the best offense was a straight left and a right cross counter.

Dempsey and I made gloves out of socks. Our punching bag was a pillow. Our gym was the kitchen. Our first pair of gloves cost us $3.85. The leather was as stiff as shoe leather.

Dempsey's first fight offer came from Harry Hill, a big sport around New York in 1883. Hill offered Dempsey $50 to fight the sensational Ed McDonald, a middleweight. We all sneaked off to Flushing and the ring was pitched a dawn in back of a roadhouse. London ring rules with bare knuckles were agreed upon.

Dempsey surprised everyone, including himself, by knocking out McDonald in the 27th round.

The lightweight class as such was hardly recognized then but due to the stimulus Dempsey injected into the division interest began to boom.

John Shanley, a wealthy Brooklyn sportsman, took Dempsey up and said he would back him in all fights he had. It was the custom then for every good fighter to have a rich "backer."

At this time, Charley Norton, an Englishman living in Newark, claimed the title. Most of his claims were verbal. He flatly refused to fight Dempsey and with all this talk about the lightweight class it soon became established and Dempsey was fixed as its leader. I am thankful he revived the class because it made me a figure of greater prominence when I came into it later.

The Dempsey-Norton feud grew and grew. Finally Harry Force, another Englishman and protege of Norton's, said he was the champion, and he challenged Dempsey. Dempsey jumped at a chance to fight him, angered at what he considered an attempt by Norton to make him look bad.

"I'll get him if it's the last thing I do," he said to me angrily.

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliffe describes the Dempsey-Force fight held at Coney Island at midnight on September 3, 1883, dealing with the bare knuckle strategy of the time.

NEW YORK GETS DOUBLE VICTORY OVER MONTREAL

DETROIT WINS.

Maroons Lose By Loafing With Two Goal Lead Near End.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 7. — A lone goal by Stan Brown, with less than two minutes of play remaining in the third period, gave the New York Rangers a one to nothing victory over Canadiens of Montreal in a National League hockey game here last night. The win sent Rangers into first place in the standing of the American section of the league.

Brown's counter, splendid goal tending by Chabot, and hard luck around the Danger net, spelled defeat for the visiting Canucks. The visitors had most of the territorial play, dashing attacks by Morenz and Joliat pestering the Ranger goalie almost throughout. These two whirlwinds drew applause from the nine thousand spectators time after time with their thrilling rushes. Invariably, however, passes were missed, rebounds just lost or shots were just wide of the mark.

Especially during the second period did the Canadiens experience heart-breaking luck. They simply swarmed around the Ranger net, Chabot making twenty-two saves against nine for Hainsworth, but fate was against them. During this session, it was Joliat who starred, his fast skating and tricky stickhandling baffling all the Rangers but Chabot. He drew one penalty during the game, his lone offence coming near the end of the game. It was while he was off that Brown scored the only goal of the game.

Canadiens—Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Gardiner and Leduc; centre, Morenz; wings, Joliat and Gagne; subs, Lepine, W. Boucher, Mantha, Hart, Larochelle and Lacroix.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

Americans 4, Montreal 3

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Montreal Maroons tossed a National Hockey League game here last night when they were beaten by the New York Americans 4 to 3 in an overtime game which left the Maroon supporters aghast. It was a repetition of the Maroon defeat at Chicago last week when the Montreal team were beaten after being two goals up and less than two minutes to go. Last night they were leading 3 to 1 with less than a minute to go and were not trying hard with subs in action. The Americans pressed, and Roach scored on a close-in shot. With less than 30 seconds remaining, it still looked easy for the Maroons. But from the face-off after Roach's goal, Laurie Scott lifted a long one and Benedict never saw it.

The crowd cried aghast to see the score tied, but it was as nothing to the groan which went up when Billy Burch lifted a long one from centre ice. Again Benedict fanned, and New York had snatched a victory after being faced with hopeless defeat.

Montreal's tactics in letting up in the last four minutes of the tussle cost them the game, which was badly needed by the champions in their fight to get out of their four-place slot.

Montreal—Goal, Benedict; defence, Munro and Noble; centre, Stewart; wings, Broadbent and Siebert; subs, Phillips, Carson, Rothschild, Dutton and Donnelly.

N. Y. Americans—Goal, Forbes; defence, Reise and Conacher; centre, Burch; wings, D. Green and S. Green; subs, Simpson, Himes, McKinnon, Scott, Bouchard and Roach.

Referee—Cooper Smeaton.

Detroit 3, Pitsburg 2

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.— The Detroit Cougars defeated the Pittsburg Pirate here last night in a National Hockey League game, 3 to 2. Sheppard and Gordon scored in rapid succession in the second period, and Sheppard added the final tally in the third. McGuire accounted for Pittsburg's lone goal in the closing period. Play was rough in the closing minutes, as the locals rallied in an attempt to score. The teams:

Detroit—Goal, Holmes; defence, Loughlin and Duncan; right wing, Foyston; left wing, Sheppard; centre, Walker; subs, Frederickson, Gordon and J. Arbour.

Referee—Dr. W. J. Lallamme.

KITCHENER BEATS PARKDALE AGAIN

Both Teams Lack Star Defence Men in Game at Toronto.

TORONTO, Jan. 7. — Without the brilliant Geo. Karges on the defence but with Cammie Seagram, the former Upper Canada College star playing magnificently on the outer guard, Kitchener defeated Parkdale 5 to 2 in the senior O.H.A. game at the Arena Gardens last night. The K's were in front at the close of the opening period 2-0 and at the second re-diers 3 to 1 in the final twenty minutes 3 to 1 in the final twenty minutes.

Parkdale were without Fred Radke the steady defence player, who is ill with the flu, and Ross Paul took his place, only to be counted out by Hinsperber early in the second period, and though he came back in the third he was in bad shape and unable to play his true hockey. Red Armstrong also was injured in the second period, and the Paddlers played the greater part of the twenty minutes without any substitutes. Armstrong received two bad cuts, one on the jaw and the other in the neck, within a half inch of the jugular vein.

MILLBROOK TEAM DEFEATS "COGS"

Cogs Come From Behind in Second and Just Miss Tieing Score.

The initial hockey match of the season at Millbrook, took place on the Cosmos rink on Thursday night, the Cognawagas of Peterboro, playing against the town team. The score was 4-3 for the home team.

In spite of the cold weather, and the fact that there is no particular accommodation for spectators, on account of the rink being an open one, quite a number of onlookers gathered, and some good, fast play kept interest at a high pitch throughout.

The teams lined up:

Referee: Rr. L. J. Stuart.

Score, 4-3 in favor of Millbrook,

At the end of the first period the score stood 3-0 in favor of the town team; at the end of the second period the Cogs had won 2 goals; each team scored 1 in the final lay.

The Cosmos Club had been successful in arranging for local hockey league this season, a match to be played each Tuesday and Thursday evening. There will be four teams entered: Presbyterians, Anglicans, Unionists and Independents; the respective managers are: Rev. J. Riddle, D. Sheppard, C. C. Garside and A. Jeffrey. A Town Team, comprising picked players from the four teams in the league, which will play visiting teams, has L. C. Russell as manager and A. Jeffrey as captain.

The schedule has been drawn up, and the first match will take place on Tuesday, Jan. 11, at 8 p.m., between the Presbyterians and Independents; Thursday night, the Anglicans and Unionists.

HAROLD YELLAND HEADS SKI CLUB

Succeeds George Logan as President —Successful Season Expected.

MEMBERSHIP LARGE.

At the general meeting and elections of officers of the Peterborough Ski and Snowshoe Club, held on January 5th, the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—J. H. Vernor.
President—Harold Yelland.
Vice-President—Douglas Hall.
Sec.-Treas.—Fred Green.
Advisory Board.—H. Woods, G. D. McClelland, William Read, Mrs. G. D. McClelland, Miss Elva Jackson.

The club auditors, Mrs. L. Scully and Mr. William Hinds, made their report to the effect that they had duly audited the accounts of the club and found them in good order.

George Logan, who has been president of the club for the past three years, refused nomination this year. On retiring from office, Mr. Logan expressed his hearty thanks to the members of the club, especially the executive committee, for their support, and asked that the same support be given to the new officers.

Mr. Yelland, the new president, stated that as secretary-treasurer of the club during the past year he fully realized the work that Mr. Logan had done for the club, and moved a vote of thanks to him, which was heartily accorded.

Fifty-one members turned out to the first hike on Wednesday night, which indicates that a splendid season may be looked forward to. The membership is expected to reach the century mark, and, with the hikes, parties, and other activities already planned (coupled with those spontaneous, unplanned ones for which the club is famous) there's bound to be a bigger and better time than ever.

GANDIL UPHOLDS RISBERG CLAIMS

Swears Affidavit That Detroit Threw Four Games To Chicago.

PLAYERS GAVE $45.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press). — Arnold Gandil, banished White Sox first baseman, has sworn in an affidavit that Detroit threw four games to the Chicago team in 1917 and that almost every member of the White Sox gave $45 to a fund subsequently turned over to the Tigers.

The affidavit was made in the office of The Chicago Tribune, and the charges uphold those made before Commissioner Landis on Wednesday by "Swede" Risberg. Gandil came here to testify in the resumption of the hearing.

In the affidavit Gandil maintained that he was the one who sent word to the Detroit players that the Sox would reward them for easing up.

Gandil said the frame-up was made before the first of those four games was played.

"I met Bill James under the grand stand at Comiskey Park before the first game," the affidavit read, "Bill said to me, 'These are going to be some pretty soft games,' and I said, 'Well, Bill, if it goes all right, I will see that you are fixed up'."

"The first intimation that I had that it was generally known among the Chicago players that these games were being thrown was the night after the first ball game in the club-house, when Rowland, Schalk, Eddie Collins and Gleason were discussing how easily we had won the game; they mentioned different things that had happened during the day and Eddie Collins made the remark how terrible the games looked."

At another point the affidavit said, "I don't claim that every single one of the fellows who contributed to this pool, which to my recollection seemed between $900 and $1,100, did so thinking that we were paying Detroit for throwing four games. I only know that it was general talk among the fellows that Detroit had been pretty friendly with us in September when we needed it, and we ought to do something for them."

Gandil said he would repeat his story to Commissioner Landis, providing questioning is confined to the four games under question. He would not stand to be bullied and he was not going to talk just to get even with fellows who once threw him down but because Landis had asked him for what he knew.

He declared that what Risberg told the Commissioner was true and spoke of the fact that "Swede" was called a liar by some of those he accused.

"Risberg was too easy," said Gandil. "Nobody will call me a liar in my hearing and get away with it. Risberg couldn't tell all the story because he didn't know it. I can tell it and no man is going to scare me."

Whereas Risberg's story was general, Gandil's charges are definite. He names several players and tells the part they played in the games alleged to have been "thrown."

SAYS LANDIS KNEW TIGERS LAID DOWN

Dismissed Ball Players' Attorney Makes Statement Regarding Scandal.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 8. —Ray Cannon, Milwaukee attorney, who at one time represented baseball players dismissed following the expose of the so-called White Sox "scandal" in 1919, declared here yesterday that Commissioner K. M. Landis knew back in 1922 that the Detroit Club, American League, had "thrown" games to Chicago in 1917, as charged recently by 'Swede' Risberg, and refused to investigate it. Cannon was counsel for Oscar "Happy" Felsch, Charles "Buck" Weaver, Joe Jackson and Risberg in claims against the Chicago club after their dismissal from baseball.

Cannon said that Felsch told the baseball commissioner, Weaver later corroborating, that the Detroit club deliberately permitted Chicago to win seven games near the end of the season. Cannon said he asked Charles Comiskey to submit to an examination to determine the status of the White Sox club, but that Comiskey declined.

"At that time," Cannon said, "Commissioner Landis made the statement that the money interests in baseball were above reproach while only the players could enter into what was termed by Landis as "unlawful agreements."

MARMORA WINS GAME IN STIRLING

MARMORA, Jan. 7.— Marmora visited Stirling on Thursday in the Hastings County League and won a remarkably keen game by the solitary goal of the game. This was obtained in the first period by Brady and is all the more remarkable inasmuch as it was obtained by a left hand shot from the player, who is right-handed, and was his first goal in senior hockey. Both goalkeepers were given a lot to do and their performance was of the finest standard. Neal doubtless played his best game in goal for the visitors, some of his saves being spectacular.

Stirling having defeated Trenton and Belleville C.N.R. in exhibition games and Tweed away in the Hastings County League, were favorites for this game. Their play was deserving of a score, but lacked finish. Ingram sent in some splendid shots for his team, but Neal was sound. Marmora showed much improvement in this their second game. Play was fast throughout and minor penalties equally divided, were frequent. The game was watched by a large crowd of spectators gathered from the surrounding country.

Line-up:

Marmora		Stirling
	Goal
C. Neal		A. Hulin
	R. Defence
J. Hughes		F. Ingram
	L. Defence
M. Auger		W. Tulloch
	Centre
G. McWilliams		J. Ackers
	R. Wing
C. Brady		E. Wallace
	L. Wing
C. Wood		R. Scott
	Subs
A. Shannon		C. Ackers
R. Neal		H. Ingram

Goal Umpires—J. Clairmont, H. Tulloch.

Referee — Walter Jackson, of Peterborough.

Because he won a world championship with the St. Louis Cardinals, Rogers Hornsby was released. . . . This shows how futile it is to buck an old tradition.

KEN WILLIAMS MAY COME BACK

Expected Dan Howley Will Give Him Chance With Browns.

AFTER SLUMP.

By NEA Service

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 7.—The signing of Dan Howley as manager of the St. Louis Browns probably will give Outfielder Ken Williams a new lease on life.

Waivers recently were asked on Williams, who only a few years ago was sharing home run honors with Babe Ruth. Last year he slumped badly in the field and at the bat.

When Howley was Cobb's assistant at Detroit Williams was one of the best hitters in the American League. The new manager of the Browns remembers him only as such and no doubt will want to give him the once over himself before sending him elsewhere.

OBITUARY.

MRS. GEORGE BARR

WARSAW, Jan. 7.—Another lady well-known in Warsaw though living at Cottesloe, Mrs. George Barr passed away on Sunday morning at her home.

Mrs. Barr had been in poor health for many months. In vain had she taken treatments in hopes of recovery. She bore her long illness with true Christian patience. She was an earnest worker in all that pertained to the Cottesloe Church, and also in community work, and was one whose place in her neighborhood cannot be easily filled. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband and seven children, four boys and three girls; the youngest, a little girl a little over a year old; her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. David Barrie; one sister, Miss Jennie Barrie, and two brothers, William and Roderick.

The funeral of the late Mrs. George Barr took place on Tuesday afternoon. The service was held in the Cottesloe Church. Mr. Moyer, minister of Cottesloe, Westwood and South Dummer, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. T. M. Wesley of Lakefield, a former minister; Rev. Mr. Stillman of Norwood and Rev. Mr. McNeely. The church was filled and crowds stood outside. The bearers were Messrs. Albert Webster, Hugh Kelly, Harold Patterson, Merd. Clysdale, Ernest McDonald, and William Bell. There were many beautiful flowers.

The interment took place in Norwood.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family of the late Mrs. Logan wishes to thank the attending doctor, the many kind friends and neighbors, for their kind expressions of sympathy during their recent sad bereavement.

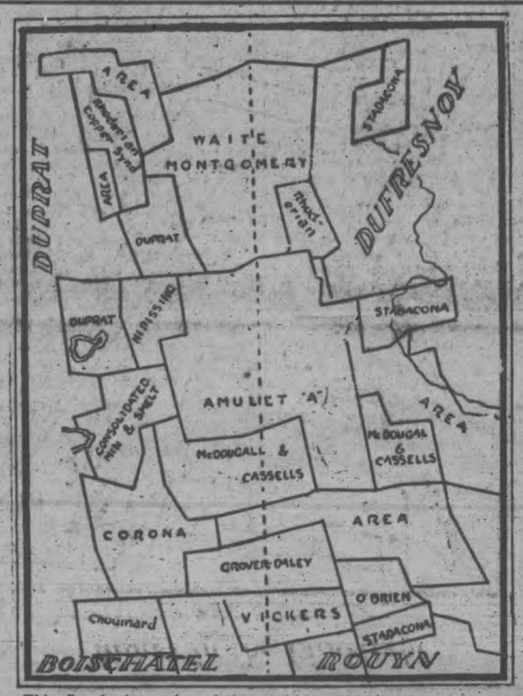
Mines in the Limelight



This sketch shows the relative position of the famous Amulet-Area properties in Quebec, on which a recent electrical survey indicated an ore zone now being proved with the diamond drills. Mining men claim that there is about a 90% chance that the drilling will disclose a sulphide ore body, but no one can tell anything about it, and the speculation which has put Area shares up from around 22c to over $1.30 a share and Amulet up from around $1.30 to around $2.60 is described by a northern paper as the most interesting gamble since the early days of Cobalt. The electrical survey on Area took place in low lying ground, just over the southwest corner of the Amulet "A" shown on the map, near where the spectacular strike has been made on Vickers and Ribago, and which shows a length of some 1,400 feet on the Vickers property alone.

Upward Move Resumed In Wall Street To-day

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—Speculators for the advance regained control of the price movement in to-day's market, after an early period of irregularity.

Quotations of several popular issues in the motor group were hammered down one to two points, but most of the losses had been wiped out by early afternoon.

The declaration of a 33 1-2 per cent. stock dividend on Burroughs Adding Machine revived the spirits of those traders who had built up their hopes on rumors of further "melon cutting" by large corporations.

St. Louis Southwestern, Northern Pacific and Atchison, each up two points or more, led the advance in the railroad group. Rock Island common touched the highest price in its history.

Baldwin, United States' Steel Common, Goodrich Rubber, Commercial Solvents 'B,' and Jones Bros.' Tea were among the many strong spots in the industrial group. Texas and Pacific Land Trust, which is to be split up on a hundred for one basis, touched a new record high for all time at $2,090 and then slipped back to $2,065, all transactions being in off lots.

Area Mines Features Mining Exchange To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press)—Area Mines featured to-day's session on the Standard Mining Exchange, the issue gaining 23 cents to 167, with heavy sales taking place. The market was fairly heavy, 709,205 shares changing hands. Nipissing was also very strong, gaining 40 cents to 8.70. Aconda registered a decline of two points at 37. Buckingham was up 3-4 at eight, Cons. W. D. Lake, down 1-2 at 16 1-2 and Teck Hughes up 42 at 587, also being heavy dealt in.

Toronto Market Activity Centres On Two Stocks

TORONTO, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—With activity confined almost solely to International Nickle on the listed, and Hiram Walker on the unlisted market, the session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today assumed hectic proportions. The new Hiram Walker issue, with more than 4,000 shares dealt in, rose 1-2 point at 33 1-8 after touching 33 7-8. Nickel was also higher, gaining 1-4 point at 41 3-8, with 4,100 shares changing hands. Brazilian Traction gained 1-2, and Canadian Canners Preferred was also 1-2 higher at 77 3-4. Imperial Oil had its busiest day for some time when the issue declined 1-4 at 38 1-4. The two leading stocks, however, caused plenty of excitement and toward the noon recess sales came in very fast. No sooner had a quotation been marked on the board than it was changed, and operators had considerable difficulty in keeping up with the figures.

Wheat Scores Advance On News From Abroad

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (Canadian Press).—Wheat advanced early today, helped by unexpected gains at Liverpool and by reports that Argentine offerings are smaller. Opening unchanged to 1-4c up, wheat rose all around. Corn, oats, and provisions were firmer, corn starting 1-8 and 1-4 cent and 1-2 cent higher and holding near to initial figures. Opening prices were: Wheat, May 137 3-4, July 129 5-8. Corn, May 80 1-8, July 83 1-2; oats, May 49 1-2, July unquoted.

SANITARY MILK BILL GOES BACK

Senator Copeland's Efforts In Support Blamed For Defeat.

IN U. S. SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. — The Taber-Lenroot bill imposing drastic sanitary restrictions upon the importation of milk and cream from Canada encountered unexpected opposition in the Senate yesterday and after two hours of running debate went back to the calendar.

The bill had been taken up by unanimous consent during the morning hour, and probably would have passed without a record vote except for the misdirected efforts of Senator Copeland (Democrat, New York).

"Poisonous Milk" From Canada.

The Senator drew such a lurid picture of the evil effects of "poisonous milk from Canada" that several of his Democratic colleagues inquired why the New York authorities did not take proper precautions. This led Senator Copeland to say that the Democrats were going crazy on the subject of State rights, and before long he was defending himself in a losing battle against such old parliamentary hands as Jim Reed of Missouri, Pat Harrison of Mississippi and Senator Jones of New Mexico.

Senator Walsh (Democrat, Massachusetts), said no complaint about Canadian milk and cream had ever come to him from the consumers of Boston. He suggested that Senator Lenroot was not speaking for them, but for the dairymen of his own State of Wisconsin. The hidden purpose of the bill, he said, was to compel Eastern consumers to purchase Western milk and cream at a high price by depriving them of the cheap and convenient source of supply they had in Canada.

"By Fools Within."

Other Democratic Senators stressed the point that the various States should safeguard the health of their own people, instead of seeking aid from the Federal Government. Senator Harrison said Congress could not regulate the production of milk in Canada, and that the measure, if passed, could be used as an embargo. Replying to a taunt from Senator Copeland that he (Mr. Reed), a professional flag waver, was not standing up for American rights, Senator Reed observed that America was menaced, not by foes from without, but by fools within, her borders.

At this point it occurred to Senator Lenroot that he had not made a happy selection when he put up Senator Copeland to win Democratic support for the measure, and upon his motion the bill went back to the calendar.

EVACUATION OF THE RHINELAND STILL ISSUE IN FRENCH POLITICS FIGHT IN CHAMBER IS PROBABLE

Poincare Opposed To Speeding Evacuation, Desired By Briand.

WARN AGAINST CLASH.

Reluctant To See Matters Brought To Head By Financial Situation.

....PARIS, Jan. 8.—The question of the evacuation of the Rhineland, which hitherto has been an issue in French foreign policy, now threatens to become an important issue in French domestic policy.

Foreign Minister Briand is committed to hastening evacuation of the occupied territory as part of the Locarno programme, whereas Premier Poincare has informed his friends that there will be no premature quitting of the Rhineland under the Poincare Government. This appears to bring a bit closer a clash over foreign policy between the Premier and Foreign Minister, which has been brewing for some time.

The situation is complicated by the financial situation. While there is little doubt M. Briand could beat M. Poincare in a show of strength in the Chamber if foreign policy could be debated alone, there would be great reluctancy on the part of the parliamentary leaders to permit the fall of M. Poincare at this stage of the battle to save the franc. For while the public is grumbling over the hardships the rise of the franc has brought, business and political leaders realize that the return of a Left Government to power would certainly weaken the franc and imperil the great gains which M. Poincare has made.

Those who know the situation predict that M. Poincare's firmness and insistence on being boss while he occupies the boss position may lead to a battle in the Chamber over M. Briand's foreign policy and that the battle would in all likelihood be fought on the issue of Rhineland evacuation. M. Poincare's friends accuse M. Briand of running the Foreign Office without regard to the wishes of the Premier and without due consideration for the opinions of the Cabinet. It is true M. Briand have been frequently absent from recent Cabinet meetings and that he has certainly done some things which, previously submitted to the Cabinet, might scarcely have been approved.

Many French political writers warn against a clash and most of them show they will blame M. Briand for it if it comes. The prevailing sentiment seems to be that foreign policy should go slower if that is necessary to enable M. Poincare to continue at his fiscal task.

It is interesting to note that both M. Poincare and M. Briand favor ratification of the debt treaties and that they are planning to bring the

MISS HOPCROFT AWARDED $1500

SUED FOR $20,000.

TORONTO, Jan. 8—Holding that Miss Marion Hopcroft, of Peterborough, did suffer some injury for which the owner of the motor car in which she was joy-riding with seven other young people is liable, Mr. Justice Grant has given judgment against John N. Bouey, of Toronto, for $1,500. Miss Hopcroft sued for $20,000. She alleged a fractured skull and consequent mental injuries. His Lordship says:

"My frank opinion is that her nervous condition at the trial, her decreased efficiency in her work and consequent decrease, if any, in earnings, are to be attributed in large measure, if not entirely, to the strain of bringing and prosecution of this litigation, and her seeking to recover damages from the father of her boy friend, who was killed on the joy-ride which they had taken together, and with which the father had no moral connection or responsibility."

At 12.30 in the morning of Sunday, June 7, 1925, Miss Hopcroft was riding in Bouey's five-passenger Hudson car, driven by his son, Cyril Bouey. Mr. Bouey was at the time in western Canada. Three other young men and women were also in the car, the young women sitting on the young men's knees. The car tore along Brown's Line at such a speed that after striking another car, it skidded 121 feet, snapped a telephone pole in three pieces and turned over. Cyril Bouey was killed.

The defendant alleged that Miss Hopcroft was negligent in entering the car knowing that some of the occupants had been drinking. His Lordship states that there was no evidence that there had been drinking, and there was evidence to the contrary. The defendant also fails to maintain that Miss Hopcroft occupied a perilous position or interfered with the control of the car.

The action was based on allegations of excessive speed and driving on the wrong side of the road.

REFUGEES FROM HANKOW REACH SHANGHAI TODAY

Japanese Reports Say Chinese Failed To Keep Order at Kiukiang.

POLICE GO BACK.

British Trained Chinese Will Take Over Hankow From Canton Forces.

SHANGHAI, January 8. Canadian Press. — Vessels filled with British refugees are arriving from Hankow, the scene for the last week of violent and anti-foreign riots.

Private advices from Hankow say that all securities in the Hong Kong and Shanghai banks have been removed to ships.

Despatches from Japanese sources in Hankow received here state that the Cantonese flag has been hoisted over the official buildings in the British concession.

Advices from Japanese sources at Kiukiang say that the efforts of the Chinese troops to preserve order there were unsuccessful after coolie mobs had broken down the barriers to the foreign section, and that the British concession was in danger.

Chinese mobs seized the municipal buildings, British business houses and private residences.

CHINESE WITHDRAW.

LONDON, Jan. 8. Canadian Press. —The British foreign office was advised from Hankow this morning that the Cantonese authorities have agreed to withdraw all Chinese troops and pickets from the British concession, which will be policed by the British police, assisted by police from the former Russian and German concessions. These are foreign-trained Chinese.

The British police also are natives under British supervision.

It is expected that British subjects will return to their offices some time to-day from the barracks where they were concentrated for safety.

The London Missionary Society to-day received a cable from Shanghai saying that missionaries are remaining at their stations and that at the time of filing the message, all was well.

JAPANESE PRESS COMMENT.

TOKYO. Jan. 8. — (Canadian Press.)—Morning papers to-day devoted much space to discussion of the anti-foreign situation in China and made further comment on the recent British memorandum to the Powers wherein it was proposed to make effective at once in China the surtax rates provided for at the Washington conference. "Britain's attempt to court Chinese favor will probably fail," is the comment of the Chugai Shogyo Shimpo, commercial daily.

The Japanese press as a whole considers the British proposals as having been dictated by selfish motives, which, besides being unfair to the other Powers, are felt to be transparently insincere and likely to harm rather than to improve British relations in China.

Indian Claims People Are Citizens Of Continent

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8—Paul Diabo, Iroquois, yesterday was freed on a writ of habeas corpus, temporarily halting efforts to deport him to Canada. Diabo, onJ anuary 8, will have his chance to convince the court that he and his people are entitled to citizenship in this country as "original Americans."

Diabo, his dark eyes flashing, explained, in well-chosen English, why after his arrest for entering this country from Canada without a visa, he chose to fight in the courts, in behalf of the League of the Six Nations of Indians, to gain recognition for the contention he is free to traverse the continent from end to end, and that this right was granted him by treaty at the close of the Civil War.

"This is my country, and so is Canada," Diabo declared. "I follow the habits of my forefathers—I follow the crows.

"In the summer-time I like to live in Canada and in the Winter in the United States. It is my custom and the custom of my brothers to leave the old folk on the reservation in winter while we are at work. We save while we work and in the summer return to Canada."

Chaplin Seeks Damages For Publicity In Magazine Says Biography Contains False Statements, Causing Scorn

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 8th (United Press)—In one of the first cases on record where a screen star has objected to publicity, Charles Chaplin, movie comedian, has brought a $500,000 damage suit against the Pictorial Review, which has announced publication of a so called "intimate history" of Chaplin's life.

The biography was written by Jim Tully, former tramp and prize fighter, who has become a magazine writer and playwright.

Chaplin's complaint filed in Federal Court by Nathan Burkham, seeks an injunction to prevent publication of further instalments. The January issue contains the first of the Tully series.

The comedian says the biography was not authorized and consists of false statements tending to bring him into disrepute and "subject him to scorn and contempt."

FIRE GUTS SHOP OF W. TAYLOR HUNTER STREET

DAMAGE $1,500.

Two Calls Received, One at 11.45 and One at 3.15.

Fire gutted the shop of William Taylor, 219 Hunter Street, last night, causing about $1,500 damage. Mr. Taylor had been grinding skates and sharpening saws until shortly after nine o'clock, when he went home. At a quarter to twelve a passer-by noticed a fire in the rear end of the shop and he turned in the alarm. When the firemen arrived the shop was filled with a heavy black smoke, and as the door was opened the blaze shot to the ceiling at the rear. One line of hose and one chemical line were used to get the fire under control.

At 3.15 a second alarm was turned in, which was about two hours after the firemen had left. This time a live spark which had become lodged in the partition in the ceiling had started another small blaze, which was easily controlled.

This morning the inside of the shop was badly blackened and scorced, and the windows, both at the rear and front, were broken. The stock at the rear was considerably damaged. The fire appears to have started from one of the skate grinders which was being used last night.

Mr. Taylor has had a very busy season grinding and sharpening skates, but last night the great majority of the skates which had been left in to be sharpened had been taken out by their owners, leaving only a few pairs to be lost.

BRITISH BANK CHIEF TO VISIT NEW YORK BANKS

Montagu Norman, Governor of Bank of England, To Cross Atlantic.

PURPOSE NOT TOLD.

Conference Over $300,000,000 Credits Is Said To Be Bringing Him.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, is expected to visit New York shortly and confer with Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, and other financiers. Several such conferences have been held in the last few years, both in this country and abroad, at which international financial affairs have been discussed in an informal way.

Although the purpose of Mr. Norman's forthcoming visit has not been revealed, it is considered possible that it may have to do with closing out the $300,000,000 credits which were created in April, 1925, in connection with the return of Great Britain to the gold standard. A credit of $200,000,000 was obtained at that time by the Bank of England from the Federal Reserve Bank, which acts as its correspondent here, and the British Government obtained a credit of $100,000,000 from J. P. Morgan & Company, its fiscal agents in this country.

Although no announcements have been made regarding the credits since their establishment, it has been taken for granted in financial circles that Great Britain has not called any part of them into use. The credits were obtained as a precaution and, with the progress made recently by Great Britain it is believed the credits may no longer be considered necessary.

No Special Significance.

At the Federal Reserve Bank it was said nothing was known of Mr. Norman's plans for a visit, the information of which was obtained in cables from London. It was said at the bank that no special significance need attach to such a visit, as the heads of the world's central central banks frequently get together in informal conferences for the promotion of harmonious financial relations between nations.

U. S. SENATOR CLAIMS FRIENDS ACTED FOR HIM

Denies Part in Connection With New Bunswick Railway Deal.

REFUSED TO PAY.

Threatened Railroad Operations If He Refused Money.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Senator Gould, republican, Maine. yesterday told the Senate elections sub-committee investigating charges of bribery against him that he had taken no part in the payment of $100,000 in connection with a New Brunswick railway deal, but had been driven out of business in the province because he had refused to pay $50,000 to a premier.

The new senator recited a story of alleged political corruption in New Brunswick in 1912 when, as president of a company building a railroad in that province, he said two premiers openly solicited funds from him, threatening to stop his railroad operations if he refused.

Without his consent, Gould said, his New York associates paid $100,000 to the campaign fund of the Conservative party of the Canadian Province but that he later learned that "Premier Flemming got most of it."

Senator Gould told the committee he had been held up all along the way in building the road until it ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars, by violations of agreements and promises on the part of Canadian officials.

Finally his partners "got enough" and withdrew from the operations, he said, and eventually he was driven out when he refused to pay $50,000 to Premier Clark, who succeeded Flemming.

The arrangement for the hundred thousand dollars contribution, the Maine senator said, was made in Ottawa unknown to him. He declared he first knew about it when he saw F. J. Lisman of New York, one of his partners, shaking hands with Premier Fleming in a bank.

Lisman later told him that the handshake had meant the payment of $100,000, Gould said, asserting that he had protested that he would not stand for "any graft."

He said Lisman explained that they had been "held up" as Flemming had refused to sign the final contract unless he got the money. This demand was made, Gould added, after the company had sold $4,500,000 worth of bonds in London and spent other money until there was no other way out.

The senator presented a letter to the committee from H. E. Macdonald of Victoria, B.C., stating that he had actually paid over the $100,000 to a Canadian official, but refused to disclose the official's identity.

The committee also was told by Senator Gould that before Flemming became premier he telephoned him one night at his home and asked him to meet him in Centreville. He met him that night, he asserted, adding that Flemming said:

"I am going to be Premier and I am a poor man. You people doing big business over here ought to contribute $40,000 to my campaign and should put me on a salary of $5,000 while you are building the railroad here."

Mr. Gould said he refused to pay anything and broke off all relations with him, but later, upon the plea ow Flemming, he renewed negotiations for the railroad contract and obtained one to build the road for $31,000 a mile.

At the very start, the senator declared, he was forced to pay $32,000 for a survey which he had been promised would be only $10,000 and "that sort of thing continued until it ran into the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

OLD MASTERS

That time of year thou may'st in me behold,
When yellow leaves, or few, or none do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self that seals up all in rest;
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the deathbed whereon it must expire,
Consumed with that which it was nourish'd by.
This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.
—Shakespeare, Sonnet.

Many Couples Storm the Marriage Bureau at Moscow While Yet, Thousands Seek New, Quick Divorce System

MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—The last days of the old year witnessed a remarkable rush of girls under 18 get married before Jan. 1, on which date that became the statutory age, according to the new law.

The Marriage Bureau is always crowded at the end of December in order to take advantage of the New Year's holidays, but as the official time limit drew near on the afternoon of the 31st the waiting queues became suddenly agitated. A group of young couples dashed forward to storm the office doors.

"Keep your places," shouted a policeman. "All must take their turn."

A young girl jumped on the knee of her suitor, supporting herself with an arm around his neck, and addressed the crowd.

"There are only seven minutes left and I am only 16. If you refuse to let us go next, we must wait two years."

Everyone laughed and they were allowed to enter.

Less happy was the fate of an elderly citizen who appeared at a marriage bureau with a long face on the morningof Jan. 3.

"What is this about 18 being the new limit for girls,"

"Yes, little uncle ,that is true."

"And my daughter got 'married' the day before yesterday," he said, "so that we could have a feast on New Year's Day and they meant to register today, but she is only 17 and three months."

Since the new year there has been a large increase in divorces, many thousands applying under the new law which permits either party to get a quick divorce upon presenting their identity papers, without the pesence or consent of the other party; whereas, formerly, it was necessary to apply to the People's court in such cases.

MARKED REVIVAL OF COAL TRADE

Jump in Export Figures Encourages Great Britain's Markets.

RETURNING TO MINES.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The amazing revival in the coal trade, following the return to work, has given rise to considerable industrial optimism. During last December Britain exported 12,000 more tons of coal than in December, 1923, which was the best month for four years. Nearly a million men have been employed, and of the mining population of England only 200,000 are still out of work, which is a far better showing than had been expected. It is possible that the revival may only be temporary and may be due to shortage in stocks of coal among customers of the British mines. Coal owners and merchants, however, are determined to recapture their lost foreign markets now that the reduced cost of production allows them to operate at a profit.

TWO ARE KILLED DERRICK DROPS

One Believed Cousin of Fred Beauvais of Stillman Fame.

TWELVE INJURED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—A derrick used in construction work on a building which was to rise 25 storeys, next to the J. P. Morgan and Company offices, crashed through the steel skeleton of the skyscraper yesterday afternoon.

Two men were killed and 12 injured, two perhaps fatally.

The two who lost their lives were working on the derrick when it collapsed. The top of the main girder was about 75 feet from the ground.

The derrick, weighing some 15 to 20 tons, splintered the steel framework as though it were made of matchwood. Many of the injured were hit by flying debris.

One of the injured was Jack Beauvais, of Manhatton, said to be a cousin of Fred Beauvais, of the Stillman case.

Willie Kraft, of Astoria, and James Mobbick, Manhattan, were the men killed.

BELIEVE TENSION IS STILL HEAVY CHINA CONFLICT

Officials Unable To Confirm News Despatches From China.

BUSINESS RESUMED.

American Citizens Board British Merchant Ship For Shanghai.

LONDON, Jan. 8. — (Canadian Press). — Officials of the Foreign Office are unable to clear up the tangle of conflicting news despatches from China, some of which say the British have regained full control of their concessions in the city of Hankow, where anti-British riots have occurred, while others indicate that Chinese nationalist elements continue to tighten their grip on the city.

The officials are inclined to believe that the situation at Hankow has changed very little during the past few days. They think the tension there may be lessening somewhat in view of the fact that Eugene Chen, Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Cantonese Government, which has gained control at Hankow has called upon the business community to resume their activities.

Reports received here tend to show that Chen is carrying out the pledges which he has given to assume responsibility for the protection of British lives and property.

The difficulty of judging the situation at Hankow by reports received from Shanghai is emphasized at the Foreign Office. Shanghai's large and influential British colony has been a difficult obstacle in the operation at Shanghai of the new British policy of conciliation, it is stated. The foreign communities at Shanghai sincerely believe that the only way to handle the Chinese situation is by means of rifles and gunboats, while the British Government realizes that the days of complete foreign domination in China have passed.

Seek Safety.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press).—Despatches from Hankow, mob-ridden since Monday, stated that sixty American women and children embarked on a British merchant ship for Shanghai Thursday night, following the example of the British women and children who departed Wednesday.

Women and children of other foreign nationalities were advised to leave, leading foreign men declaring they had no confidence in the promises of the Cantonese Government officials that they would preserve order.

The despatches, filed as late as 1 a.m. Saturday, report that the situation was still most tense as a result of the anti-foreign speeches and propaganda, which caused the attacks upon the British concession district Monday and Tuesday by thousands of maddened Chinese.

Control of the foreign concessions was in the hands of officials of the Nationalist or Cantonese Government, whose troops replaced foreign sailors and marines from warships in the Yangtse River. Business ceased despite Chinese Government assurances that law and order would be kept. Further developments were awaited anxiously.

The correspondent of Reuter's News Agency was confined in the Asiatic Petroleum Company's premises by Chinese pickets, but was expected to be liberated soon.

The flag was not flying from the British Consulate-General Friday, the premises being watched by Chinese troops, said Japanese despatches. Consul-General Goffe remained within. Those other British residents who still remained in Hankow took refuge in the Hong-Kong Bank and the Asiatic Petroleum Company's building, about which were Chinese troops and pickets.

Five members of the local Kuomintang, the political organization supporting the Cantonese Government, took over the administration of the British concession.

Eugene Chen, Foreign Minister of the Nationalist Government, said another despatch, met leading United States citizens Friday afternoon to discuss their position. He assured them that there was no reason for panic, asserting that the Chinese Government could control the situation. Later, the majority of the United States community decided to leave Hankow.

A meeting with the British with a similar object was a fiasco. Only British Consul-General Goffe and one other Britisher attended. Anglo-Americans were unanimous in lack of confidence in the professions of the Chinese that that order would be restored and life and property made safe.

There were several British and United States warships in the Yangtse opposite Hankow, but sailors and marines were kept aboard. Chinese officials said that their presence might inflame the mobs. Chinese troops continued to patrol the streets and the populace continued hostile to foreigners.

SCENE RECALLED IN AUGURATION OF FIRST CABLE

Vastly Different From Opening Ceremony For Modern Radiophone.

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS."

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (United Press).—Some 60 men and women gathered high up in a skyscraper yesterday and witnessed the inauguration of the trans-Atlantic telephone, one of the newest wonders of this remarkable age.

It was a simple ceremony, lasting but five minutes. One brisk executive in a New York office called another in a London office; they exchanged 'good-mornings,' read prepared statements to each other which were free from any touch of drama, and then told the nimble-fingered telephone operators to proceed to the business of serving the world of commerce with trans-Atlantic telephone conversations.

Although it was an event comparable to the laying of the trans-Atlantic cable, there was no such scene yesterday as compared with that event 69 years ago.

The contrast between yesterday's ceremonies and the excitement of August 16, 1858, was as great as that between the uncertain cable of 1858—so uncertain that no less a person than President Buchanan had to have official assurance of the authenticity of a message he received from Queen Victoria before he would answer it—and the smooth-working wonder which became a part of the world's communications system yesterday.

"Gloria in Excelsis."

And the contrast still holds between the short, undramatic words spoken in yesterday's "first conversation" and the "Gloria in Excelsis" which marked the cable's opening 69 years ago.

The New York Times of Tuesday, August 17, 1858, gave an account of the opening of the first successful trans-Atlantic cable. It told of crowds gathered all day watching for the posting on a bulletin board of messages from the cable. They bought extra papers in bales. Everywhere there was excitement.

Queen's Message.

Finally came the opening message, from Queen Victoria of Great Britain, to President James Buchanan:

"Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of the great international work in which the Queen takes the deepest interest," it read.

But President Buchanan was doubtful and not until he had received the following message would he answer the Queen:

"The message to the President purporting to be from the Queen actually came over the Atlantic cable from Valentia, Ireland, and is unquestionably authentic."

The assurance was from the superintendent of the cable.

President's Cable.

Then Mr. Buchanan cabled the Queen: "The President cordially reciprocates the congratulations of Her Majesty the Queen and the success of the great international prize accomplished by the science, skill and enterprise of the two countries."

"May the Atlantic telegraph, under the blessing of heaven, prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument destined by Divine Providence to diffuse religion, civilization, liberty and law throughout the world."

And the formal message from the British directors to the American directors of the cable company was typical of the proceedings on that day. It read:

"Europe and America are united by telegraph. Glory to God in the highest; on earth, peace and good-will toward men."

The Times printed a column of telegrams from various cities teling of the reception of the news that the cable was a success.

Peculiar Circumstances Surround Life Of Girl Seeking To Claim Inheritance Left In Ireland

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 8.—Prevented from claiming a castle, an old and honored name, and a fortune in County Armagh, Ireland, a young girl student at a local girls' institution yesterday started steps to secure her legacy. According to her tale she was born in Burlington fifteen years ago, and one week after her birth her mother left her with her grandmother. The doctor who attended at the time of the confinement forgot during family troubles, to forward the certificate of birth to Toronto. The clergyman who officiated at the baptism died some years ago, and the nurse who attended during the birth was killed in France. The father of the girl also left the country shortly after the birth of his daughter, going to Ireland, where he later died, and on the death of her grandmother the girl was placed in an institution and her name changed.

DERRY, England, January 8.—Mr T. Bellington, an official of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, has just retired after 50 years of service. During that time he covered more than 500,000 miles in daily journeys to his home in Matlock, and in this way spent three years on trains.

Among the ancients the sapphire was worn as a preventive against the bites of venomous animals, and to keep away apparitions.

TRAILS MARKED ON RICE LAKE

Townships on South Shore Have Bushes Placed in Ice.

AT SAFE PLACES.

HARWOOD, Jan. 6. — Once again Jack Frost is aiding the residents of this village and Hamilton township in giving them a more direct route to Peterborough. About fifteen miles is saved by travelling across Rice Lake to Hiawatha and thence to the Keene road. For many years the council of Hamilton township has seen that a safe, secure roadway from shore to shore, three miles or more, was marked out.

The marking this year, or bushing, as it is locally termed, was done on Monday and Tuesday following Christmas Day, by Alex. Merriam and Melville Harvie. It involved considerable work. Small cedar trees had to be procured and planted in the ice. A hole was dug and a tree placed in it. Water that came up frose and the ice holds the avenue of trees in their upright position. At least ninety-eight trees were thus placed. They average fifty yards apart. Standing near the "blinker," or automatic lighthouse, which is having a short rest, and looking in line across the lake, one cannot but see with what care this work was accomplished.

Similar work has been done at Gore's Landing across the ice to South Monaghan, by the Hamilton Council.

The Council of Alnwick has a trail or road bushed to reach Keene.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 8 (Canadian Press).—When Harry Ellis, Glen Kay, and William Marnoch, three hold-up men, were arraigned in Police Court yesterday by Magistrate Davidson, on charges arising out of recent hold-ups in this city, they were each sentenced to serve three years in prison with hard labor. On Thursday last, Ellis and Kay pleaded guilty to the charges, while Marnoch pleaded not guilty. The latter changed his plea to guilty yesterday.

question before Parliament within the next four or five weeks. Were there to be any shake-up it is difficult to see how it could improve the chances for approval of the Berenger agreement. M. Poincare is said to have told friends that it was impossible for him to obtain a favorable vote in the Chamber on the accord as it stands, but that with reservations he believes he can put the treaty through by a narrow margin.

LEGAL ACTION AGAINST HYDRO IS DISMISSED

Justice Rules No Infringement on Patent on Philadelphia Man.

OPERATE DIFFERENT.

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—Justice Masten has dismissed the action brought by Benjamin F. Groat, of Philadelphia, against the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, claiming unstated damages and a share of the alleged profit savings in respect of the intake adopted on the Chippawa-Queenston power canal. Mr. Groat claimed the Hydro-Electric Power Commission had infringed on his patent, devised to control river currents, specifically in connection with the diversion of ice floes in the Chippawa Canal, where it derives its water from the Welland River.

Long in Use.

His Lordship agrees with the engineers called for the defence that the construction of the Chippawa intake does not infringe in any way on the plaintiff's patent, inasmuch as it does not operate or employ in any respect the principle or method claimed by the plaintiff, but operates in a distinctly different manner which was old and had long been in public use on the Niagara River. "I prefer to take the practical evidence of Hogg, Acres and Gibson (Hydro engineers) to the theoretical evidence of Professor Cavanagh," said His Lordship.

MIDNIGHT SERVICE HELD AT HIAWATHA

Pastor Preaches Timely Sermon on New Year's Eve.

HIAWATHA, Jan. 8. — In the United church of this village on Friday evening at 11.15 p.m. a special service was held to celebrate the passing of the old year 1926. The day was named Old Year Day. There was a large attendance. The pastor, Rev. R. Garratt, spoke. He said he was pleased to see so many present on such a stormy night. He had drawn two pictures. The first one, which he used before midnight, showed Father Time with his scythe. Mr. Garratt stressed the brevity of time and its value. If we haven't time we cannot enjoy ourselves. If we are careful of it wonderful things may be accomplished. The vastness of Eternity was mentioned and our need of being ready. At five minutes to twelve the congregation bowed in silent prayer. At the passing of the year the sexton, Mr. Egerton Loukes, tolled the church bell. The other poster, which was then presented, showed a young child holding a ribbon in its hands with 1927 on it. The words, "Jesus said, I am the Way," to happy life, were also printed on the poster.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

HE TOOK IT SMILING

The medicine was sticky stuff,
And yet he took it smiling.
Only a boy, but wise enough,
At that, to take it smiling.
Life isn't always feast and fun,
Some task is not a pleasant one,
The easy way to get it done
Is just to take it smiling.

And later years brought many a care,
And yet he took it smiling.
He found it easier to bear
If one would take it smiling.
He had his loss, he had his ill,
And yet he kept on coming still,
And won at last, as fellows will,
The ones who take it smiling.

One day they said his work was through,
And yet he took it smiling.
What else can any mortal do
Than just to take it smiling?
Now life has left him but the crumbs,
Afar he hears approaching drums,
But when the final summons comes
I know he'll take it smiling.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

PICKING up a book for the first time and diving into the first part that opens up before your eyes is always an interesting experience. It is like a boy's first dive into a new swimming hole. So long as he surveys the water from the bank he never can tell whether it is going to be a 'hrill or a chill that awaits him. The other day I picked up a book which I had seen more than once, but the contents of which I had not as yet come into contact with. The title had interested me! But, for some reason or other, I had never found my way within its pages. As I now lifted it from the place where it had stood challenging my attention for months it opened at page 185, and in less time than it takes to write it, I found myself so deeply engrossed that it was with difficulty that I was able to tear myself away.

PARTLY PARAPHRASED

The hero went from room to room—all his. The Blue Bark was a fine place, and he was master of it all. Master, too, of a great deal more. There was his land, and there were all the red, cocksure villas he had built in and around Penny Cottage.

The Blue Bark was a fine showy place now. How proud his father would have been, and how drunk! How proud his grandfather would have been, and how garrulous!

He went from the new part into the old: stuck his head in at the brown, dim place called the office. He could see all the farmers and rustics drinking and smoking, as he had seen them in his youth; but more—most and only—he saw the woman he loved in a sheeny pink frock. But she was out of his reach! It hurt him to think that she was out of his reach; and hurt him all the more because his heart was still reaching out after her. If he could have forgotten her he would have felt more comfortable now. There are some things we cannot forget. But, if we knew more than we do, we might discover that we owe more to our ability to remember than we owe to our ability to forget. The things we remember may be repented of; while the things we have forgotten without any repentance may add to our condemnation when all accounts have to be settled.

THE WAY OF ALL TORTURE

After viewing the house from the inside he went out to compare, from the outside, the old with the new. To his eye the old suffered. But how did he know that his eye was seeing straight? The original part of the Blue Bark looked wrinkled and small; it was scored with weather and history, full with the beauty of centuries. But our hero could not see this; he thought it simply looked mean. And he felt sure he could have improved upon it. He looked at it with his head on one side, with his hands in his pockets and his legs generously spread. Anyone passing would have taken him at once for the typical, complacent owner: and, indeed for a minute or two his pain ceased; he could forget, he could catch, for a spell, at his old joy of living. There was something after all, in being the master. This is the way of all torture: it eases you a little, to hurt you more.

BUILDING A WALL BETWEEN THE PAST AND THE PRESENT

His heart began to ache again. He looked at the new walls, and marked the clean line of mortar. He had watched those walls rise day by day, and he had said to himself that he too would build a wall between the Past and the Present. There should be no loophole to his wall. Along the top he would put broken glass. No memory should ever scale it. Between him and the woman he had lost should rise this wall—a work of patience, the bricks set daily. Just as the masons worked at a material barrier, so would he build a spiritual. But it is far easier to build with bricks in the material than it is to build with wishes in the spiritual. The walls of his house were up—the builders gone. The wall of his heart? Not even the foundations were dug. And even if he had been able to erect such a wall between the Past and the Present it wouldn't have taken him long to find out that without loopholes, and in spite of broken glass the Past cannot thus be divorced from the Present. It is well to remember this in the Present so that when it has become the Past we'll not need any wall to intervene.

WHY SOME ARE RELIGIOUS

Back into his house he went—staggering.

Criddle the grocer, passing by, saw him, and said to Jalland's clerk, who was in the village street, bareheaded and with a pencil behind his ear:

"If I didn't know young Stephen Fairmanner for a strictly temperate man, I should say he'd fallen a victim to his father's degrading vice."

Criddle was religious; it paid. He went round with the bag at church on Sundays, to the considerable benefit of his till throughout the week. The gentry of the neighbourhood patronized Criddle; he was such an excellent churchman.

It is the old story of the loaves and the fishes.

Some people go to church for no other reason than for what they can get out of it. Why should we not go because of what we can give? And we are not thinking in terms of dollars and dimes and cents when we speak of giving. There is such a thing as the giving of our happy, prayerful, praiseful, unselfish presence; and the giving of such for the sheer delight of giving.

A COUNTRY SALE

The man who had wanted to build a wall between the Past and the Present fought through a gust of misery; he was getting used to these swift attacks, which took him at those moments when he believed himself cured. He went out into the open again, and looked up-street towards Mrs. Wing's villa. Bicycles leaned against the walls; carts and traps of various orders stood outside, and there was a neighbourly straggle of village people: old men, women with babies, rustics of ample leisure, to whom a furniture sale was a festival.

He stood and looked, and realized. He had been to so many country sales, and knew just what was happening. He could smell the dust of the stript place, and see the dirty boards, and see young Jalland mounted on a rostrum made of a chair set on a table—Jalland, with his red face and loud voice and customary jokes as the lots were put! He always made the same jokes—those stock witticisms of the auctioneer. He had one ready for each particular lot. The porters in their green baize aprons would grin, and add their own witticism, always the same at all the sales. And the rustics would laugh, and the babies would grizzle and dribble through everything, and young couples thinking of getting married would look sheepishly at the parlour furniture, and wonder how much it would fetch.

How he hated all that to be going on, in the usual vulgar way, in a place that had been home to her whose memory he would fain forget but couldn't! Strange feet clumping all over the rooms where her dear feet had lingered. How little it takes to hurt! And, how thoughtlessly we contribute that little! Much of the trouble that comes to us comes as much from the lack of thought as from wrong thinking.

RELIGION OR DRINK?

From where he stood he could see some of the disorder and guess at the rest. Blankets were hung over the front railings. A young woman with spectacles and a sharp, hungry-looking nose—a woman the main note of whose countenance was unconscious ferocity—held up the blankets to the light, as she hunted for thin places. Round at the back were coops and a few fowls. Mrs. Wing had kept hens, and somehow her hens had always looked sparse and melancholy, just as she looked herself. There wasn't in all the pen a single Julia!

Stephen laughed and grew tender—grew warm and wistful and nearly happy—as he swiftly remembered how seductive she had been. Never would he lose the touch of her fingers. He spread out his own now, in an empty world, and made believe—as if he were a child! It was all madness, all cowardice. Why had he not Religion or Drink? or anything that would cure him? Where was the unscalable wall?

THE SAME MASK

There was a cheerful jostle in the pretty street. Not only was there a sale at Mrs. Wing's, but it was Christmas time. At this season of peace and bustle the postoffice door kept swinging and Criddle's shop was crowded. Every face that passed him wore a mask—always the same mask: they had bought them wholesale for Christmas. He, alone, wore none. There are some feelings which cannot be masked. They are so painfully present that even if we tried to wear a mask they would leave their imprint on the outside of our mask.

Yet, there is a Wall which can be erected between the Past with all its failures and disappointments—and the Present with its longings, its hopes and its fears. The Builder of it is the Son of God. And if you will take a good look at it you will discover that it is built in the shape of a cross.

—Allan Fairbairn.

Not Understood

JESUS suffered, as most who would serve must suffer, through not being understood. His enemies did not try, and probably did not want, to understand Him. If they had understood Him they would have been without the shadow of an excuse for their enmity. But it must have disappointed Him most to know that His friends did not understand Him most of the time—or at any time—as they ought to have understood Him. So, when we feel the disappointment of not being understood, let us take comfort from the fact that we are entering into the fellowship of the sufferings of the Son of God—Who will remain eternally the Friend of Man.

What Think Ye of Christ?

THE testimony of eighteen centuries to the impossibility of explaining the personality of Christ on humanitarian grounds is in itself an evidence of His Divinity. . . . A thousand attempts to account for the life of Christ without admitting His divinity have been made. Not one of them has succeeded in winning the assent of any great mass of men for any great length of time. They have hardly survived the lives of those who have invented them.

Churches and Churchmen

I. SEEWELL.

An Unusual Paper.

IT IS rather unusual for a Ministerial Association to have a paper read to it on the "Theory of Malthus," but that is what took place recently before the Pittsburgh Ministerial Association. The paper was read by Rev. C. E. Edwards, D.D., and was followed by an interesting discussion. The theory that the increasing population of the world, accompanied by lessened food production, must be followed by starvation and death has a fascination for many, interest for the mathematical mind, and stirs up the question of reduced birth rate and its related conditions. It tends to "a look into the future far as human eye can see," which fascinated Tennyson, and also suggests the desirability of wars to kill off surplus populations.

How dark and destructive the human mind can become when it refuses to receive the light which is held forth in the words and works of Jesus Christ.

A Working Minister.

MINISTERS are often urged to seek for, and to be determined to have, a fruitful and successful ministry. While there is so much to do, and so many people to be reached, it is greatly to be desired that each minister shall be instrumental in turning as many souls to Christ as possible, and shall do with his might what his hands find to do. So writes Dr. Whallon. Continuing he adds—Many labor in restricted and difficult fields, of course; but each one should strive to accomplish as much as is possible.

Rev. Gervaise Roughton who for thirty years has been the minister of Wesley chapel the mother Methodist church of Cincinnati founded and one hundred and twenty years ago tells very modestly a thrilling story' He has preached over 5 000 times received about 4 500 members into the church and baptised more than 4 000 persons conducted over 6 000 funerals and had solemnized nearly 7 000 marriages. His church has within its membership a great many tithers who give full tithe to the church each Lord's Day. The envelopes have neither name nor amount written on them. No account is kept with contributors. They are responsible solely to God. The church treasury is always full.

Looking Mexico Over.

A BAND of thirty self-appointed U. S. investigators, organized by Congregationalists, will depart at their own expense for Mexico as the year opens, to investigate thoroughly religious, economic and educational conditions.

The Lure of Scotland.

I HAVE just heard of a gentleman and his sister from New Zealand who met a friend among the Morayshire hills and confessed that, after reading most of the Waverleys and the "Lady of the Lake," they could no longer resist the lure. They must see th Trossachs. They saved up and were then in Scotland. They came by way of America, but in it there was no romance. Detroit they found to be as dull as ditch water. New York, to them, was nothing but noise and rush. Their forefathers were Scottish. Mac was in their name. They had fought at Flodden. They had followed Prince Charlie. The charm of Scotland, which they had never seen before had won them through the Waverleys.

Bishop Potter.

TO BE beaten but not broken; to be victorious but not vain-glorious; to strive and contend for the prize and to win it honestly or to lose it cheerfully; to use every power in the race, and yet never to wrest an undue advantage or win an unlawful mastery; verily, in all this there is training and testing of character which searches it to the very roots, and this is a result which is worth all that it costs.

A Great Preacher.

HIS many friends will be interested to hear that Rev. John McNeill, recently minister of the Tenth Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, has begun his ministry at the Church of the Open Door, Los Angeles, where he is preaching in an auditorium which seats four thousand. His sermons are broadcast to Ounah on the east and Hawaii on the west. Mr. McNeill is no longer a youth, but he is preaching with as much power as he ever did, and with a great deal more success than many who are very much younger.

The Archbishop of Canterbury.

IT SEEMS that the advanced age of the Archbishop of Canterbury—he is in his 78th year—is responsible for the periodic rumors that he is about to resign. However, it is interesting to learn that Archbishops very seldom resign, and Dr. Randal Davidson still is, happily, quite equal to the demands of his office. There is some virtue after all in being Scottish born. One who was with him recently for nearly an hour, discussing non-ecclesiastical problems, was struck by his grasp, his quick comments, and his almost boyish enthusiasm. His chaplain has officially stated that there is no foundation for the report that His Grace contemplates retirement.

Where There's a Will There's a Way.

AWAY DOWN in Southern Ohio there is a woman too much crippled by rheumatism to walk, who is driven to church and sits in her car near an open window where she can hear the music and the sermon.

Chinese Enterprises.

IN CHUNGKING, West China, the Chinese Christians are editing and publishing a daily newspaper which bids fair to become one of the largest dailies in that part of China. The editors are trying to circulate only reliable news. They have as reporters both the pastors and members of the Christian churches throughout the province. Occasionally, the paper publishes sermons and special feature articles on some phase of Christian life or activity, or social welfare. The Christians of Chungking organized to publish this paper, because they found that their activities were not being truthfully presented since anti-Christian forces had access to, and often control over, the other Chinese newspapers.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

HE WAS a Scottish soldier, terribly wounded, and the great surgeon, who was also a great Christian said to him: "Jock, my lad, I have to operate; and I think I ought to tell you . . . you have one chance in a hundred of living through the operation. Have you anything you want to say to me?"

And the wounded soldier looked up and said, "No, doctor, just get on with it." The operation was performed. He came through safely and is alive today.

To a friend who asked him afterwards how he felt when he submitted himself to the surgeon, Jock said: "I knew it was all right. I knew whichever side I came out there would be a welcome for me. If I came back, mother was there; and if I went on, Jesus was there." A hope like that is worth more than all the gold that ever came out of the earth.

. . . BEARER OF INTELLIGENCE . . . DISPELLER OF IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE . . . A LIGHT SHINING INTO ALL DARK PLACES.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN.

Congratulations are in order to E. B. Fowler upon his election as Chairman of the Board of Education.

Mr. Fowler has been a member of the Board for seven years, has given a good deal of his time and ability in the interests of education in Peterboro, and will undoubtedly prove a capable executive officer.

The Board of Education has been uniformly fortunate in having at its head good Chairmen and in attracting to its deliberations citizens of ability and enterprise.

The present Board has an excellent personnel, and can be counted upon to sincerely and honestly endeavour to deal with the problems that will come before it, chief among which is the question of Collegiate Institute accommodation, a solution of which must be arrived at speedily.

COMPLETING THE CANAL.

The Examiner feels confident that there has not been a more opportune time than this year to press for the completion of the Trent Canal.

Only a small section remains to be constructed, and with his finished the volume of traffic through the waterway would speedily increase, with beneficial results to the whole district served by the canal.

The Dominion's finances are in better shape than at any time since before the war—the old plea that the necessity for strict retrenchment would not justify the appropriation needed to complete the Trent waterway no longer serves as an excuse for refusing to proceed with the work.

The Trent Waterway Association has resolved to devote its efforts this year to urging upon the Government the desirability of completing the canal, and in this endeavour there should be whole-hearted co-operation from every municipality along the waterway

This matter should receive the early attention of the local Council, and the claims of the Trent district for consideration should be impressed upon Ottawa by a drive in which Peterboro, as the largest centre on the canal, should take a leading part.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The fact that the annual report of F. M. Dela Fosse, Librarian of the Peterboro Public Library, shows a small falling off in circulation should not be taken to mean that interest in the Library is lessening.

Evidence to the contrary is that nearly 600 new borrowers of books were registered in the adult department.

The statistics show that the chief decrease in circulation came in the fiction department, and that other classes of books were in some cases in greater demand than ever.

Good fiction is, of course, important, and the Library should see to it that there is an adequate supply of the best of the new books, but it is satisfactory to both that the people of Peterboro are realizing that there are other non-fiction books in the Library well worth studying, and that the demand for such volumes is increasing.

Pleasing too is the progress of the juvenile department.

The fact that the circulation increased by 2,559 during the year, that the number of fresh applications for membership was 640, and that the story hour period registered an average attendance of 50, indicates that more and more children are realizing the value of the Library.

BUSINESS FINDS AN OLD ASSET.

The biggest business discovery of 1926, says B. C. Forbes in his magazine, published in New York, is:

"The realization by our more enlightened corporations that the greatest loss of all is that due to hostile or only lukewarm working forces, and that there is infinitely more room for increasing profits by the development of intense loyalty than in any other direction, not excluding the invention and installation of more labor-saving machinery."

It may be that some corporations have only last year learned this business axiom, and that others have not yet heard of it, but it has long been in the heart of every honest employee.

Men follow and co-operate with the leaders they trust and love. Society, politics, religion, warfare—all offer to business abundant proof, down the centuries of human experience, that the truth of this new-found principle is embedded in the hearts and wills of men.

Instances might be cited of employees who followed employers or superintendents to shops and positions that paid, temporarily at least, smaller salaries. And such stories could spin out the success almost invariably established on such leadership.

The attraction of the dollar may prevail for a time, but of itself it wins only mercenaries. Every man seeks a fair and just reward for his services, but beyond that it is the human, personal factor that begets loyalty and binds employer and employee together in a morale which the lures and agencies of mass production methods cannot, of themselves, purchase.

Mr. Forbes simply means that the more intelligent corporations realize that their men have hearts and affections, that they are not Robots, mechanical, insensate beings somehow to be regarded as only parts of the machinery of production.

No, the Detroit idea seems to have had its day. Its weakness was congenital, though it escaped general recognition or diagnosis until 1926. Mass production and its special wage are not enough. The man in the machine shop, the man in the ditch, the man in the building, is above all human, a friendly person who warms to friendship, and it is along that avenue lies the way to the loyalty Mr. Forbes finds so valuable.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

"No other country can face the future with more confidence," is the optimistic statement of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in its current monthly commercial letter, the tone of comment on general conditions in Canada being a confirmation of what has been said in these columns of the bright prospects before this country.

The bank's statement reads as follows: "The drop in prices of farm products, a decline in steel and automobile production and in the volume of bank debits, observed during the past month, should not be ignored in considering the state of business, but these factors do not, at this stage, afford cause for uneasiness regarding the general situation. There are, as shown in the following remarks, many favourable features:

"After almost a year of uncertainty, business in general was greatly improved in the closing months of 1925, and purchasing by the public and the preparations for 1926 were probably even more extensive than usually follow a successful agricultural season; accordingly, the activity of business in the latter part of 1925 was exceptional and does not serve as a fair basis of comparison. In 1926 weather conditions have been a severe handicap at critical periods. The industrial depression in Great Britain caused a reduced demand for some of our important products and unfavourable developments were noticeable in other markets. These conditions, however, may occur in any year; the real question is the effect they have on the whole economic structure, and it is obvious that in the past year business has not suffered materially from the adverse influences just mentioned. It would, of course, be much more pleasing if the farmers had enjoyed a better season, but there is reason for thankfulness that worse conditions, which often seemed imminent, did not prevail and that, as the farmers had been able in previous years to liquidate most of their old debts, a greater proportion of the proceeds from this year's crops will be available for fresh purchases. Other sections of this letter deal with the agricultural markets and the conditions in those countries which absorb our surplus products, from which it will be seen that there are grounds for believing that a general improvement has taken place which should be of benefit to the Canadian farming community.

"While agriculture is the main basic industry of Canada, it should not be overlooked that the country's business is more extensive and more diversified than ever before, and that moderate recession can take place in some directions without causing general depression. It is apparent that the mining, power and paper industries are in a prosperous state and that manufacturers of textiles, footwear, metals and certain kinds of rubber goods are receiving orders that keep their plants well employed at present. The decline in the operations of a few industries is seasonal for the most part, but will have to be kept in mind, though from present indications it seems that considerable new business will be available shortly after the New Year.

"Construction operations now in progress, and the work in contemplation for the next few months, will probably lead to more building this winter than in 1926. The housing needs of most sections of the country have been met but a considerable amount of construction is still required for industrial purposes.

"The development of mineral, oil, pulp and water power resources at present under way is the most extensive and the most sound that has ever been undertaken in this country. It is not only providing employment for a great number of men during the construction stage, but will continue to afford work on a large scale. Furthermore, this development has not the characteristics of a 'boom;' it is based upon the fact that the rest of the world requires, and will continue to require in increasing volume, the products of Canada's mines and forests. These and other natural resources, an increasing fund of liquid capital and a people in whom hard work and an enterprising spirit are inherent, are national assets that provide the foundation of prosperity. Temporary setbacks will doubtless be encountered, as they have been in the past, but there is no country where, at present, the business structure is better balanced than in Canada, and no other country can face the future with more confidence."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Jan. 8—Local abattoirs were in a much better position this week for taking care of anything of fair quality and finish in the butcher cattle class. Runs were moderate, and trade showed a decided improvement over the past two weeks. Shippers were well advised beforehand not to send in green, half-fat cattle, and acting generally on this advice the market was not overcrowded with heavy carry-overs of common stuff for which there was no demand. The lighter runs of good to properly finished butcher steers and heifers were well cleaned up from day to day. Prices on the choicest offerings were about 25c higher than for two weeks previous.

In the heavy steers and export class trade was not so active, requirements for this trade being limited to about 200 steers selling from $7.25 to $7.65. It may be a couple of weeks before the export trade gets into full swing again.

Choice butcher steers sold from $6.75 to $7.25 with one fancy load $7.75. Choice butchers' heifers sold from $6.50 to $7; with a few fancy up to $7.25. Good steers and heifers, $6 to $6.50; medium cattle slow, at $5.25 to $6; common, $4.75 to $5; choice fat cows were in good demand at $5 to $5.50; medium kinds not so active. Some choice butchers' bulls sold readily at $5 to $5.50, with medium to common $3.75 to $4.50. Baby beeves sold at 9c to 10c, for choice, with balance from $7 to $8.50.

Springers and Milkers—There has been a little more activity this week for the real choice cows at from $70 to $100.

Stockers and feeders—Some six cars arrived from the west. Yearling heifers sold at $4.50 to $4.65. Steers weighing around 700 to 800 pounds, $5.25 to $5.50. These prices are for delivery at country points. A few choice Ontario stocker steers, 700 to 800 pounds, sold at $5.25 to $5.60, and some stocker steers and heifers of inferior quality sold from $3 to 4c. At present there is very little inquiry from farmers.

Sheep and lambs — The lamb market opened stronger and prices higher, choice selling at 12 1-4c to 12 1-2c; a few fancy at 12 3-4c; good, 11c to 12c; culls, 8c to 9c; heavy lambs 2c less and bucks 3c less than choice ewes and wether lambs. Yearling sheep, 7c to 8c; choice butchers sheep, 6c to 6 1-2c; good, 5c to 5 1-2c; heavy fat sheep and bucks, 4c to 4 1-2c; cull sheep, 2c to 3c.

Hogs—Sold on Monday at $10.75 f.o.b., $11.25 fed, $11.65 off cars. Premium on seelcts $2.22 per head, or $11.88 per hundred f.o.b. Tuesday and Wednesday the market was 25c lower, thick smooth selling on a basis of $10.50 f.o.b. No bids for Saurday's loadings.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 8 (Canadian Press) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand—$4.85 7-16.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press) — Stimulus for an advance in wheat came yesterday from predictions by a noted speculator that end of the season world stocks will prove below normal. Wheat closed unsettled at Thursday's finish to 2 1-8 cent higher, corn at 3-8 to 1-2 cent decline to 1-4 advance, oats unchanged to 1-4 better and provisions unchanged to 15 cents up.

Corn reacted from an early upturn. The corn borer continued to receive attention, but in some quarters was ridiculed as a present market influence. Oats followed wheat rather than corn.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 3 (Canadian Press)—Sales of several loads of Canadian western barley were made to continental buyers on the Montreal grain market yesterday, but the trade in all lines of grain with the United Kingdom continued slow. United States exporters were also in the market for Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian western barley and sales of some fair sized lots were made at c.i.f. prices Buffalo and bay ports.

The domestic trade in car lots of coarse grains showed some improvement, there being a better demand from country buyers and the tone of the market was firm.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for spring wheat grades of flour under a limited demand. The trade in winter wheat flour was also inactive but values were unchanged.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand. The market for standard grades of roleld oats was quiet but firm.

There was a decided improvement in the foreign demand for Canadian baled hay yesterday and prices were steady.

A feature of the egg trade was the weakness that developed in the market for strictly fresh grades and prices scored a decline of five cents per dozen. This was attributed to the increased production at Canadian producing centres and the continued liberal offerings from the United States There was steady demand for storage eggs and prices were firm. The receipts were 161 cases.

A fair trade was done in potatoes and prices ruled steady. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.60 to $1.65 per bag, and Quebec White Stock at $1.45 to $1.50 per bag of ninety pounds, in bulk, ex-track.

The undertone to the butter market continued firm and indications are that prices will go higher in the near future. The demand was good. The receipts were 90 packages.

The trading in cheese was quiet but prices were fractionally higher. The receipts were 42 boxes.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"THE LARGEST HALF"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Two of the pupils in a class for the study of English grammar, rhetoric and composition, set a trap for the teacher. One of them asked:

"Which is correct—the 'larger' half, or the 'largest' half?"

The teacher fell into the trap. His mind was filled only with thoughts of grammar, and failed to perceive the question of fact involved. It was intent on the rule of grammar which tells us that when two things are compared we must use only the comparative degree, not the superlative, so he said:

"Why, the 'larger' half, of course!"

Whereupon the other pupil said:

"How can one half be larger than the other?"

And the teacher had to admit that he was wrong—that one half is exactly as much as the other half. If the question had been, "Which is correct—the 'larger' part or the 'largest part,' of course the answer would have been, the "larger" part.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

Editor, Examiner:
Dear sir:

I, as well as many more citizens, would like to see Mr. E. M. Turner back in the council and think that he should be asked to occupy his seat for this year. Yes, it is true he resigned to run for another seat, but what was fair to one is fair to another. E.M. Turner always proved a worthy councillor and was highly thought of, and for the good work he did while in the council. It would be only justice for our council to nominate him back again Wishing him good luck and hoping to see him again in his seat at the meetings.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE

CHEESE AS A MEAT SUBSTITUTE

In most households, cheese is used somewhat as a condiment or tidbit, and employed chiefly for flavoring dishes, or to be eaten in small quantities with crackers or bread near the end of the meal.

It is often used to flavor some principal dish at a meal, such as macaroni or spaghetti. In spite of this popular usage, cheese should not be used with any kind of starchy food, but should always be considered a substitute for meat, and used only with those foods with which meat will combine properly.

Cheese should always be considered a very hearty food, and cannot be used advantageously by those who have a weak digestion.

All cheeses are concentrated food, containing on an average of from twenty to thirty-five per cent of casein, which is similar to the protein found in meat. Cheese also contains from fifteen to thirty per cent of fat. Fresh, homemade, cottage cheese, made from the whole milk, is the most wholesome cheese, and contains about twenty per cent of casein and only a little over four per cent of fat. The small amount of fat contained in this kind of cheese makes it more digestible.

The best way to prepare this cheese at home is to let a bottle of unpasteurized milk stand in a cooler or icebox for ten days to two weeks, which allows it to sour slowly. This soured milk should then be taken out and put into a bowl and beaten with an eggbeater. After it is well beaten, place it in a cheese cloth, and hang it in the sun to dry. Under no circumstances should it be put upon the stove and cooked over a fire, or even heated, the way it is usually prepared. No seasoning of any kind should be added, although salt is usually added by the manufacturer, and this really detracts from its digestibility.

The best way to use cheese is to make it the meat part of a meal, serving with it plenty of green vegetables, both in cooked and raw form. No starches should be contained in this meal.

Four ounces of this homemade cheese will give the body all the protein it needs for one day, with the possible addition of one egg for breakfast. It is not necessary to use any other kind of meat substitute, as the body cannot use any more proteid than that contained in the casein of the cheese, and if more proteid is used, the body will only be poisoned by it.

It is well to remember that cheese is a very highly concentrated food, and, like all concentrated food, has a tendency to produce constipation. If used with plenty of greens, this tendency will be overcome.

Most vegetarians are really Lacto-vegetarians, and, though cheese is an animal product, or made from an animal product, nevertheless, they find if no meat or eggs are used that cheese furnishes all of the proteid necessary for the building of cell structure, and few vegetarians try to get along without milk or cheese.

The great economic merit of cheese rests in the much longer life it gives to the use of milk, and making it valuable also as a perishable food.

Many of the farming countries of Europe use this protein as the principal nourishing part of their daily diet.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

WHAT WE NEED MOST

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

The trouble is: We don't have time.

We don't have time to get acquainted with those who live around us and we don't have time to get acquainted with ourselves.

The two sides of our lives are the material and the spiritual.

We can cave in on the spiritual side easier than we can on the material side. We are propped up on that side with pointed props. We have to eat, and we have to pay for what we eat. The earnest creditor and the importunate landlord dog our steps. Life is real and life is earnest around the first of each month.

If we shirk our responsibilities on that side of life we come up against hard actuality with a bang. Materialism is not a theory; it is an actuality.

The consequences of shirking on the other side of life—the spiritual—are not so soon apparent, but they are equally disastrous.

Those who do become shallow and cold,

"And he whose soul is flat—the sky
Will cave in on him by and by."

The thing we need most is time—time to discover ourselves; time to think our own thoughts; time to stop before we have to decide; time to think before we say the biting word; time to put ourselves in the other person's shoes before we make our condemnation; time to romp with the fairies of childhood in the turmoil of maturity. Time is what we need most of all.

And more than any of these we need time to visit our own souls, our City of Refuge in times of trouble.

Says Matthew Arnold:

". . . in its lonely moonlight, lives the soul.
Mountains surround it, and sweet virgin air,
Cold plashing past it, crystal waters roll;
We visit it by moments, ah, too rare!"

A STATEMENT

By the President of Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Within a few months, Dodge Brothers, Inc., and their subsidiaries will introduce a new line of motor cars, in no way conflicting with the market for Dodge Brothers present types, but occupying a considerably higher price field and produced in limited quantities.

Combining Dodge Brothers well known dependability with exceptional performance and striking beauty of appointment and design, these distinguished vehicles, we believe, will instantly set a new and higher standard in fine car practice.

Dodge Brothers will continue to produce their present line in maximum quantities to meet a demand which, during the year just ended, was very much the largest in their history, reaching the record total of 330,000 cars.

4th PETERBORO TROOP

There were big things doing on Thursday night at the old Westclox building when the 4th Peterboro Troop started the 1927 scouting year with a fine meeting.

The night was spent in games and instruction work. Mr. Corbett, the scoutmaster, being in charge. Mr. Corbett gave a very interesting talk on animal tracking, illustrating it with pictures and chalk diagrams on the floor.

A new competition among the patrols, which are the Owls, Crows and Foxes, was started, points being given for smartness, cleanliness, initiative, winning games, etc. At the end of the meeting it was found that the Crows led with 111 points, closely followed by the Owls with 108 1-2, and the Foxes with 105.

All the games participated in were lively and in one case materially increased the resistance of the body to blows from a paper club.

At the sing-song which closed the meeting it was decided to have a hockey game between the Owls and the Crows in the near future and a hike on Saturday afternoon.

The Crow Patrol went to the Scout camp just past Nassau on New Year's Day and reported having a fine time, skiing and tracking. This was the first winter hike of the season and the camping knowledge of the scouts showed a decided improvement over last year.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS.

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, lumber king with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman! Abner, unobserved, maliciously cuts Ranny's stirrup strap, which causes Ranny to get nasty fall and kills his pony. Ranny suspects Abner—

Abner, barely repressing a start of fright, dared make no more than a fleeting direct search of Ranny's impassive face then he smiled nervously.

"The less you're bothered the better, I guess. I'll be off and let you rest. Besides, Mrs. Forbes doesn't need company, now."

"Oh, far be it from me to dream that she finds my company as stimulating as yours," said Ranny drily. "I'm only her husband, you know."

Upon a subject so touchy and delicate Abner had no desire to enter into a discussion. He departed hastily.

"Worm!" cursed Ranny under his breath.

"What did you say?" Joan started nervously.

"I said it's warm!" sneered Ranny.

Joan agreed. Under the circumstances she would have agreed as readily had he said it were cold. For she was both cold and warm every time Ranny neared a mention of Abner or looked suspiciously wise. Like the old map search game in boarding school—this husband-lover jousting.

Moreover, Joan was womanishly soft under her austere will consequently she ignored all other side issues and anxiously inquired as to the nature and extent of her lawful husband's bangs and bruises.

Ranny, being a man interpreted this manœuver as the sure sign of a guilty conscience. Undoubtedly he had been too previous in thinking that his wife's virtue and the Rock of Gibraltar had one thing in common—impregnability!

The thought made him feel terribly abused.

"I wonder," he said, in a manner intended to be quite biting, although an incoluntary groan when he turned a sore muscle detracted from the effect, "what your boy friend's rush was?"

Joan, being a woman, took refuge in a sarcastic defense. "I think the fall affected your head!"

"It did—cleared it up and gave me better vision of some things. I'm beginning to know who and where I am and what I'm up against," bitterly.

"Ranny Forbes, at just what are you driving?"

Joan was angry. Telltale fire points glowed in her eyes.

"I'm jus t intimating that there's going to be a murder around here!" he threatened enigmatically.

Joan's ejaculation and shrug were made of equal parts of annoyance—and fear. She was prevented from retorting, however, by the hurried arrival of Livingstone Stivner—solicitous, but wholly out of breath.

Ranny anticipated him with a bland smile. "My wife," he declared, "is ministering to my hurts so that I'll be fit to get into the next chukker."

Ranny beamed hypocritically upon Joan, who smiled with sweet malice. Then—Stivner never having met her—Ranny formally presented him to Joan.

Stivner, after assuring himself that Ranny's hurts were but superficial, launched into a prefervid appreciation of his polo prowess, and dwelt for Joan's benefit upon what a wonderful thing it must be to have so outstanding an athlete for one's husband.

All of which Joan listened to—without enthusiasm it is true, but with patience. Ever so much patience even Ranny admired her for it. But when, out of feeling for her, he tried to turn Stivner's garrulity into other lines, the great magnate mistook his efforts for modesty and redoubled his praise.

He had something of an eye for Joan himself, too—had Stivner. She was certainly not hard to look upon her beauty and poise were as rare as Ranny's athletic perfection.

"I know," said Stivner, smugly to Ranny, "that I've missed a good deal by not knowing your charming wife and yourself before this."

Ranny bowed his head gracefully, and stole a waggish look at Joan. Her eyes, however, were on Abner Gratman, in a group not far from the sedan.

Stivner, unconscious of the byplay, continued, now addressing Joan:

"But your husband and myself are about to consummate a deal, Mrs. Forbes, and I'm in hopes that we can combine business with pleasure and arrange the final interview during a week-end cruise on my yacht, when I hope to number you folks among my guests."

Ranny glowed with the out-of-door man's enthusiasm. He knew Stivner's yacht, "The Speedwell," not by personal experience but by common society hearsay. It was the last word in sporting luxury the costliest, finest rich man's plaything afloat finer, even, than Pierpont Morgan's "Corsair," on which Ranny had often been a guest.

He glanced at Joan, expecting her to be equally interested. Joan, however, was at that moment engaged in exchanging a long distance smile with Abner.

Stivner, still unconscious of the undercurrents, addressed Joan.

"I'm getting up a lively party for this coming week-end, Mrs. Forbes. I'd be charmed to have you and Mr. Forbes—"

"Why, I — er — I —" hesitated Joan, ignoring a deft prod from Ranny's sharp-toed riding boot.

"—we'll go outside the three, twelve, and fifteen miles limits," urged Stivner humorously, "and the crowd will be congenial, too. Just the sort you will enjoy. I wonder if most of them aren't friends of yours. There's Abner Gratman, for instance—"

"We'll go!" said Joan eagerly. "Thanks a lot!"

CHAPTER IV.

Meanwhile, the balance of the third and the whole of the fourth chukkers had been fought out with hectic courage on both sides.

Drake, young and worthy son of a great polo father, had found Ranny's boots a big assignment to fill. But fill them he did; and due to his valor the score still remained tied at 1 to 1.

The pace had burned out the fire of his young strength, however; to strain and struggle stirrup to stirrup against the hard riding-off of the Argentines required something more than talent and instinct. It required the mature vigor and reserve vitality of a veteran—THE veteran, Ranny Forbes.

Ranny got out of the sedan at the beginning of the seven minute rest period between the fourth and fifth chukkers which marked the midway point of this tightest and greatest of international games. He tentatively stretched his limbs, and gingerly felt of his muscles.

"I'm sound!" he gritted triumphantly to Joan and Stivner and his teammates, who had trotted anxiously over to learn his mind.

"Great!" cried Stivner. Then, in a low and friendly conversational tone to Joan, the magnate went on, "I've wagered fifty thousand dollars on the ability of that good right arm of your husband's, and that trusty mallet of his, to keep the Cup in the United States!"

Joan—knowing how much the pending lumber deal meant to Ranny's ego as an ambitious, if leisurely, capitalist—managed to get him aside and whisper, just before he started for the paddock:

"If I'm any judge of men, Ranny, this chap Stivner's attitude toward you in a business way will be helped if you win his bet for him."

To mollify the instinctive distaste she knew Ranny would have for anything involving his strictly amateur love of sport, Joan urged: "Of course, I know that for you the game's the thing, for sport's sake. But take a whack at the ball for the sake of ten million acres of lumber!"

Ranny might have trusted the honest interest in Joan's advice, if he had not unfortunately happened to see Abner Gratman standing near at hand, like a sly mouse, waiting for the tomcat to go away so that he could play with the tabby.

Ranny was no less an ass than all other jealous husbands. "Of course," he mocked icily, "I know that for you the week-end on the yacht is for yachting's sake alone, and not because the boy friend has been asked—"

TALK BUSINESS ON RADIOPHONE

International Bankers Transact Business Amounting To $3,000,000.

TRANSMIT NEWS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press)—"Hullo, London?"

"Are you there, New York?"

Thus two human voices by the grace of years of scientific research and five million dollars worth of complicated electrical equipment, leaped in either direction across the Atlantic yesterday for twenty-five dollars.

Forty New Yorkers talked to forty Londoners on the opening day of the transatlantic radiophone service. Business to the extent of more than $6,000,000 was transacted by international bankers speaking from telephones in their own offices, a news agency received the first commercial radiotelephone despatch from London.

The line was officially opened at 8:44 a.m., when President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone Company took down the receiver and asked to be connected with Sir G. Evelyn P. Murray of the British general post office.

A half minute later the two were talking seated some 3,500 miles apart with high seas, western England, New England and 6,300 miles of circuit route between them.

It was the least auspicious conversation of the day. For despite its ceremonial significance, static, the invisible enemy of radiated speech, crashed and spit.

Within half an hour, sending seemed clearer, and engineers explained that practically all of the inconvenience could be traceable to static. Newspapers and The Associated Press were the first to avail themselves of the new means of communication.

Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, was called to talk to Geoffrey Dawson, editor of the London Times at 8:56 a.m.

"Let me give you this pleasant bit of information, as a first message by telephone," said Mr. Ochs. "There is an ever increasing sentiment throughout the United States which is becoming more and more articulate in favor of a reconsideration of the foreign interallied debts after the French ratify their agreement, to the end that they may be adjusted on a high er moral and political basis for peace and good will throughout the world.

"Good bye. Hope to hear often from you."

At ten and one half minutes past nine o'clock the editors of the London Express and the New York Evening World were chatting together over the fact that the sun was shining in London as well as in this city.

The Associated Press called its London bureau from New York and received here the first news despatch to be transmitted to a news agency over the new commercial service. Ten months before, to the day, The Associated Press received another dispatch, when the two-way conversations were first found practicable. The dispatch today told of an expected visit to Canada and the United States of the Prince of Wales.

CORINNE CHAMPIONS A NEW WORKING GIRL

First National Star Brings Bright Romance To Strand in "Syncopating Sue."

Corinne Griffith proves herself the champion of the romantic working girl in "Syncopating Sue," her latest comedy vehicle, which comes to the Regent next Monday.

Having won an enviable reputation in previous pictures for the manner in which she portrayed stately, dramatic and emotional roles, Miss Griffith recently turned to another type of picture and showed a talent for portraying the typical New York working girl.

"Classified" was the first of a series in which Miss Griffith attempted subtle comedy and the picture met with the instant approval of the picture-going public. Critics declared it one of the ten best pictures of the year.

Now a Pianiste.

In "Classified" Miss Griffith glorified the stenographer. In "Mlle. Modiste" she was a struggling dressmaker, and now in the same vein comes "Syncopating Sue," with Corinne cast as a song-plugger, said by New York reviewers to be even better than her two previous comedy successes.

Directed by Richard Wallace, who learned his directorial science making comedies on the Hal Roach lot, Miss Griffith enacts the role of a romantic New York store piano player who yearns for a career on the stage.

Tom Moore in Lead.

This ambition and her love for a penniless orchestra drummer gets her into circumstances which, while awkward and perplexing to the stage-struck girl, nevertheless prove highly amusing and entertaining to an audience.

Tom Moore, of the famous Moore triumverate, is Miss Griffith's leading man in "Syncopating Sue," and the remainder of the cast is of equal high order, including Rockcliffe Fellowes, Joyce Compton, Lee Moran and Sunshine Hart.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE EAGLE OF THE SEA"

"The Eagle of the Sea!" What thoughts that phrase must bring to mind! Galleons of gold! Merchantships! Men-o'-war! Valiant vessels! Bold buccaneers! Plundering pirates!

All these will be seen at the Capitol Theatre Monday when Frank Lloyd's first Paramount production, "The Eagle of the Sea," makes its local debut. This Charles Tenney Jackson story traces the life of Jean Lafitte, noted American pirate, from the day he adopts the name "Captain Sarzac," until he wins the woman of his heart. Needless to say, this is only accomplished after many hazardous voyages, lively adventures and fierce fights.

History tells us that Lafitte won amnesty for himself and devil-dog crew when they helped "Old Hickory" Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. All became respected citizens with the solitary exception of their captain. He broke his parole and disappeared. A reward was then offered for his capture—dead or alive.

With this colorful past, Jean Lafitte arrives in New Orleans seven years later, just as a time when General Jacksons return is being celebrated. There he falls in love with Colonel Lestron's lovely niece, Louise. His courtship progresses very nicely until—Jackson recognizes him and she vehemently voices her dislike of men such as Lafitte. —Then—things started happening. But they come in such surprising fashion that each presents a greater thrill than the one preceding it. Florence Vidor, justly called "the orchid lady of the screen" is featured as is Ricardo Cortez, playing the most spectacular role of his career, that of Jean Lafitte.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

Polka-dotted silk in brown and Polka-dotted silk in brown and white is cleverly combined with plain brown in this frock designed by Worth of Paris. An interesting detail is the little white underaleeves.

The only reason why polka dots ever go out of style is because when they are in style they become so very popular that the time comes when we see them so often and sometimes in such unattractive guise that we just grow weary of them. Then the only thing to do is to put the fashion on the shelf and forget about it.

And that is about what the big dressmakers do. They know that after a few seasons women will be ready for polka dots again.

There is something very attractive about the polka dot. It is one of the most obvious of figures. The making of polka-dotted fabrics does not leave very much to the fabric designer. As a matter of fact the effect of the dotted material depends very much on the size of the dots—and their size compared with the spaces between. There really is no end to the variety that can be gained simply by changing the size of the dots and distance of one dot from the next.

Then, of course, there are different sorts of dots. Ring dots are usually well liked. And there are designs showing dots of graded sizes but these are not, strictly speaking, polka dots. It is the old-fashioned solid uniform dot that is in favor at present, and these dots are usually fairly close together. White dots on a navy blue background have a crisp, fresh appearance that usually makes them better liked in spring than autumn. White-dotted brown material is not so usual, but Worth of Paris has shown recently a frock made of white-dotted brown crepe de chine that has been much admired. It is as polka-dotted frocks should always be severely simple.

SAINT and SINNER

Bill and Frances Warren had visited very seldom in the Lane home, though the popular brother and sister, children of a wholesale druggist, had been glad to draw the gay, beautiful, clever little Cherry into their circle. Every town has its circles within circles of "society," and the Warrens moved comfortably and freely in the second circle. Ambitious Mrs. Warren had high hopes of marrying off the lovely, fragile, silver-blonde little Frances to George Pruitt or young Ralph Cluny, grandson of the old man to whom Cherry was engaged.

Both Faith and Cherry knew quite well that Frances Warren had consented to be a bridesmaid at her wedding because it would throw her into contact with both the Pruitts and the Clunys—leaders of the holy inner circle—and knew equally well that Selma Pruitt would never have accepted Cherry's invitation to serve as bridesmaid if her brother, George, anxious to befriend Faith, had not insisted on her doing so.

But Cherry bothered her curly, scheming little head not at all with causes, so long as the results pleased her. She was ecstatic over the fact that she herself would become, by marriage with old Mr. Cluny, a "charming young matron" of the innermost circle, and that her wedding party would reflect credit upon her own prenuptial social status.

Faith looked at Bill Warren curiously as he tapped a Turkish cigaret upon the polished nail of a fine, strong hand. Why did they all bother to shield Cherry? Somehow she had summoned Bill Warren to her rescue, after her father had seen her in Chris Wiley's roadster.

"Have one?" Bill Warren grinned, as he extended his cigaret case toward Cherry.

She took one, put it between her lips, and leaned forward to light it at Bill's flaming match.

"No," Faith spoke sharply, snatching the cigaret from Cherry's lips. "You know you promised Dad you wouldn't. You've caused him enough heartaches for one night, Cherry. Don't encourage her to do things she shouldn't, Bill."

"Oh, bottle it!" Cherry cried angrily. "Everybody smokes. Thank God, I'm getting married and I can do as I please then. Oh, say, Faith, sit down, and don't look like a Christian martyr. There's oceans to tell you. I suppose Dad raised the roof? Just my luck to have him on a West Tenth Street car for probably the first time in a year!"

"Why do you do such insane things? Everybody knows you're engaged to Mr. Cluny, and yet you throw yourself wide open to scandal by being seen two or three times a week with Chris Wiley."

"I guess Long's been tattling," Cherry flamed. "I didn't really have a date with him. He just saw me walking along on Chestnut Street and offered me a lift. Of course we got to quarreling about my wedding, and he simply refused to take me home. That's how Dad happened to see us out by the end of the car line. Then he made me dine with him out on the pike, at 'Ye Olde Logge Cabin'—the grandest fried chicken you ever tasted, Faith!"

"I take off my hat to Chris if he can 'make' you do anything," Faith interrupted bitterly. "It's more than your father or mother or sister can do. Well, go on. You're saving up something to shock me with, I can tell."

"Oh, what an evening!" Cherry shuddered, but her eyes were bright with excitement. "Faith, can you feature this—we were followed! Shadowed!"

"Shadowed? Oh, Cherry, by a detective? Oh, I wish you would behave yourself! We'll all have nervous prostration before you're safely married!"

"I'm getting an awful kick out of it!" Cherry laughed, shrugging her shoulders. "I'm positively thrilled to death! Fancy being important enough to be shadowed!"

"How do you know you were followed?" Faith spoke naturally, conquering her impulse to slap Cherry's lovely, flushed cheek resoundingly.

"Oh, my dear!" the light, tinkling laugh rang out. "There was no doubt at all. I began to get wise last week when I kept seeing a funny looking man everywhere I went. Why do they pick out such homely sleuths? He certainly has a face you can't forget. Positively monkey-like! And he always needs a shave. Short, thick; bow-legged, greasy-haired, pig eyes. Isn't he like that, Bill?

"Check!" Bill Warren laughed rather uncomfortably, for Cherry's high spirits in the face of certain scandal were grating on him as well as on Faith.

"If I went into a shop, he hung around the door. If I had lunch with—well, with anybody," she flushed; and dropped her eyes before Faith's steady troubled gaze, "he'd be Johnny-on-the-spot! The most efficient little shadower you ever saw! Like a detective in a slap-stick comedy, really.

"He trailed us to 'Ye Olde Logge Cabin' tonight and ate the two dollar chicken dinner at the very next table to ours. I suppose he's on expense account, and doesn't give a hang about the cost. Chris and I danced, of course, and we saw him making notes on a greasy envelope."

"I'll bet Chris Wiley hired him himself!" Faith exclaimed, as if she had suddenly seen a great light. "And I'll bet it's Chris Wiley that has been sending those annonymous letters!" Before the last words were cold on her lips she bit her tongue, for she was sure that Cherry had not told Bill Warren about the four scurrilous blackmail epistles.

"Anonymous letters?" Bill jumped to his feet. "Good heavens, Cherry! You didn't tell me that! I don't want to be dragged into this mess!"

"Pipe down!" Cherry snatched at his coat, her small face coldly contemptuous. "You're all wet, Faith! Guess who met my boy friend, the sleuth, under the verandah of the cabin?"

Faith's heart gave a wild leap of terror, but she did not cry out, she could only question Cherry mutely with her great, frightened brown eyes.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 9, 1927

Again good and evil planetary influences conflict, according to astrology. The morning is subject to the better direction of the stars.

There is a favorable sign for the clergy and much work for the church in the new year, it is foretold.

Women are to concentrate on religion as in the past, it is forecast, and there is to be a revival of old-fashioned service.

Competition is to become strong in the coming year among Catholics, Protestants, Jews and followers of Oriental teachers, the seers foretell.

Temples to Hindu and other faiths will be reared in more than one city, astrologers forecast.

The strengthening of separate religious movements is of happy augury, it is explained, since they will eventually unite to combat vice and crime in the United States.

In the evening Uranus is in an aspect disturbing to faith and likely to encourage those who would tear down American ideals.

Gossip is supposed to be stimulated under this aspect which inclines men and women to think the worst of one another.

Marriage and divorce now come into more frequent consideration on the part of legal bodies and change is foretold in the status of the family.

Scandals will be so numerous as to arouse public protest and in 1927 there will be indication of strong reactionary tendencies.

Thrift should be cultivated, if the stars are to be trusted, for extravagance is to be even more apparent in the coming year than ever before.

Again fashions are to show elaboration, a reflection of the spirit which would spend money lavishly for adornment and for amusement.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have much to do with land and property in the coming year, which should be very prosperous.

Children born on this day may be exceedingly talented and aware of superiority. They should be trained to humility, for they may incline toward egotism.

MONDAY, JANUARY 10, 1927

Astrologers read this as an extraordinarily unfavorable day in planetary rule. It is well to proceed with caution.

Aviators should be on their guard, as accidents may be easily brought about and there is indication of frightful storms in certain regions.

While this configuration prevails, there may be a tendency to criticise and to pass severe judgment on one's neighbors.

It is not an auspicious day for jury trials since faults will magnify and charity will be rarer than usual.

If one would pass this day happily one must be blind to all except the virtues for the mind quickly reflects what is bad instead of what is good.

The sway is menacing to literature which this year will offer even more sordid tales of life then have been published in the past.

While 1927 may mark the lowest level in certain forms of character interpretation on the stage and on the printed page, reactionary forces are gaining impetus, the seers announce.

Labor troubles appear on the horizon and they will involve industries in which many women are employed, it is forecast.

This is a most inauspicious rule under which to seek employment or promotion as heads of business department may be difficult to please and generally disgruntled.

On a day like this routine tasks should be pursued and all discouraging thoughts should be resolutely denied entrance to the consciousness.

Activity among the extreme radicals in the British Labor party will bring about more than one embarrassing political incident in the next few weeks, astrologers foretell.

Severe weather is to cause great suffering in certain cities of the United States, according to astrology.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of mixed experiences. They should make no changes.

Children born on this day may be sensitive and difficult to manage. They are likely to have unusual talents.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER
By Mildred Marshall

A happy marriage is promised the wearer of an onyx, today's talismanic stone. This will be accomplished through the cool, dispassionate state of mind which the onyx is said to bestow, dispelling the illusions of love which warp judgement and blind the victim to the faults of the beloved. For those contemplating a second marriage, it is invaluable.

Those born on an anniversary of this date should wear an emerald, the stone sacred to Venus, goddess of love. Those who wear it are believed to be endowed with unusually clear vision.

Yellow is today's hue. Benefit from legacy or other generosity is believed to come to those who wear it.

The fragrant little tea rose is the fortunate flower on this day. It indicates a happy home life and perfect trust.

KIWANIS LADIES' NIGHT

(By Jeannette.)

The installation of officers of the Kiwanis Club, which took place at the Empress Hotel last evening, and was also one of the regular Ladies' Nights of the club, was one of the jolliest affairs of the season, and was attended by eighty guests. It was marked by a mock marriage ceremony, performed immediately before the service of the banquet commenced, between the new president of the Club, Isaac P. McNabb, and the bride who was thrust upon him, as it were, Mr. McNabb, sublimely unconscious of the fate impending, having seated himself innocently against the bank of artificial flowers prepared for the occasion, when the conspirators entered. Advancing to the corner of the room which had been draped with cream lace and filled with bright bloom, Jack McKone, very grave, in conventional ministerial garments and hat, with a large pair of spectacles on his crimson nose, preceded the charming flower girl (Joe Wearing) attired in a stunning outfit of green, with large black hat and basket of pink roses. John J. Turner, who gave the bride away, and Wilfred Huycke, the best man, were in conventional suits, complete with high silk "toppers," and the bridesmaid was Mark Bredi, fetchingly costumed in an orange and white gown, with a large black-feathered hat and bouquet of orange and white. Last, but decidedly not least, was the hit of the evening, the bride (Art Reynolds) in white satin gown, tulle veil over a blushing countenance, that was surmounted by a wreath of orange blossoms, and large bouquet. The bride, "Helen Constance Millicent," and bridegroom, "Isaac Ichabod Ishmael," were united in appropriate language by the grave officiating gentleman amidst shrieks of merriment from the audience, and to the strains of the wedding music played by Martin Chenhall. A large iced wedding cake formed one of the decorations of the head table, and was cut by the "bride" later on in the evening.

Past President John Craig presided at the head table, which was arranged with vases of paper white narcissus, while the individual tables were centred in wedding-breakfast fashion, with colored lighted candles and colored paper streamers, tiny baskets of colored candies, and paper crackers which provided the guests with frivolous paper caps.

The banquet was splendidly served and the usual community singing formed a portion of the programme, with Hugh Nevin leading. Herb Gilgour acted as Sergeant-at-Arms. Boosters of the evening who made brief providing bridge prizes, and John I. Allen, providing prizes for the ladies, in dainty strings of pearl beads, which were won by means of a "Bingo" game that decided the winners, and was presided over in turn by John Heron, Carl Browne and Carl McLean. The prizes were won by Mrs. Hugh Nevin, Mrs. H. Doll, Senior, of Toronto, a guest of the evening, and Mrs. John Marshall. The musical programme also included several beautifully sung solos by Miss Daisy Murray, whose fine voice was heard to much advantage in "Lo's a Merchant," and its encore, "My Grandma's Advice," with accompaniment by Martin Chenhall. Later, on in the evening, Miss Murray, accompanied by Miss Gwen Donley, sang "If Winter Comes," and "I ain't Got Nothin'." Another feature of the evening was the demonstration of the Charleston dance and encore given by Miss Mary Dunlop, recent winner in the Charleston contest conducted by the Capitol Theatare. Miss Murray and Miss Dunlop were presented with gifts by the Club, the presentations being made by Wilfred Huycke and Roy Taylor.

A feature of the singing that is always a favorite with the Kiwanians is the "Alouette" song, and no one can lead it like Joe Wearing, who put all the pep of which he is capable in its rendition last night. Mr. Wearing also took occasion during the evening to express the thanks of the Club to their musician, Martin Chenhall, who does so much in the provision of music for the meetings.

Past President John Craig introduced the speaker of the evening, the Kiwanian Lieutenant-Governor for this district, William Mills of Kingston, who proceeded to install the new officers in a manner that won him many admiring comments. His address was free from the touch of stereotyped delivery which characterizes the speeches of many public speakers on an occasion of this sort, and was extremely interesting in its earnest outlining of the inner ideals of the Kiwanis organization. Illustrating his address by a number of good stories, told well, he spoke in congratulatory terms to the society and its members on the absence of ritualistic formula in the carrying out of the Club's endeavors. "This country," he said, "is at the apex of the power of the ritualist, but we belong to an organization which does not rely on ritualistic ceremonies or formalities. And no one man is essential to the life of this Club. Officers may come and go, but the Kiwanis organization goes on to bigger and finer things. In starting out to make this a bigger and better year than ever in the annals of your club, remember that much depends upon the co-operation and activity of the members generally. You must be actuated by a deepening consciousness and acceptance of the Kiwanis ideals, in the spirit of friendly service which is the Kiwanis goal, and he is not a true Kiwanian who has not always his club's objective at heart, plus a deep determination that this objective shall be attained."

The speaker remarked on the fine attendance at the meetings of the local Club, which have been at the eighty-five per cent. mark as a rule during the period just finished, and went on to speak of some of the deterrents to progress. "Beware of bitterness and of bad temper," he said; "but do not be afraid of criticism given in good temper and with a friendly manner. Groups and factions have no place in Kiwanis clubs, for the cardinal sin against the spirit of Kiwanis is bad feeling amongst the members. Every man should be at peace with his neighbor."

The new officers were then introduced by Kiwanian Douglas Paterson, who performed his duties in very fine, characteristic style. To the new president, Isaac McNabb, Kiwanian Mills addressed an admonition to regard his Kiwanis badge as a symbol of the meanings that might easily be ascribed to the separate letters; K standing for kindness, I for inspiration, W for work, A for ambition, N for neighborliness, I for idealism, and S for success. The audience sang "He's a Daisy," as President McNabb took his place.

Kiwanian Paterson, in presenting Past President Dr. J. J. Craig, spoke of him as having been one of the best presidents of the local Club, and lauded in enthusiastic terms his untiring efforts during the past year, also including Mrs. Craig in his speech, as having assisted materially in the success of the Club. To Dr. Craig, presenting the Past President's badge, Kiwanian Mills spoke of the inner meaning which might be ascribed to his badge; the K standing for knowledge, the I for individuality, the W for will, the A for advancement, the N for nobility, the I for initiative, and the S for service.

Kiwanian John Marshall then presented Mrs. Craig with a beautiful bouquet of roses, the club singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," and giving her three cheers and a tiger.

The vice-president, John I. Allen, was next introduced as having given excellent service during the past year, and Kiwanian Paterson referred to Mrs. Allen as being now, in the absence of a president's wife, the "first lady of the club for this year." The treasurer, Charles Elliott, followed, and the secretary, John R. Heron, who was characterized by Kiwanian Paterson as an exceptional secretary, who is "capable of doing everything with the greatest amount of accuracy and just a little bit ahead of the scheduled time." Kiwanian Mills congratulated the new president as being "thrice blessed in having a secretary like Jack Heron," referred to his own knowledge of the latter's qualifications, and predicted for him a very high office in the Club in time to come.

John J. Turner was next introduced as District Trustee, as being eminently fitted for the office in every way, and, like the other officers, was addressed by the Lieutenant-Governor in appropriate terms, the latter also taking occasion to address collectively the directors and chairmen of committees, adjuring them to qualities of willingness, adaptability, leadership, experience, interest in the specific task and ability to co-operate.

President McNabb expressed to Kiwanian Mills the appreciation of the Club for the able manner in which he had handled the ceremony of installation of officers, and went on to thank the Club for the honor done himself in the elevation to the presidency. He asked for the loyal support of the members in the year just commencing, and promised to uphold the name of Kiwanis in the community and to further its interests in every possible way.

Past President Craig voiced his appreciation of the eulogisms to himself and to Mrs. Craig, and also urged attendance at the forthcoming banquet in Toronto to Hon. Harry Cockshutt. On motion of Douglas Paterson, seconded by Jack McKone, Past President Craig was appointed official representative of the Club at this banquet.

At the conclusion of the addresses, Kiwanian Joseph John, in a very finely worded speech, introduced to the Club a new member in the person of Robert Haddow.

Later, a programme of cards and dancing concluded the entertainment of the evening. Very good music was provided by Stewart Widdess' three-piece orchestra. The "lucky number" dance and a pretty prize was won by Miss Mary Dunlop and her partner, Mr. Arthur Jones. Prize for bridge were won by Mrs. H. Gilgour and J. E. Smith, consolation awards going to Mrs. John Marshall and H. W. Dicken.

S. Howard Lyon, who was a guest, organized the Kiwanis Clubs at Richmond, Va., and Norfolk, Va.

ADULTS BORROW FEWER BOOKS

Circulation of Public Library Shows Decrease During Past Year.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Gentlemen:—

I beg to present herewith my annual report for the year 1926. In many respects the year has been a successful one, although there has been a small falling off in the circulation. This decrease is very largely accounted for by the succession of wet days that were experienced in the early part of the year, a fact which was also noted and felt by libraries elsewhere. The most marked decrease over that of 1925 was in the fiction department, which showed a circulation of 52,890 for that year and 51,347 for the year just closed. I am confident that with the large accession of new books purchased by the Library Board last year and the policy of keeping non-fiction classes strictly up to date, there will be a large increase in our circulation. That interest in the Library is not dying is vouched for by the fact that during the year new borrowers of books, 357 women and 235 men, took out cards in the adult section.

The Juvenile Department, under the supervision of Miss Hood, has shown good progress. The Reading Room attendance for the year was estimated at 12,454. The increase in the circulation over 1925 was 2,659 and the number of fresh applications taken out amounted to 650. The Story Hour average attendance was 50. Miss Hood, in addition to her library work, gave talks on several occasions to visiting school classes, and also to the Teachers' Association and the Rotary Club, which were greatly appreciated.

There has been a great amount of work done in the binding and repair department. 1,396 volumes were repaired and 59 magazines bound. Miss Knapp also did a considerable amount of work in assistance at the receiving desk during holidays, both in the adult and juvenile departments.

Our Reference Department has been extremely well patronzed and in this as in other departments of our work Miss Sullivan and Mrs. Strong have been of great service to readers, and have done very efficient and painstaking work.

There has been a certain amount of mutilation of books and magazines. I am glad to record, however, that the damage in this respect has been slight, in almost every instance the type of literature mutilated being of a lower order and of a character fitted to the mentality of the individual who would value it.

I append figures of circulation in the adult and juvenile departments for the years 1925 and 1926, for purposes of comparison:

Adult	1925	1926
Fiction	52,890	51,347
Biography	1,484	1,487
Religion	580	664
Sociology	520	519
Nat. Science	538	488
Literature	2,240	2,234
Useful Arts	810	775
Fine Arts	690	647
Travel	1,381	1,497
History	1,271	937
Magazines	614	455
Philosophy	361	398
Reference Room	14,025	13,414
	74,344	74,862

Juvenile	1925	1926
Fiction	16,349	16,160
Biography	1,004	1,104
Religion	571	583
Sociology	3,344	3,363
Philology	2,344	4,356
Natural Science	2,345	2,405
Useful Arts	1,272	1,322
Fine Arts	724	787
Literature	1,262	1,259
Travel	1,780	2,179
History	1,294	1,257
Reference	2,465	2,638
	34,754	37,413

The Reading Room attendance for the year in the Juvenile Department was estimated at 12,454, as before noted. We have no means of judging, except in a general way of the numbers who have used the Reading Rooms in the Adult Department, but it has certainly not decreased, both reading rooms having been consistenly well patronized.

With regard to the disparity in the numbers using the Reference Room in the two years; it has to be borne in mind that the figures given are not from actual count but an arbitrary estimate based on the circulation of each day, and as such liable to be much astray. It has also to be borne in mind that many adult readers make use of the Children's Department for help in their work, especially teachers and Normal School students.

Fiction 250, biography 16, religion 5, sociology 51, philology 121, natural science 25, useful arts 15, fine arts 12, literature 13, travel 45, history 8, reference 3; total 564.

Adult.—Fiction 569, religion 23, philosophy 8, sociology 31, philology 7, natural science 52, useful arts 24, fine arts 21, literature 100, travel 32, history 20, reference 27, magazines (bound in library) 59, biography 37; total 1,010.

In conclusion I beg to thank the Board on behalf of the staff and myself for the consistent and sympathetic assistance which has been accorded us.

Yours respectfully,
F. M. DelaFosse, Librarian.

The term hairsbreath, which is now used to denote an almost infinitesimal space, was at one time an actual measure. It was the width of 16 hairs laid side by side.

INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS IN QUEBEC MINING FIELD.

A well known Mining Engineer, sends the following report from the Rouyn mining field in northwestern Quebec which he has just visited:

NORANDA A visit to this property shows underground work is being confined largely at the present time to the widening of drifts and crosscuts for main haulage ways. The type of electric locomotive which is to be used in this hauling is such that it can be lowered from one level to another on the cage in the No. 3 shaft. Recently a raise was driven from the 200 foot level to the 100 foot level in order to prepare for mining operations. This raise was in "B" orebody south of the No. 1 shaft. This is the first attempt that has been made to raise through an orebody from one level to the other. The work showed massive chalcopyrite all the way.

On surface, smelter construction is ahead of schedule. Cement work is well ahead of steel construction. Carpenter shops and new storeroom are up and bricked in. Bricking in of the machine and electrical shops is well under way. Cement work for the No. 3 or main shaft cellar and dry has been completed and a temporary headframe is being erected. A striking feature of the construction and lay-out on the Smelter site is that the Company has put in railroad spurs from the main lines, which spurs pass through the important buildings which go to make up the complete smelter. Standard locomotives and railway rolling stock can be taken into and through the buildings, thus allowing for cheap handling of ores, fluxes, machinery and materials. At the present time steel work is being swung into place by a derrick placed on railroad cars in the main building. It is quite apparent that the smelter as being erected at present is only the first unit of a very much larger plant. This unit will be good for 1000 tons of ore per day and provision has been made in regard to site, etc. for two or three additional units of the same capacity.

GROVER-DALEY Work on this property has been held up pending further financial arrangements. These arrangements we understand are now complete and exploration will be immediately continued. The property has assumed considerably greater importance recently, due to the indications on area and other properties in the vicinity. With intelligent work going on we believe that the property, particularly the holdings which tie on to the Vickers and Ribago, has splendid chances of developing very importantly. It is a good prospect.

AMULET A visit to this property shows that sinking in the No. 4 area has reached a depth of 275 feet. An interesting feature about the ore opened up by this work is that as lower levels are reached, in all cases the lenses have a decided tendency to widen out.

The drawing of plans for a concentrator apparently proves that Amulet will operate their own plant at least as far as concentration goes. A mill superintendent, who by the way has been a member of the Hollinger staff, has been appointed to look after this work.

Amulet is well away, with an assured future.

LAVAL-QUEBEC Work on this property has been confined largely to their holdings on the N.W. corner of Pelletier Lake. Geological information has been obtained under considerable difficulty, due to the heavy overburden. The outline of the contracts of the older gabbros have been fairly well established. This gabbro contact is important, being similar to the gabbro found in association with the rich orebodies on Noranda. On Claims No. 1842 a geological condition similar to that found on Amulet has been proven.

On Claim No. 1741 encouraging meter readings were obtained.

A contract has been signed with the Swedish Electrical Company for a survey of the property. Magnetometer work will be continued through the winter, together with a campaign of diamond drilling. This property is certainly being well and intelligently explored. The management have had a great deal to contend with on account of heavy overburden and deserve great credit for the work that they have accomplished. We feel that an electrical survey followed by diamond drilling will prove that the time spent on geological work has not been wasted but has proven to be of very great value to the property.

ACONDA MINES This property in Boischatel, adjoining Amulet's "C" group, is now ready for magenetometer survey which is to start immediately. Work on their showings in the northeast corner of Claim No. 345 will consist of further trenching. Some of these trenches will be run to the Amulet line to pick up if possible the find of disseminated copper close to the line. On the Aconda on what is known as the south showing shots have been put in which showed low grade iron and copper sulphides. A picked specimen from this work showed values as high as $200 in platinum. This is the first occurrence of platinum which has been reported in the district. Its importance has not by any means been fully determined but it certainly gives room for considerable thought. In the north section of the property a mineralized area was located on which no work has as yet been done. It looks fairly important. This area will be trenched. The mineralized zones here lies in the rhyolites while the southern zones are found in basic andesite. Work is proceeding along highly intelligent lines and we are hopeful of ultimate success being met with. td-7-1490

International Nickle Features Toronto Market

TORONTO, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press)—International Nickel was the feature of the closing session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today more than 5,000 shares of the issue changing hands. Nickel opened at 42 7-8, rose to a new high of 43 1-8, and eased to 42 1-2 at the close. Brazilian Traction was strong, rising 3-4 to 105 1-2. British Columbia Fishing was up 1 at 83 3-4 and City Dairy sprang somewhat of a surprise when it gained 4 1-2 points to 85 1-2 in fairly heavy dealing for this stock. Gooderham and Worts was up 3-8 on the unlisted market; Seagrams also gaining 1-8 at 16 5-8. Hiram Walker, new issue, which has received considerable attention during the past few days was again heavily dealt in, with more than 2,000 shares being traded in, and the issue registering a loss of 1-8 at 33. Imperial Oil was up 1-8 at 38 3-8.

FLEMING DECLINES REPLY TO EVIDENCE

Will Make No Statement Until He Reads Full Report.

JUNIPER, N.B., Jan. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Hon. J. E. Fleming, former premier of New Brunswick, declined this morning to make any statement regarding the testimony given by Senator Arthur Gould before the committee on elections and privileges of the United States' Senate at Washington yesterday until he had had an opportunity to read a complete report of the evidence. Mr. Fleming was asked by the Canadian Press whether he would make a statement and this was his reply.

Mining Market Active Area Makes New Gains

TORONTO, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press).—Business was again brisk on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, and more than 700,000 shares changed hands during the morning session. The market on the whole was firm, gains outnumbering losses. Area Mine, which has gained consistently for the past week, was again higher to-day, closing at 178, a gain of six cents. Teck Hughes also was up six at 593. Argonaut Consolidated was down two at 85, Corona up 1-3-4 at 31, Duprat up one at 31, and Macassa up two at 36. Nipissing registered a 30-cent gain at 9.25. In the unlisted section, Amulet 2, up seven at 183 Grover Daly up two at 98½, and Stadacona up 1½, were all heavily dealt in.

Upward Move Continues Due To Investment Buying

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (Canadian Press) — Constructive forces were again at work in today's stock market, which continued to respond to investment buying and easy credit conditions. American Telephone and Telegraph common was the individual feature, touching 155 3-8, an overnight gain of four points and the highest price since 1905. Buying of this issue undoubtedly was influenced by the possibility of increased earnings through the inauguration of the new Trans-Atlantic telephone service.

With freight traffic being maintained in unusually heavy volume, railroad shares attracted a large investment and speculative following with the best gains being recorded by such issues as Atlantic Coast line, Atchison, Deleware and Hudson, and New York Central.

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

MELINDA

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Though not generally listed in English nomenclature and regarded rather as a product of the South in this country, Melinda has, in reality, an interesting history dating back to Spanish ballad lore. In that remote era, she was, undoubtedly, Melisenda and first appeared as the name of the wife of Don Gayferos who, being taken captive by the Moors, on the occasion of the feats that were represented by the puppet shows in which Don Quixote took an unfortunately lively interest.

Another Melisenda was the Princess Melisenda who carried the uneasy crown of Jerusalem to the House of Anjou. It was a most natural step to eliminate the over-abundance of syllables and contract the name to our present-day euphonious Melinda. For some inexplicable reason, it caught the fancy of the South and its popularity there is still unquestioned.

The opal is Melinda's talismanic stone. It is the most mysterious and safcinating of all gems and is believed to bestow upon its wearer the charm which comes from brilliancy, restlessness and ever-changing moods. It will prove for Melinda a talisman against sorrow. Monday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

NEW WAYS WITH OLD POTATOES

Potato Souffle.—Peel some potatoes, drain and dry them near the stove and then press them through a wire sieve. Add a little salt and pepper and some melted butter—two tablespoons for a pound of potatoes before cooking. For a pound of potatoes you will need two eggs, which should be separated. Beat yolks until lemon color and the whites to a stiff froth. Add the yolks and a cup of rich milk, and lastly the whipped egg whites. Put into a buttered baking dish and bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Owing to the eggs in this dish it makes a good dish in a meatless or vegetarian meal.

BABY'S COLDS

Children's delicate digestions are easily disturbed by too much "dosing." Still, the little ones' cold troubles cannot be neglected.

At the very first sign of croup, sore throat, or any other cold trouble, apply Vicks VapoRub over the throat and chest. There is nothing to swallow—you just rub it on. Colds go over night, croup is usually relieved in 15 minutes.

W. M. S. MEETING HELD AT OMEMEE

Mrs. O. G. Williamson Re-elected President—Omemee News.

OMEMEE, Jan. 8.—The December meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held at the home of Mrs. Scott Rutherford.

President—Mrs. O. G. Williamson.
Vice-President—Mrs. L. Windrim.
Secretary—Mrs. E. H. Mitchell.
Treasurer—Mrs. S. J. Mackey.

The year's work was passed in review. The membership roll stands at twenty-five. Twelve meetings have been held with an average attendance of eleven.

Last year's study book, "The Island Beautiful," was finished, but the new book, "Prayer and Missions," was not quite completed.

A sale valued at twenty dollars was packed and the allocation of ninety-five dollars was sent to the Presbyterial treasurer.

Play Successful.

The usual large audience greeted the Anglican Young People's Association in Coronation Hall on New Year's night, when they presented to the public their annual farcical comedy, which for 1927 was "The Private Secretary." The play was given under the direction of Mrs. Fred Bent, and to use a war-time expression, "went over the top, big."

A brief synopsis of the play follows:

Douglas Cattermole, the sole heir of an eccentric but wealthy old uncle, whom he has never seen, is in possession of a handsome bachelor apartment. He is a care-free young man, and persists in piling up bills with no thought of pay-day, much to the consternation of his kindly old housekeeper, who tries to remonstrate with him and, at the same time shield him. Harry Marsland, the nephew of a wealthy country squire, is in the city to meet his uncle's private secretary, and concocts a scheme whereby Douglas may evade his creditors for a time by returning to the country with him and posing as the new private secretary, leaving Robert Spalding (said secretary) in charge of the apartment. Horace Hill, as Robert Spalding, a frail-looking, begoggled young man, wearing goloshes and a straw hat, and deeply concerned over his numerable "goods and chattels," which lacked nothing excepting a bird cage, elicited tumultuous applause at every appearance. Jack Bent, as Mr. Cattermole, the eccentric old uncle, whose liver plays pranks with his temper, arrives unexpectedly and believes Robert Spalding to be his nephew, and is so disgusted that he terrifies the housekeeper and the meek imposter. Later, visiting his old friend Squire Marsland, he locates his real nephew and all ends happily.

The complete cast was as follows:

Mr. Marsland, M.F.H. — Jesse Chatten.
Harry Marsland—Harry Burgess.
Mr. Cattermole—John Bent.
Douglas Cattermole (his nephew)—Arthur Stephenson.
Sidney Gibson (Tailor)—Reuben Reeds.
Robert Spalding—Horace Hill.
John (a Servant)—Allan Adams.
Knox (a Writ Server)—Oscar Lang.
Edith Marsland—Helen Mackey.
Eva Webster (her friend)—Ethel Stenhenson.
Mrs. Stead (Douglas' Housekeeper)—Mrs. Jamieson.
Miss Ashford—Marion Dickson.

During the intervals between acts several piano duets and solos were given by the Misses Lenore Jamieson, Jane Earle and Helen Mackey, as well as a vocal number by Mr. Wilbert Clemett, all of which were much enjoyed by the audience. Proceeds amounted to nearly $20.

Minister Taken Ill.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were startled for a few moments at their Sunday morning service when the pastor, Rev. Mr. Donaghue, was seized with a heart attack while reading the Scripture lesson. Medical aid was summoned, and the afflicted gentleman was removed to his home, where he is now none the worse from his attack.

The following is part of a letter received from Mrs. T. Cooke (nee Mabel Thompson), an Omemee girl, now doing missionary work in China, which will be of interest to her many friends in Omemee:

Kiating, W. China.

"We have been living in such uncertain times lately that our minds have been rather taken up with thoughts of preparation for travelling. But we are glad to say we have been allowed to stay in peace and quietness in this city. No doubt you have read all about the Wanhsien affair in the papers, and it had its re-action up in this part of the province. Chengtu, the capital, has felt it worst. The University has been the special object of attack of the section of the community who seek to engender hatred of the British (Bolshevik influences at work). Students have left the Union University, some were forced to leave by one section which was very rabid, and finally last week servants were called out on strike. This has meant a great deal as foreigners had even to mind the gates, besides looking after their homes. The servants did not want to leave in many cases, but were threatened with branding. We are anxiously awaiting the result as there is a section of the student class anxious to go ahead with their studies and who are favorable to the foreigner. Some one from there writes that they seem to be divided into three classes: (a) Those actively hostile who seem to want to destroy everything; (b) those rather indifferent, who are afraid of class a; (c) those favoring foreigners, and the carrying on of the University—number in these seem about equal. Cases are being told us of some of the Chinese showing great loyalty and this is very cheering in the midst of so much upheaval and discouragement. Consul Affleck (British Consul at Chengtu) is very anxious for women and children to leave till affairs are more settled. This is in view especially of the disturbed condition of the country. You will have read, too, of the struggle raging down at Hankow between the North and the South. That affects us, as it is right on our way to the coast. The Chinese generally are much more interested in this struggle than in the complication with Britain, in spite of inflammatory speeches and posters. At one time we thought we might have to get out at once (that was right after the affair at Wanhsien), and many times since we have had warnings from the Consul, that he would like us to go. We have been quiet here in Kiating. It seems a little haven in times of such disorder. Our work has been going on steadily, Sunday service and week-night street preaching and prayer meetings, and we have gone on the street unmolested. Not a hostile glance or nasty word have we heard. Mr. Cooke was off in the country a few days ago, and in a city 90 li away, he had awful names hurled at him. He took no notice, so they got nowhere. So we hardly know when we may be going down river. We have up till now suffered no discomfort, and our servants have been quite unaffected. Mr. Cook's brother is urging us to come to his former home in England to see his aged mother, who recently lost her daughter.

"The children are getting big. Arthur was three a few days ago. Elva is reading quite nicely, and they are all developing well. Arthur talks in both languages very well, and seems quite 'smart.' We have a young worker with us just now, Miss Atkinson, from Toronto, who came to China last year. She was a little girl of 7 or 8 in Howard School when I left there for China. She remembers the excitement of my leaving. She admires Miss McKenzie very much, and has great regards for Miss Vardon and Miss Sherman too.

"We did not get up to the hills this summer as the Consul advised us not to go on account of rumors of trouble. We are thankful the children have kept well. They greatly enjoy the change to the hills and benefit by it very much, so it was a great disappointment."

"AT HOME."

ROSENEATH, Jan. 8 — The Anglican congregation held an "At Home" in the town hall on December 28th chiefly in honor of the children of St. James' church.

About 7 p.m. the many children were seated to a table laden with many children were seated to a table laden with everything to satisfy a hungry feeling, consisting of cold fowl, salads, sandwiches, pies, tarts, cakes, and many other good things which was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. While the "grown-ups" were partaking of their meal the kiddies were entertained by Mrs. A. Armstrong of Toronto who told them many stories which interested them for some time. A few games were played and then an excellent programme given, under the supervision of Mrs. William Coyle and was as follows: the opening piece was hymn 723, "Who Is He in Yonder Stall"; a solo by Miss Marion Coyle, "When the Christmas Chimes are Ringing"; recitation by Luella Timlin entitled "Who Made the Speech"; a Christmas carol was then sung "Sweetly Sang the Angels." Verna Radly recited "Little Tot's Advice"; recitation by Harold Coyle, "To Santa Claus"; Allen Pacey gave a very amusing selection entitled "The Wonderful Horse," comparing a horse to an automobile. Recitation by Luella Brown entitled "Mother"; carol; "The Message of the Bells," by the school; recitation "The Loving Little Girl," by Unice Webb; Christmas Eve was given by Elva McCracken, after which a playlette was given by eight children reciting "The Star of Bethlehem," followed with singing Luther's Cradle hymn; a solo by Olive and Anota Shearer; recitation, "The Little One's Speech" by Clarence Parker; carol, "Christ the Good Shepherd," by the school; recitation by Francis Parker, "Hang Up the Baby's Stockings"; song, "What the Flowers Say," by the school; recitation, by Earl Radley, "Letter from Santa; dialogue, "A Minister's Mistake," by Valda Webb and Frances Parker; solo by Harold Coyle entitled Something for Jesus Each Day; recitation, "The Christmas Cake," by Olive Shearer; carol, "See the Morning," by the school. The evening then closed with singing the National Anthem and distributing a gift to every child of the congregation. This was a real treat to the kiddies and the committee did their part in making it a pleasant evening.

Church Service

Rev. J. N. Lovelace delivered a most excellent and impressive sermon on Sunday evening in the United church. Taking for his text the first chapter Genesis and part of the first verse: In the beginning God, or reversing it, God in the beginning. Rev. Lovelace referring to the beginning of another year. A chance to begin again the writing of our life's story upon Time's scribbling book. How shall we use it? No use worrying over the past. That is gone and done with. We now have a new chance given to us and may we gain more faith, more love, put God in the beginning of our lives in starting this New Year, that our trust in Him will grow stronger, fill our hearts with blessings and fit our souls for the life everlasting. Appropriate music and singing was rendered by the choir.

The Mission Band will meet on Saturday afternoon January 8th at 2.30 p.m. at the parsonage.

The W.M.S. will hold their regular monthly meeting at Fenella on Tuesday, January 11th.

TRENTON MAN IS VERY GRATEFUL

SAYS THAT "FRUIT-a-TIVES" STOPPED NERVOUS HEADACHES

MR. R. A. BOVAY.

Mr. Roy A. Bovay of Trenton, Ontario, thinks very highly of "Fruit-a-tives" for removing the cause of nervous headaches.

"I wish I could tell every sufferer in the world what 'Fruit-a-tives' have done for me"—he writes—"For years I was much troubled by bad headaches, nervous dyspepsia and liver troubles. Then I commenced taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. Thanks to these wonderful tablets I am once more entirely well."

Are you, too, afflicted with nervous headaches? Quite probably they are traceable to lazy bowels, stomach, kidneys or liver. What you need is the gentle, natural help of "Fruit-a-tives" which is made from intensified fresh fruit juices blended with tonics. "Fruit-a-tives" is nature's own ally in promoting health and happiness. Enlist its aid for yourself, to-day. 25c and 50c, everywhere. 548

And Now The Most Beautiful CHEVROLET in Chevrolet History

With Scores of Improvements

It's Better Because It's Canadian

C-1217

As a climax to the most outstanding automobile success of recent years, Chevrolet announces the greatest triumph in its history—

—a complete line of cars, mechanically finer, entirely new in line, contour and color, and offering elements of style, distinction and elegance hitherto undreamed of in the low-priced field:

Here are new bodies of beautiful lines—brilliant in their modish new Duco colors—irresistible in their distinguished smartness—and outstanding in that individuality and perfection of silhouette regularly associated with costly custom-built creations.

Here are score upon score of advancements in design—a new and massive radiator shell—full-crown fenders—bullet-type head lamps and cowl lamps—new, heavier running board—new gasoline gauge—new A.C. Oil Filter—new A.C. Air Cleaner—Co-incidental ignition and steering lock—new, luxurious upholsteries—new sliding seat in the Coach model—new large steering wheel—and many others too numerous to mention.

But, however complete—however enthusiastic—no mere description of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History can adequately portray the new measure of individuality and style it brings into the field of the low-priced car. This can only be gained by inspection of the cars themselves.

So, we urge you to visit our show-rooms. And we ask you to come in anticipation of the revelation you would expect when the World's largest builder of gear-shift automobiles announces the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History, at the Lowest Price for which Chevrolet has ever been sold in Canada.

CAVAN SCHOOL BOARD MEETING

Annual Meeting Was Held Wednesday Morning in S. S. No. 7.

REVIEW REPORT.

CAVAN, Jan. 8.—On Wednesday morning the annual school meeting was held in S.S. No. 7.

Mr. H. Lang, the secretary-treasurer, who has moved to Peterborough, was present to give the report of the year's business. He handed in his books, with the accounts balanced and in order. His removal, and as J. Smith's term expired and he refused to be re-elected, made it necessary to appoint two new trustees.

David White and S. Boyle were elected as trustees, the latter to be Secretary-Treasurer. Mr. J. W. Perrin is the other trustee.

The contract of putting in the year's supply of fuel was given to C. Smith, his tender being the lowest.

From Christmas until Easter there will be three pupils in attendance. After Easter there are three children in the section who will be of school age, and are expected to attend.

Elect Officers

On Wednesday evening, the Cavan Centre Sunday School held their annual business meeting and election of officers in Matchett's School House. The Rev. J. O. Totten was present and conducted the meeting. The following are the officers for 1927:

Superintendent, F. M. Staples; Assistant Superintendent, R. Matchett; Secretary, S. Boyles; Treasurer, Mrs. R. Matchett; Organist, Norma Staples; Assistant Organist, Alma Perrin; Teacher of the Bible Class, Mrs. R. Matchett; Assistant Teacher, Mrs. R. S. Staples. Primary Class Teacher, Mrs. Boyles.

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Cavan Branch of the Bible Society was held in Cavan on Monday evening. The speaker was the Rev. J. S. Harrington, Toronto, one of the secretaries of the society.

Mr. Richard Matchett was the president of the Cavan Branch last year and Mr. L. Windsor, secretary-treasurer. There was a fair attendance at the meeting. The same officers were elected for next year, but directors from each church were appointed.

Mr. T. Graham and Mr. Best were appointed representatives for Mount Pleasant.

P. Stewart and W. Finnie for Ebenezer.

J. D. Hunter and Will Tinney for Cavan.

R. McCamus and L. McNeil for St. John's Church, Ida. In this way all the churches of the district will be represented. The amount collected by the Cavan Branch was $50.40.

Prayer Meeting

On Tuesday evening the Rev. J. O. Totten conducted a very helpful prayer meeting in Cavan Church. His topic was "Prayer." This he presented in a very interesting manner. From references read by different persons in the congregation, as called upon, he showed what an important place prayer held in the lives of the great men of Bible age. Also from other sources, quoted statements and paragraphs showing what a great factor for strength and help it formed in the lives of great men of modern times.

WEDDING BELLS.

LOWERY—CALDWELL

MILLBROOK, Jan. 8.—A very pretty New Year's wedding took place at St. Paul's Anglican church, Perrytown, on Saturday, January 1st, when Olive Spowers, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hilliard Caldwell, became the bride of Mr. Frederick LaRue Lowery, youngest son of the late Mr. Reid Lowery, and Mrs. Lowery, of Millbrook.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a becoming dress of flat crepe and georgette in one of the new shades of navy, with hat of silver brocade, and shoes and stockings of a matching shade. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses in shower design.

The rector, Rev. J. M. Crissal, performed the cermony, and the wedding-march was played by Miss Dorothy Wilson. The bridal couple were unattended.

Upon their return they will reside at Millbrook.

MASSIE—MACARTHR.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 8. — A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, January the fifth at eleven o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert MacArthur, when their second daughter, Catherine, was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence Massie, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Massie, of Campbellford. The bride looked lovely in a gown of pale pink crepe back satin with veil of pale pink and wreath of orange blossoms. Her shoes were of silver brocade. She carried a shower bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and fern, and entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, who gave her away. Miss Agnes MacArthur, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and was becomingly attired in pale pink crepe de chine and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations and ferns. Mr. Clifford Weston was groomsman. Mr. Irving Clemens played the wedding march and Rev. James Grier, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, officiated.

The marriage ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreen and white bells with a star overhead, and the darwing room was decorated with evergreen. During the signing of the register, Miss Hazel Atkinson sang "Because I Love You Truly," accompanied on the piano by Mr. Arthur Collison.

After the ceremony, the bride and groom and about forty guests retired to the dining room, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. The wedding cake decorated the centre of the table. Rev. Mr. Greer expressed a few remarks and proposed a toast to the young couple, which was responded to by the guests. Short speeches were given by the groom, groomsman and others.

The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace of pearls, to the bridesmaid and soloist gold bar pins, to the groomsman a silver cigarette case and to Mr. Clemens gold cuff links.

The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Toronto and points west and on their return will reside on Ranney street.

Mr. and Mrs. Massie are both popular young people of Campbellford and their host of friends join in wishing them hearty congratulations. They were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, among them a lamp from St. Andrew's choir, of which the bride is a member, a silver tea service from the Millionaire Club' to which the groom belongs, silver teaspoons from the bride's Sunday school class, and a handsome cabinet of anniversary silver from Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Riendeau, in whose office the bride has worked for the past three years.

(By F. D. C.)

Smothered by the Grads' effective defensive system and powerless to successfully meet the lightning thrusts of the Varsity attackers, Peterboro's senior representatives were given a woeful beating in the new Varsity arena last night, Connie Smythe's smooth machine winning 10 goals to 1.

Varsity were in front 3 to 0 at the end of the first period and 7 to 0 at the close of the second, and it was not until after the ex-students had hung up their eighth goal that Bert McLeod saved his team from the ignominy of a whitewash by a brilliant lone-handed rush that carried him in on top of Sullivan.

It is not very pleasant to have to admit it, but the simple truth is the Petes were as badly outclassed on the night's play as the score would indicate.

They have never—not even in the Allan Cup series last year—looked as helpless as they did last night.

Against the speed and cleverness of Connie Smythe's brigade, the Petes looked and played like a beaten team from the first face-off. They not only failed to show any punch on the attack but their checking was lamentably weak and they were outguessed time after time by the smart tactics of the Grads, who throughout played with dash, confidence and brilliancy. So dismally indeed did they fall down in their checking that many of the spectators got the impression half-way through the game that the Petes were not even trying. They were—but they had little of their usual determination, and Varsity made them look very bad by the ease with which they skated away from their checks and swept in on top of Dwyer for shots.

The Grads are a great hockey team.

The six regulars haven't a weak spot anywhere, and Frank Sullivan and Fisher, the subs., did good work in the brief periods they were called upon for service.

Joe Sullivan, always a fine goalie, is at the top of his form, and had an easy task last night. There is probably not a better defence pair in amateur hockey than "Red" Porter and Taylor, who work together defensively with perfect cohesion, while each is a constant menace when he sets sail for the opposition nets. Porter not only played a most effective defence game last night, but found time to score four goals for his team. The big Sorrel top blazed a trail straight down the centre and went round the Petes' defence by sheer speed.

The forward line of Plaxton, Trottier and Hudson was strong in every department. They had speed, clever stick-handling, effective combination, and all three shot hard and straight. When you add perfect condition to that you have it all.

Against this array the Petes got little or no chance to shine and they didn't. They were outskated, outchecked and outmanoeuvred at all stages, and under such conditions there were few Peterboro heroes on the night's play. Bert McLeod deserves honorable mention however, for the Petes' defence man worked himself to the point of exhaustion trying to break through the Grads' barrage, and he finally succeeded on a fine effort. When McLeod retired for a brief rest in the last period he was given a well-merited round of applause by the crowd.

Joe Dwyer has played better games, but he made a lot of good stops, in spite of the fact he was given little protection.

Snap Parker, making his first appearance since he was injured in the group play-off with Parkdale last season, was subbed on the defence, and while far from in condition, contributed some nice rushes.

Up in front there was little choice. The attacking brigade was outplayed going both ways, and both as a line and individually were not in the picture against the Plaxton-Hudson-Trottier combination.

The Petes can play much better hockey, and if they want to get into the group play-off they'll have to, for the Marlboros, now in second place, with the Petes third, are coming fast.

Thirty-five hundred people saw last night's game, the biggest crowd so far in the new Varsity arena, which is in every way an ideal hockey plant.

How It All Happened.

Varsity's three-goal margin in the first period was well earned. The Grads' smooth work on the attack and their effective defensive system gave them a decided edge on the play. They were much more successful working in close than the Petes, who did an unusual amount of shooting from outside, with Sullivan handling the drives easily. Collins and Ranger staged the first attack after the bell rang, but it got nowhere. Hugh Plaxton tested Dwyer with a swift drive dead on. The Grads came right back, however, and a neat Plaxton to Trottier play carried them inside. Dwyer blocked Trottier's shot, but Plaxton slammed the rebound past him in lightning fashion.

The Petes' best chance of the period came immediately after, when Bogardis and Ranger rushed. Sullivan stopped the left winger's shot, and when he came out to get the rebound and got tangled with Collins, the puck bounced out in front of the empty net with no one there to bat it in.

Ranger was penalized for holding, and with the Petes a man short, Varsity scored their second goal. It was registered on a neat passing rush by Plaxton and Hudson, and Dwyer had no chance on Hudson's backhander.

The last goal of the period was a loose piece of work, when Trottier was allowed to recover the rubber from the defence near the Peterboro net and pass out to Fisher, who scored easily.

Sullivan drew a penalty for tripping, but the Grads easily held the Petes out, and the period ended with the score unchanged.

Ranger was chased early in the second period for dumping Plaxton, and while he was off Porter went up alone and coasted round the Petes' defence to drive a high shot into the corner of the net.

After Ranger came back Plaxton was banished for tripping, but even with a man short the Grads pressed, and Trottier scored on a play that was an exact duplication of Porter's dash for a goal. He rounded the defence and Dwyer had no chance to save.

Kane staged a nice rush for the Petes, but could not beat Sullivan, and right afterward drew a sentence for tripping. With the Petes playing five to six, Varsity scored again, Porter batting one from behind the net after a rush with Plaxton, and the rubber carroomed in off Dwyer, a lucky goal for the big red-topped defence man.

That made it 6 to 0, and the Grads added another before the session ended, when Hudson went up, pulled the Petes' rearguard over to him and then slid a long pass over to Trottier, who scored easily. Porter got the gate for bumping Bogardis just after this goal, but the Petes could not take any advantage of their numerical superiority.

Right at the beginning of the last session Collins lost the Petes' best opportunity up to that stage to score, when Ranger rounded the Grads' net and passed out in front to Collins, who shot wide. Trottier recovered the rubber and went down alone to score from a side shot with two or three checks hanging on to him.

Soon after Bert McLeod, who had been persistently endeavoring to break through for a goal, was finally rewarded when he skated through the Varsity forwards, circled the defence, and blazed a fast one past Sullivan for the Petes only counter of the night.

The Grads got two more before the game wound up, Porter bagging the pair. He went through all alone for the first one, netting his own rebound after Dwyer had stopped his first shot, and banging home another rebound after a Plaxton-Hudson rush had been flagged by a good stop by Dwyer.

SEES POLITICS HARMING GAME

Says Reform Are Always Taking Away For Attack.

CONSTANT DRAIN.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 8 (A.P.).—Dr. Clarence W. Spears, reticent head coach, made a speech, and Herb Joesting, bashful All-American fullback, remained for the dance, so the testimonial banquet and ball given by Minneapolis citizens for the Minnesota football team Wednesday night was voted a success.

Dr. Spears, in his first public appearance since his recent major operation, spoke on his far famed shift and on what he termed the constant drain on the offensive features of the game as engineered by the football rules committee.

As for Joesting, the backfield ace sat at the head table with other notables, local and state, for four tortuous hours, and then stood and bowed through numerous introductions. He then surprised everyone by appearing promptly in the ballroom.

"It has always been take away, take away," was Coach Spears lament. "In fact, since I have been connected with football nothing has been added to the offence of the game. They have taken away such attractive features as the onside kick and the flying end, both matters of offence. They spiked a spectacular play when they amended the rules concerning the catching of punts, and last year they curbed the forward pass. Now it is the shift."

He charged politics with having caused the greatest harm in trying to alter the game.

JUNIORS PLAY FAST HOCKEY

Lindsay Will Be Here Tuesday For Second Game of Series.

EVENLY MATCHED.

On Tuesday night the hockey fans of this city will be given an opportunity to see two of the fastest junior teams that this disrict has turned out in many years, when the local O.H.A. team meets the Lindsay boys. Both teams are well matched, the local youngsters holding the fast Lindsay crowd to a 3-3 tie on their own ice this week.

With LeBarr and Allan on the defence, the local boys are very strong in this position, but the visitors have a strong forward outfit that is a danger to any team.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, how you getting along with your New Year resolutions? Ho! Ho! Ha! Ha! Me, too. Well, anyway we made them.

Since my last our hockey teams has been in action, the juniors, intermediates and the big fellows all having battles this week. As I gotta get this off my chest Thurs. and the seniors' set-too with the Varsity Grads is for Fri. night, I won't be able to say nothing about that. The best news of the week from a senior viewpoint is that Mister Snap Parker has been working out with the squad all week, and the big left-handed defence man will be stepping out there in a game before long. The Petes need him, there ain't no question about that, and Mister Parker will get a warm welcome from I and all when he dons the steel blades and steps on the gas.

The juniors and their old-time foes, the Lindsay Midgets, had 1 of their usual fracasis in Lindsay Tues. night, although 10 minutes of overtime and a whole lot of argument coulda been avoided if the O.h.A. rules had been give the once over. In 2-club groups or sections they ain't never been no doubt that goals, and not games, decided the winner, and the game was legally over when the 60 mins. was up. The correct score was 3-3, and the young Petes have 2 home games against 1 away to pile up enough markers to win the round, instead of being 1 game down and having to win 3 in a row to grab the section. The goal the Midgets got in the unnecessary 10 minutes runs for Sweeney, for it didn't mean nothing to nobody. Mister Jackson, the bell ringer, which ordered the overtime, is now engaged in a extensive study of the O.h.A. rules of competition.

By the way, the juniors is at home to their Lindsay friends here next Tues. night and anybody what likes hockey oughta to be on the sidelines, for they likely to see a real lively tussle. The young Petes will trot out a number of boys what are real senior prospects, while they is some good material on the Lindsay lineup, too, and the two teams get along about as friendly as two soloists in the same choir, so that the only dull moments will be when the rink staff is scraping the ice. The youngsters deserve a house. They oughta get it.

Wed. night the intermediates was bumped by Oshawa 7-2. Nobody expected the lads to win again the Motorists, which has been picked to cop the championship, but the Perks-Batten selects did a whole lot better than the score shows. The Oshawaers knew their groceries better around the nets and was helped by a lotta loose defensive work by the home talent, but the blue and white lads never give up the ship and was close often. Although they win comfortable, the Motorists didn't look like no championship team at that. Both outfits bunched like "patients" in a accommodating doctor's office 3 days before Christmas, and 2 or 3 times I hadda stop and count 'em to make sure they hadn't sneeked a couple extra players out there.

Well, Mac, I hope to have some good dope for you next week about the Varsity game, and in the meantime I'll switch off as usual.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

WILLIE UNABLE TO RETAIN LEAD

Challenger Goes To Front But Can't Stay There.

GREAT COMEBACK.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (Associated Press.) — Willie Hoppe and his famous cue have come back under the magic stroke of a master hand to threaten the brief supremacy of the young German star, Eric Hagenlacher.

For four hours and a half Hagenlacher and the veteran New Yorker played Thursday night in the first 500-point block of a 1500-point match for the world's 18.2 balkline title. And only by a sensational finish did Hagenlacher, the defending champion, nose out the former titleholder by a slim margin of 64 points, 500 to 436.

Spectacular runs of 106 and 117 saved Hagenlacher from a defeat which gave early indications of becoming a rout. Hoppe playing masterly open table billiards, raced away to a commanding lead by piling up a magnificent run of 148 in the opening frame after the title holder had stopped at 19. This generous advantage he held virtually intact until the eighth frame, when Hagenlacher emerged from an uncertain start to reel off the two long clusters which put him out in front.

Handicapped by bad position, Hoppe was forced to spend most of the late hours of the match in his chair, while the champion was clicking off the winning points, but his clever manipulation of the ivories early in the game indicated to observers that a stirring battle is in prospect before they reach the end of the final block.

Hagenlacher's strong finish was concluded with an unfinished run of 28, which will give him the first turn at the table to-night. He required 11 frames to complete his string, posting an average of 45 5-11 to 43 6-10 for Hoppe.

Score by innings:

Hagenlacher—19, 62, 5, 82, 6, 21, 32, 106, 117, 23, 28—500.

Hoppe—14, 4, 43, 16, 53, 16, 68, 3, 0, 45—436.

High runs: Hoppe 148, Hagenlacher, 117.

Averages: Hoppe, 43 6-10; Hagenlacher, 45 5-11.

GOLFERS RALLY IN LOS ANGELES

James Kinner is Second Low Among Qualifying Field.

$10,000 TOURNAMENT.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8 (A.P.).—The six leading golf courses here became scenes of practice for those of the 131 qualifiers in the Los Angeles $10,000 open tournament.

El Caballero, in the hills northwest of Los Angeles, was pronounced in ideal condition for the classic. The course is a difficult par 72, and the entrants will have a record card of 69, set by Jack Tarrant, resident pro., to shoot at.

The contestants will have to do better than they did in the qualifying rounds Wednesday if they scratch Tarrant's mark off the club's annals. The low card of the 97 qualifiers was 142 for the 36 holes, made by Charles Guest, of Hollywood, who went around in 71-71. The highest score to get under the qualifying tape was James Munro, Chicago, 82-80—162.

Those comparatively high in the qualifying round were J. B. Kinnear, Detroit, 143; Cyril Walker, Englewood, N.J., 148; Johnny Pereili, Dallas, 148; John J. O'Connor, Rye, N.Y., 144, and Ed. Dudley, Oklahoma City, 147.

Thirty-four of the country's leading players, who were not required to go through the qualifying rounds because of their recognized standings, will compete with the 97 who went through the regular channels of play.

JUNIORS WIN GAME

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 8.—Juniors were victors over Colts in the first game of Lakefield District League played last night by the score of 6 to 5. As this was the first game of the season, it was practically only a practice one, with teams not up to the usual form, but having every indication of developing into fast teams before the season is very old. Both goalkeepers were good, and Stabler starred throughout the whole game, tieing the score for Juniors in the first half of the third and scoring the winning goal just before the final bell.

The first period ended in a tie, with goals scored by Stabler and B. Wannamaker for the Juniors, and Trude Brothers, E. Northey and Sabatino for the Colts.

In the second period only one goal was scored, by Sabatino for Colts, giving Colts the lead ,but Stabler, playing an unusually good game in the third, scored two goals, handing Juniors the victory.

In the second period penalties were given out liberally and at times both teams were reduced to four men apiece.

The teams.

Colts.—Goal, Hamblin; right defence, Sam Trude; left defence, Hill; centre, W. Wannamaker; right wing, Sabatino; left wing, E. Northey; subs, W. Trude and C. Northey.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

After Harry Force challenged him, Dempsey went to John Shanley and raised $500, the side bet demanded. Money was scarce and that $500 seemed as large as $5,000 to-day.

Dempsey was a strict trainer and worked every day as a cooper. Although a champion, his family would not let him idle like the prominent stars of to-day.

There were no special arrangements. I acted as his second and on September 3, 1883, we climbed into a cab after sneaking an old towel and bucket out of the house. Neither of us spoke about the fight during the long ride down to Coney Island.

I have been in the dressing-rooms of champions in recent years and it amuses me to think of what these old-timers went through. Take two boys at Madison Square Garden going on for a six-round prelim. Why, they have a manager and about five seconds and yards of tape. Their faces are greased. They sniff salts, swallow stimulants and have gaudy robes and fancy tights. They go into a well-lighted arena to a well-padded ring preceded by two cops.

Dempsey and I arrived at Coney Island and found the ring pitched on the sand under the old Brighton elevated line, torn down since then. It was after midnight then, but we waited until nearly daybreak before word was given it was safe to proceed. Frank Stevenson was the referee.

The fight went 30 rounds and Dempsey hammered the daylights out of Force. The look-out sounded "Police!" shortly after it was all over and we all scattered for home.

My part as a second was merely to get down on one knee and make a seat out of my other leg on which he would sit. I would hand him a towel but there was no stunt like towel swinging.

The strategy was based on the principle of wearing down or blinding an opponent. It was suicide to lead to the head with bare knuckles as they would be smashed. They could also be fractured on the elbows so the boys played for the body and waited for an opening.

Dempsey beat Force by feinting him off guard. He punched to the body with his left hand. Force doubled up and leaned over instinctively to relieve the pain. His jaw was exposed. Wham! And Dempsey crossed with his deadly right and it was all over.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how Dempsey took such a terrific beating from Harry Fuljames he almost decided to quit the game forever.

New Year Messages From Campbellford Ministers

From Rev. James Grier B.A.

New Year is surely a time for the exercise of faith; faith in the care and wisdom of an over-ruling Providence; in ourselves who, under God, may use our powers for ends high and holy; in the ultimate realities for which we exist; that the deepest mystery will find solution in a fearless morn; and in the fact of a living comradeship with the Redeemed of mankind.

New Year is also a time for courage, which is the child of faith. Courage to translate our creed into conduct; to face each new day with high hope and good cheer; to attack and persist in what the faint-hearted call the impossible until, through successful issues, it is shown to be grandly possible; to meet injustice and greed with a determined opposition; to pray and work each day with the conviction that the best resolutions we have formed are anchored to the eternal promise. "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

UP AND ON WITH THE NEW YEAR
By Rev. W. Elliott.

The old year is gone. The record is made. The chapter of 1926 is closed. We cannot erase any of the writing, we cannot re-write it, and we cannot change it. What we have written we have written. The writing stands. No doubt we would be glad to make some alterations. For some of the records do not please us now, as we read them over. But what shall we do? We should at least gather up all the lessons that our failures, as well as our successes, teach us and carry them with us into the New Year. Thus even our mistakes may teach us wisdom.

One of the great purposes of the past is the making of a greater future. But we shall not get much help out of the old year for the new, if we merely sit down and waste our strength in unavailing dispairing lament over our blunders. It is ours to take the lessons of the past and rise up and, in strength divine, go up into the new year with firm resolve to make it the best. And it will be.

From Rev. Edmund D. Ford.

As we pass out into 1927 and stand at the threshold of another year, I rejoice that this invitation comes to give your greetings.

As we face the new year, with its summons to life, I call upon you to walk with me through days of living that shall be true, trustworthy, and triumphant. If I may further claim a preacher's privilege, I want to express my conviction that Jesus Christ is the only way of Life Eternal. So for each of you, I can only wish that he be enthroned as Saviour and Lord. Then and only then can our to-morrows be vaster than anyt oday has been.

I not only wish you a Happy and Prosperous New Year, but I would wish that you might each so live in His Conscious Presence that it will be possible for the fine dream of this hour to find realization in the next. For if these ambitions are to find life, there will be need of waiting on Him, for it is still true that "He that dwelleth in the Secret Place of the Most High shall abide under the Shadow of the Almighty."

GOD FIRST
From Capt. R. W. Wright and Lieut. J. R. Matthews Salvation Army.

"In the beginning—God." Gen. 1:1. These are the first words of the Bible and they express the keynote of successful life. No matter what business or work that life is engaged in. Many wonderful things are expressed and described in the Bible, but God is mentioned first. He is first. So as we find God first in the Bible, we should find Him at the opening of the New Year. Begin the new year with "God first." Let Him be first in our thoughts, our words, them, all through the year, it shall b the same—God first. Make this your note for 1927. If we seek first the Kingdom and His righteousness. He will see that all other necessary things are added unto us. Put God first in all things and we shall know the meaning, through receiving the fulfillment of the promise to the Philippians. "My God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in Glory by Jesus Christ."

"A NEW YEAR MEDITATION"
Rev. E. R. Orser Pastor of Free Methodist Church.

Marking time as we do, a new year means a new start, new opportunity and new responsibility. Time itself is a sacred trust. We are not only stewards of the portion of this world's goods which we may be holding in our own right, and of the talents with which the Creator may have endowed us, but of the time allotted us here. Many people come short of the glory of God unwittingly. How much time is wasted by good people on unimportant matters! How much time is misspent by others on things harmful! How much time, precious time, is prostituted to wicked purposes! Some people, who are careful enough as to proper use of money—spending little, if any, foolishly, practising commendable economy without penuriousness, will not be able to give as good an account of their stewardship respecting time, as of their money. Many good people rob themselves of time for Bible study and prayer and other religious exercises. There is nothing else of sufficient importance to warrant the neglect of any Christian duty. If there is anything more important at a given time than devout Bible study and other means of Grace or Christian service, then the omission of these services for the sake of the other, cannot be called neglect.

The New Year should find us with a better appreciation of the moral and religious value of time. The business man say "Time is Money." From his standpoint that is time, but to the Christian time has a much richer value and more sacred meaning than that. Nobody should think of time only as to its commercial value. Its higher meaning takes hold of eternal things, things which do not perish with the using. At the threshold of a new year is a good time and place to change from neglect to faithfulness in the use of the fundamental means of grace, giving God first place in our hearts and lives, even in the midst of the busiest days that come to us in religious or secular activities.

From Rev. Chas. D. Daniel.

At such a time as this, thoughts come so rapidly to one who muses, if the space; at one's disposal were great, what a wonderful message could be given.

Surely this new year time proclaims the message that life is a great adventure. It makes me deny with all the force of my inner nature that great fallacy that has been expressed in the coward's phrase, "Man is a victim or creature of circumstance." As someone has written, there may be "Creatures of circumstances; but they are not men." Man was meant to be, not the creature, but the master of circumstance. Each of us have within us the power to determine what our life shall be as we pass each day of this new year. The adventure of the new year will then be not a matter of chance, but a matter of choice. If I were a poet I would speak it thus:

One ship drives east, another drives west,
While the self-same breezes blow;
'Tis the set of the sail and not the gale,
That bids them where to go.
Like the winds of the sea are the ways of fate,
As we journey along through life;
'Tis the set of the soul that decides the goal
And not the calm or the strife.

To those of you who may read these lines, I would urge you to set the sail of your soul in the right direction. Some of you may be drifting out of your course and need your sails reset. This new year time comes as such an opportunity for you.

I know not what the year may hold for you or for me. But the faith that leads me with enthusiasm to the adventure of this new year I would pass on to you, in Whittier's immortal words:

"I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.
I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.

It is natural for many of us to stand off and wonder how our neighbor can live as he does. Because he has different standards and doesn't enjoy our kind of friends or play our kind of games, we wonder how he can possibly have any fun in life.

There's a delightful story which Jonas Lie, the artist, told. The artist was at the seashore, working at a sketch, when he noticed an old fisherman who seemed to have no luck, but just constantly fished all day long, rebaiting his hook at intervals.

When the day ended, the fisherman said to the painter: "Hi, neighbor, been watchin' yer! How has yer the patience to stand and paint all day?"

A FAMOUS HYMN COMPOSER

The Rev. John Bacchus Dykes, Doctor of Music, London, England, born in 1823, and died in 1876, is today probably the favorite composer in the Christian world; and yet comparatively few people (even musicians) know his name. This fact has been tested several times in social and church gatherings of many denominations by first taking a vote as to whether sacred or secular music is the more popular. Sacred music invariably gained the vote, with hymns as the preference in this class. Then by asking those present to name their favorite tunes, an average of four out of ten were for Dr. Dykes' music, which easily places him in the foremost rank of all composers who ever lived.

On looking over the Sunday papers it is a rare thing to find a church program, of any denomination, without at least one of his hymns on it. To mention a few of his writings will convince readers that the foremost position was earned by this great, good man. He was beloved by everybody; and his funeral service at Durham Cathedral was one of the largest and most solemn ever held there.

"Lead Kindly Light," "Holy, Holy, Holy," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "O Jesus Thou Art Standing," "Our Blest Redeemer," "Hark! Hark! My Soul," "O Paradise," "Art Thou Weary?" "I heard the Voice of Jesus Say," "Nearer My God to Thee," "Days and Moments Quickly Flying," "Eternal Father Strong to Save," "Day of Wrath, O Day of Mourning," "Hark the Sound of Holy Voices," and over one hundred others in every Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian Hymnal published in the English language, flowed from his consecrated pen.

Dr. Dykes was, for many years, Rector of St. Oswald's Church, Durham, England, a small chapel under Durham Cathedral, which was only used on week-days by the divinity students of the University; so Dr. Dykes spent most of his Sundays at St. Peter's Church, Newcastle-on-Tyne, fourteen miles away where it can be easily understood, under his guidance was the finest boy choir in England, for hymn singing. His power of intensifying the beauty, solemnity and grandeur of the words was wonderful. His instructions were, "Put your whole thought and sincerity into the words, and the music will take care of itself," and this will be found to be the very foundation and true key-note for making our grand hymns appeal directly to the minds and hearts of all earnest listeners, as well as singers; sending the congregations home with the feeling that, as Bishop McLaren of Chicago once remarked, he "felt better after the service; that the intense sincerity affected him, so that he could preach better;" whereas, careless, thoughtless, frivolous singing, so depressed him that he could not collect his thoughts sufficiently to bring them out as forcibly and distinctly as he would wish.

Police Sergeant—"Did you notice any suspicious characters about the neighborhood?"

New Policeman—"I saw one man, an' I asked him wot he was doin' there at that time o' night. Sez he: 'I have no business here just now, but I expect to open a jeweler's shop in this vicinity later on.' I sez: 'I wish ye success, sor.'"

"Yes, and he smashed open a jewelry store and stole seventeen watches."

"Begorra, the man may have been a thafe, but he was no loiar."

Jones (out for the first time in his new car)—"Don't talk for a few moments, my dear; here is a telegraph pole coming."

A zealous but untrained reformer had secured permission to speak at the county jail.

"Brothers," he pleaded, "lose no time in turning to the pathway of righteousness. Remember, we are here today and gone tomorrow."

"Don't kid yourself," came a gloomy voice from the rear, "I've got eighteen years here yet."

"Do you act toward your wife as you did before you married her?"

"Exactly. I remember just how I used to act when I first fell in love with her. I used to lean over the fence in front of her house and gaze at her shadow on the curtain, afraid to go in. And I act just the same way now."

A lady from the East went to Los Angeles to spend the winter, and while there she motored to Tijuana for the races. At the race track gate an aged Mexican was vending what he alleged to be genuine hairless Mexican puppies at $50 a pup, so the lady bought one and took it back to Los Angeles with her. Before the winter was over, the dog had grown into a Great Dane, and he ate so much she had to send East for more money to take care of them both.

The next time she went to Tijuana she saw the same Mexican still vending genuine hairless Mexican pups, so she upbraided the scoundrel for cheating her. He looked at her solemnly and said:

"Senora, where you leeve?"

"In Los Angeles," she replied.

The Mexican shrugged helplessly and said: "Well, what you expect senora? In those so wonderful climate those leetle pup she can't help grow beeg like yearling calf."

A junk shop near a railroad crossing in New Jersey bears the admonition to motorists: "Go Ahead, Take a Chance. We'll Buy Your Car."

Jacob—"Ach! Such ignorance. Dot means to bring 'Real Silver Vedding Presents'."

The aviator's wife is strange
In one way, beyond doubt;
Her heart rejoices when she sees
Her husband down and out.

If trade names ever got mixed up:
Onyx Hosiery—"Best in the long run."
Otis Elevators—"Good to the last drop."
Klaxon—"His master's voice."
Ford—"I'd walk a mile for a Camel."
Patina—"I's in town, honey."
Ivory Soap—"There's a reason."
Listerine—"What a whale of a difference just a few cents make!"
Palmolive—"14 years without loss to an investor."
B. V. D.—"Ask the man who owns one."
Cunard—"It floats."

Two women were passing a butcher's shop where a pig's head was on display, with a lemon in its mouth.

"There, Liz," exclaimed one of the women, "that reminds me that I promised to get a new pipe for Joe."

"Begorra, the mon may have been a thafe, but he was no loiar."

Jones (out for the first time in his new car)—"Don't talk for a few moments, my dear; here is a telegraph pole coming."

First Clerk—"I don't know what Bill does with his money. He's broke again."

Second Clerk—"Was he trying to borrow from you?"

First Clerk—"No! I wanted to borrow from him."

RICHARD P. BLAKEY, F.R.I.B.A.
ARCHITECT.
EDMONTON. AUGUST. 1926.

Bungalow of Moderate Cost

(By Richard P. Blakey, F.R.I.B.A.)

Here is a sensible little bungalow of English design which will undoubtedly appeal to a great many readers. Items which will be sure to contribute to its popularity are the moderate cost, suitability for narrow lots, ease and convenience of plan, and the simple beauty of interior and exterior.

Analysis will show the principle reasons for the latter to be the good general outline and proportion of breadth to height, aided by the use of materials of appropriate colours and textures, comprising grey stucco walls, brown shingle roof and grey and white woodwork. The detail work also plays its part in the general harmony of the whole, for while it has been reduced to a minimum, thus avoiding unnecessary expense, the entrance hood and the emblematic device in the gable are pleasing objects which lend individuality of the dwelling.

On examining the plan we find the same spirit of simplicity and straightforwardness prevailing, and the result a praiseworthy and convenient arrangement.

The living room, which is entered directly from the small front hall, is cheerful and cosy, and has a well designed fireplace. A very wide door way connects the dining and living rooms; an arrangement which in addition to the recognized advantage of using the two rooms together when desired, also allows the cheer and warmth of the hearth to pervade the dining room, when it is serving its usual functions.

The kitchen is of very satisfactory size, has built in cabinets, and is assured of cross ventilation by the provision of windows in two walls. Notice, too, the splendid location of the basement stairs in relation to the kitchen and rear door, and assures convenient passage between the side garage door and house during all weathers.

Returning to the dining room we may enter a small inner hall from which access is had to a bathroom and two bedrooms, both of which are well lighted and ventilated, and provided with ample size closets.

Heating is accomplished with a hot air gas heated furnace, an unusual feature for a home of this size, but one which is quite economical where natural gas is available, and which even when manufactured gas must be used, offsets the higher fuel cost by its great convenience and cleanliness.

The approximate cost of this home would be $4,400, exclusive of lot.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect, direct. Address: Mr. Richard P. Blakey, F.R.I.B.A., 417 Empire Block, Edmonton, Alberta.

Question: With a $3,000 capital, how can I proceed to build a $5,000 house?

You would be justified in putting your $5,000 house on a lot costing in the neighborhood of $1,000. That would make your whole investment $6,000. You have enough cash to cover half of this total expense. You should be able to secure the balance of the needed money on a first mortgage at a favorable rate of interest. Investment companies consider a risk of this kind very high, class if the house is of good materials and design. The larger the portion of money you borrow, the greater the risk becomes to the one who lends and therefore the larger the interest and commissions on the loan.

Has Civilization Failed

By Sir Philip Gibbs

It is a sign of the times, perhaps a new disease of civilization, that we are all worrying ourselves about the problems of life and the future of humanity.

I find nowhere a settled faith in human progress, or a steady optimism in the endurance of civilization or the increase of individual happiness. Rather one seems to see in all classes a kind of doubt as to whether we are on the right road to happiness at all, and whether this civilization of ours, as we know it and as some of us like it, is not already showing signs of decay and dissolution.

This is rather a new mentality. Before the war—at the time, for instance, when H. G. Wells was typical of the modern young mind in England, and to some extent its intellectual leader—there was a growing belief in the rapid development of civilization. Education was going to kill ignorance, stupidity, cruelty. Science was going to make a cleaner job of life, eliminating disease, dirt, and drudgery. The intelligence of the average man would create a social system by which there would be less work for higher rewards, security for the common folk, peace between nations, and a high standard of happiness.

Grave Doubts.

Something has gone wrong with that cheery outlook on life. In its place grave doubts have crept in.

It was the war, of course, which overthrew that optimism in the progress of human nature with a frightful shock. We saw the degradation of human intelligence. We saw cruelty dominant instead of dead. We saw the most civilized nations in the world tearing themselves to pieces by the aid of that science and education which were to have lifted us into new spheres of happiness. Now, since the war, the effects of that enormous tragedy—the ruin it left behind and the price that must still be paid—have darkened the philosophy of every man and woman who tries to solve the riddle of life and find some kind of answer to the secret questions of the soul.

Are all these so-called conquests of science a blessing or a curse to men? Are they going to lift us up or destroy us? Do they add anything to the sum of human happiness?

The aeroplane seemed a machine that gave man's new touch of divinity by the glory of flight. It came in time for the world war, to drop down bombs upon defenceless cities and kill babies in their beds. Scientists had been reverenced as the new leaders of light, the pioneers of a more beautiful civilization. They invented poison-gas and high explosives, and ingenious ways of slaughter and destruction. Since the war they have increased their knowledge. The machine they have created are even more efficient than those used in the last war. If there is another world war these man-made instruments—so beautiful in their mechanism!—will, beyond any doubt at all, destroy the civilization which we only just saved.

These wireless waves, this new promise of television—how wonderful! In many ways how great a source of entertainment and instruction! Yet they, too, may be a curse in the long run, by an invasion of our houses and our brains, by all the vibrations of the world, with its follies rather than its sanity. Isn't peace better, and a little silence and time to think?

Education and Unhappiness.

Even education is being questioned. The other day I went to give a liberary talk to some working folk in the south of London, and a friend of mine said, "Are you doing a good thing? Why should you encourage these people to read books? They will only begin to be as unhappy as you and I. The more we think the more sensitive we are, the more we question the facts of life the more unhappy we become, because there is no solution of the riddle, and life is cruel!"

My Reasons for Faith in our Future.

In England the average man is worrying about almost everything, to judge from the newspapers and their correspondence, and I confess that now and then I have rather added to his worries. Is England done? Is youth playing the fool? Is Labour out for revolution? Is religion played out? Is Parliament worth while?

This questioning, this melancholy perplexity with life is not confined to England. France is anxious about its future, and has little faith in pacts of peace; none at all in politicians. In spite of victory they are desperately anxious about their social state. Germany is not a nation of optimists. Beneath all their industry and activity there is a conflict of ideas, a spreading poverty, a rising tide of unemployment, a desperate anxiety about the near future.

Even America, so rich, so vital, so strong, is strangely perturbed, not at all satisfied that its civilization is secure. American writers are becoming intensely critical of many aspects of their national life and morality. They see signs of poisonous growths which may destroy them, a growing lawlessness which is very dangerous, a vice of luxury which may bring them down. Looking outside their country, they see the creeping up of a Yellow Peril, which may lead to another world war, and other danger signals that all is not well with the world.

And everywhere, in all countries, there is a questioning of the old moralities and conventions, a loss of faith in dogmatic religion—and religion is useless if it is not dogmatic—a disbelief in any God. Everywhere we are told youth, in which we put our hope, is scornful of the old loyalties, and has wiped the word duty from the dictionary.

What is the meaning of all this questioning? Is there any answer to the questions, or must we go groping on blindly, without faith, full of doubt, in sad acknowledgement that mankind has no control over its own destiny, that there is no such thing as human happiness, that new wars are inevitable, that knowledge leads nowhere, and that science only adds to the sum of human misery?

SPECIAL VALUES.

People have called me a pessimist because I have told unpleasant truths now and then, but I am not as pessimistic as all that! I believe the average man has a fair chance of happiness, if he goes the right way to find it, and the courage to stand up against the inevitable tragedies of life in which is death. It is because the world's philosophy and faith has been overthrown for a time in the minds of many people by the shock of the last war that all these perplexities and doubts are crowding in upon us.

The questions are real enough. They are not based on imaginary fears. Science must be controlled by morality or we shall be destroyed by the powers we have created. Material prosperity is not the highest form of civilization, and will lead a nation to the devil if its spiritual values are ignored. Knowledge is worse than ignorance if it is the wrong kind of knowledge, education leads only to unhappiness if it creates unsatisfied desires and a false philosophy of life.

It is true that this civilization of ours is threatened by diseases within itself—social injustice, class hatred, economic conflict and moral weaknesses. But I am one of those who still believe that, if we can see those dangers clearly, we have it in our power to avoid them, and that if we diagnose the disease we can surely cure it.

The Cure for Our Woes.

That is not the faith of a pessimist. It is the faith of a man who believes, as I do, that common sense, good temper, and tolerance would cure half the woes of the world—and our own in England—when the folly of political fanatics and the bad temper of industrial conflict would plunge us into ruin. It is the faith of a man who is convinced that a love of beauty is better than the enjoyment of luxury, and that the happiest nations are not the richest, but those who have a sense of art, a prosperous peasantry, a comfortable middle class, and an intellectual heritage.

It is a faith in the average man and woman who want a few things rather than a lot of things—peace, security in home life, a good day's wage for an honest day's work, a little love, a little laughter, a few books to read, some faith in some God of their own, a fair liberty of speech and ideas, a decent pride of manhood and womanhood, a full share of the sky and sun.

That, to my mind, is all that life holds or needs, all that it will ever hold, whatever civilization has in store for us. Is it too much to hope for? Is it beyond the power of man to attain?

I refuse to think so, and because I think humanity may get as far as that, if it likes, I propose to attempt an answer now and then to some of the questions of the day which are nagging in the minds of many men and women.

The Resolutions He Never Made

By Jeanette

(By Jeanette)

There was once a man who was discouraged. He was fed up. He was tired. Nothing was worth while. Life was a disappointment. One tried and tried and then—one had another opportunity! For trying passed out. That was all there was to living—just a succession of meaningless days, with nothing achieved—nothing accomplished.

It was the last day of the old year—December 31st, and it was a "down" day for him. He threw himself on the couch after a long session and reflected miserably that tomorrow would be the first day of a new year. New Year's Day and new resolutions. He had made resolutions last year. What were they? He had forgotten. He thought hazily about it. He had wanted to stop smoking so many cigarettes, for one thing, and for a month he had kept it up. How many had he smoked today? He couldn't remember. But a great many, doubtless. And then he had resolved to study up some good books in connection with his work. He had started to do so and had cut the leaves of a half dozen volumes. In orderly rows, they waited for perusal on the top shelf of his bookshelf. He had progressed as far as the third chapter in the first volume. And he had wanted, too, to be more watchful of his temper. It had been easy enough to resolve to curb his tongue and keep sarcastic sentences from spouting out—for a month. After that, it was the same old thing. He was one of these unfortunate people who are bothered with an urge to higher things, and the first of the year found him usually with a gloomy mind. He sighed and turned his head on the hot cushion. Presently he fell into a doze—

Across the room came a youthful figure. It smiled down at him as he lay looking up into the face. He frowned slightly. There was something familiar about those eyes, and yet he couldn't remember. Then he got the connection. Those same eyes had looked at him from the prisoner's dock a half year back and he had been moved by some extraordinary impulse to ask the judge to be lenient in a sentence on the lad, who had been brought into court, charged with a minor offence. Thirty days it had been, and the boy had come into his office and touched him for a loan at the end of it. Perhaps he wanted another ten spot. He reached into his pocket, reluctantly. The lad shook his head. "I don't need any more money," he said. "I'm making my own way now. You helped me to go straight. I am going to study at nights and work days until I get to be a lawyer like you." He tucked some books under his arm, smiled again, and passed out of the room.

Instantaneously, as if he had never been there, a girl stood in his place. It took only a second for the recumbent man to place her. He remembered her well enough and the party he had driven her home from, just a year from this same night. She had been drinking too much and she wanted to go with someone else. He had insisted on taking her to her home, and had given her some advice, he remembered hazily, on the way. She had listened sullenly. He had not seen her since and he had wondered just how she came out. She was a pretty thing. He looked at her questioningly. She gazed down at him brightly and lifted a left hand on which shone a flashing diamond. "I am engaged now—to the dearest man in the world," she said softly. "But you don't know how near I was to ruining my life. If it hadn't been for you—" She stopped and went out quickly. He watched her with a feeling of warm happiness.

Who was this standing quietly beside his couch? He turned his head. It was a rough workman and his indeed was an unfamiliar face. The man looked at him uncertainly. "You don't know me, sir," he said, "but I know you well enough. I have been night watchman in your office building for years, and one night I had a mind to throw myself in with a bunch of crooks who wanted me to rob the safe in one of the offices. You came out and spoke to my little girl, when she brought me my supper, and she said to me: "He has such a good face, daddy. I don't think he would ever do anything that was bad." It gave me a new idea, and I thought better of the other plan. I used to take time off occasionally, but now I'm working steadily and doing well."

Again the man was alone. But only for a moment. Three small figures came dancing in and looked merrily down upon him. He tried to break the spell that bound him, and speak to them, but he couldn't. Reaching into tiny pockets, they drew forth filmy bandages and bound them about their heads. On one was written: "Charity," on the second "Self Control" and on the third, "Good Example." Exasperated by their tinkling laughter, he roused himself more fully. They grew fainter in the dim light.

"Who are you?" he said loudly. "Don't you know?" they cried, dancing about his couch. "Look at our headache bands." Still laughing, they pointed to the lettering on their scarfs.

"We will tell you" they said, bending over him, as their small forms grew almost invisible. "We are the resolutions you never took—the ones you kept."

Their tinkling laughter reminded him of silver bells; he thought. Struggling harder, he woke. The small clock on the mantel was ushering in the New Year with twelve silver strokes. It was a new day.

Stage Manager to Oriental Dancer: "I can't let you go on in that cheesecloth handkerchief. This is a family theatre."

Oriental Dancer: "I'll wear the handkerchief or nothing!"

Stage Manager (wearily): "Wear the hanky."

"Give me back my kisses," said the boy. And the quarrel ended.

Question: Is there any cure for black heads? We don't think so. We find blondes are just as bad.

Ronnie—I tell you my love for you is making me mad—mad!

Anna—Well, keep quiet about it. It's had the same effect on father.

Past Tense.

Mistress (angrily): I never heard such impudence in all my life. You have a lot of nerve to call yourself a lady's maid.

New Maid: I don't call myself that now, ma'am; but I was a lady's maid before I got this job.

A FAIRY TALE

Said one of the Gold Dust Twins:
"Here's our chance to make a cleaning!"
"Nothing doing!" replied the other, "Lux against us."

Flap.—"Belle's mother must be stupid. I don't believe she knows a thing."

Jack—"What is more, she doesn't even suspect a thing."

The boy arrived late at school, and on being asked for an explanation he informed the teacher that a gentleman had dropped a quarter in the street, which caused a crowd to collect, and until it dispersed he could not leave. "But why?" inquired the teacher. "Because," answered the boy, "I was standing on the quarter."

A nervous passenger on the first day of the voyage asked the captain what would be the result if the steamer should strike an iceberg while it was plunging through the fog. "The iceberg would move right along, madam," the captain replied courteously, "just as if nothing had happened." And the old lady was greatly relieved.

Herdsman—"Did you water the cow?"

Herdsman—"What, not watered her for two days? Why not?"

Hired Man—"Didn't you say she wouldn't be dry for three months!"

Egg: What a peach across the street!

Egg: Where should she dress?

"What kind of dress did Betty wear at the party last night?"

"I don't remember; think it was checked."

"Say, what kind of a party was that?"

He—"Have you heard the new hotel song?"

She—"No, what is it?"

He—"Ho-tel me pretty maiden."

"What is your salary as a saleslady?"

"Seven dollars a week."

"Surely, you cannot lead a good Christian life on that!"

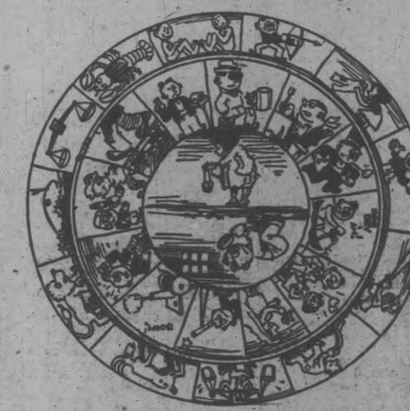
"That's the only kind you can lead on seven per."

Ye Horrorscopic Calendar

Watch for its Prophecies to Come True

BY PROF. YUSSIF WEISENHEIMER

Member of Royal Academy of Pastmasters of Forecasts.



The coming year casts its shadow before it, according to the poet Borah.

After the manner of famous astrologers I have prepared the accompanying prophetic calendar for 1927, and here you can read the future.

In the inner circle you see a woman with a fur coat. The meaning is unmistakable. Part of the new year will be summer.

Below her is one of the bourgeois. He is in the coal bin, looking for coal. That signifies that in 1927 we also will have some winter.

Now for the second circle. At the very top, notice the man with the tin cup. The man is not a blind man. No. It is father. He has just received the January accounts rendered, and gone out to see about getting the money to meet them.

Getting Even With February.

Next to the right is a man sitting at table with a napkin around his neck. He is trying to eat three days' food in one to make up for the fact February has only 28 days. As for the ladies, they're still on a reducing diet.

In the next square is a man wearing full dress. Again the significance is as plain as a holdup in Chicago. It's March, and the man is trying to go out in society like a lion.

Next, a jolly young fellow is drifting, drifting down the Niagara river in a canoe. He has been to Ontario. Now he is riding for the falls—an April fool tragedy.

Next we see young lovers. They are casting coy glances at one another. You see it's May time and they're so young!

Joyous June.

The result of the coy glances is next in line—a June wedding. The bridegroom is wondering if he'll have to wash the dishes after the wedding breakfast. The bride is trying to remember if she put the stocking with the hole in it on this morning.

You behold a man with a telescope in the next stall. He is looking for stars. Or, since it's July, maybe he's seeking a shade tree. Men's tastes are queer.

August, with its cannon. This is to indicate that, unlike August, 1914, no war will start in August of this year.

Oh no, we were wrong. The September panel corrects us. There is going to be war after all, and it'll be long and bitter. The young lady who cast coy glances at the young man in the May panel has informed him that her mother is coming to live with them. He is applying an ice pack to his aching dome.

Mister Pyle?

Next, in nut-brown October, you see a professional football promoter. He is trying to lure one of the big college stars into the money game and is offering him a cigar for his trouble. But the young college man is holding out for one hundred thousand guilders.

Next is a quaint scene, indeed. It shows a man who played a hot tip on a race horse enjoying life on the fruits of his wager.

Finally comes an old saw—the day before the new year, and a man is placing his hand on a Bible. He's trying to get the spiritual strength to wear the tie that Santy brought.

That finishes my month to month prophecy. Now meet some of the year's miscellaneous performers. These are in the outer circle, where just for the fun of it, we will skip around a bit.

Can you find the goat? It has been frisking about in Wall Street. It horned in on a big deal, and now is nice and clean.

Can you pick out Diana of the Hunt? That's the lady with her hand in papa's pockets.

The man with the bow and arrow is not Sagittarius. It's a man hunting for a ticket for the 1927 Army-Navy game.

See the twins! The father is around the corner saying "Gemini!"

The Piscean Male.

The crab stands for the male mate, who oft-times waxes picayunish, according to the female mate.

The man making a speech is a famous liar. He will tell you that Santa Claus is really a politician.

The man with the baseball mace is conducting a punitive expedition like Don Quixote; he has gone batty.

The water-bearer is trying to carry his water on both shoulders. Watch for him to spill some. All these characters you will encounter in the 1927 news. Mark my word!

Going To Suburbia

A Short Story

(By Dorothy Douglas.)

When Ellery boarded the already crowded train going to Suburbia and took the only vacant seat in the coach, he knew at the start that his luck was right with him.

He wondered why there hadn't been a fight among the men to secure that particular seat, for the other half of it was occupied by one so fair as to make Ellery quite elated at the mere joy of sitting beside her.

Ellery had a sudden and completely absurd regret that he had, on the previous evening, written and posted a letter to Alice Manders asking her the all-important question as to whether or not she intended marrying him.

He opened his paper and began to read, but always with a delightful contentment that someone charming was sitting beside him. He reflected that he wouldn't mind the tedious trip to Suburbia often under like conditions. He was on his way to spend the week-end with Alice and her family. Alice was a devotee of the country while Ellery was the city type and he supposed he might have to knuckle down to a commutation ticket—if Alice married him.

At each stop of the train at various stations his heart sank lest the fair one beside him should alight and thereby rob the train of all its joy. But up to the station just before Suburbia she was still there, and Ellery had hopes that she might have the same destination as himself.

She had. She folded her paper, drew on a spotless white glove and adjusted the bit of stone martin about her neck and prepared to rise. A fleeting smile again swept over her face. It intimated her desire to pass him.

Ellery followed her out of the train and watched her secure the only taxi waiting at the station.

There was nothing left for him to do but start off with his suitcase and walk the two and a half miles to Fairlawn, Alice's home. He had told her not to meet him as he was not certain which train he could catch.

He wished more than ever that he had not rushed into that proposal to Alice. Living in the country would just about finish him, and yet she loved it. An icy wind was blowing up and he realized that he was destined to spend a cold week-end—country homes were always cold.

He had tramped about half his journey when he saw just ahead of him, trudging wearily along, the wonder creature who had sat beside him in the train. Her suitcase seemed heavy and she stopped, as he drew nearer, to rest beneath a sheltering tree.

"I beg pardon," said Ellery, raising his hat, "but can I help you? Where's the taxi?"

"It pegged out about half a mile back! Did you ever see such a forsaken place! No street car, no taxi—only muddy streets and endless hills to climb." She smiled a peevish little smile, but it went straight to Ellery's heart. "My gloves are ruined and my shoes all mud and I'm cold. If there was any way except walking I'd go back to town this minute."

Ellery laughed loud and long and the girl cast a swift look into his eyes, then did the same.

"Well, honestly, I can't see what so many people rave about in the country." She finally said: "I hate having muddy boots and getting all wet and having no taxis to pop into and sitting around draughty houses."

"We are twin souls," stated Ellery. "If we were in town now we could stop in for a cup of hot coffee or the movies or theater or better still—all of them. What can one do here. Not a thing."

They were both so absorbed in one another's views of the country life that they failed to notice a car slowing up beside them until it stopped.

"Well—what an idyl!"—It was Alice's laughing voice. "I didn't know you two were acquainted." And she opened wide the door of the cozy big car.

"We don't," the two said in unison, and, as Ellery helped the wonder girl into the car and told Alice all about their meeting, he realized that events were taking a rather peculiar turn.

Having been properly introduced, they solemnly shook hands, then laughed happily.

"It's what you both deserve," said Alice, referring to the troubles they had been having. "You should have let me know by what train you were coming. I'm going back to the station to meet Jack Winter—he's joining our week-end party." Nan noticed Alice's heightened color but Ellery did not.

"Nice chap, Winter," said Ellery, "awfully keen on the country."

"Unlike your two selves," rejoined Alice, and turned a swift glance at them. "You know, Jim, I had a letter from you this morning, or rather a check made out to your tailor, I suppose. No doubt you put a letter to me in the wrong envelope." She was busy with her steering and failed to see the tremendous joy that swept over Ellery's face. Unconsciously, he drew a trifle nearer to Nan and the country began to take on a glory he had not before observed.

And, as events moved onward, Ellery was thankful for the only time in his life that his stupidity held sway while he was putting letters into envelopes. And also, for once, going to Suburbia ushered in the happiest happening in life—Love.

PRESTON WINS GAME AT GALT

Secures Revenge in Overtime For Defeat at Home.

SCORE 4-3.

GALT, Jan. 8. — Preston is in second place in Group 1 of the O. H.A. senior series as a result of a 4 to 3 overtime victory over the locals here last night, thus obtaining revenge for their unexpected defeat at home Monday night. Eddie Clarke scored the winning goal after seven and a half minutes of play in overtime, when he stopped a Galt rush and dashed down the ice, with Arnott teaming and only the defense to beat. Clarke outguessed Himes and Hoffman and instead of passing, zig-zagged around to go in on top of Murray and flip the puck past him.

On the play Galt should have won in the regulation period, having the most opportunities around the net, but they missed them, and, in addition, Alf Schmaltz turned in, to Murray's 49, Schmaltz was 63 shots, the majority from close in, to Murray's 49. Schmaltz was Preston's star. In the second period in a collision in his net, he struck his head against the goalpost and was knocked dizzy.

CURLING

AN EIGHT-END.

A double header was played at the curling rink last night and one of the features of the first game which was played was the eight points won on the second end by the rink skipped by Alex. Kay. The eight stones played by that rink all counted which is something unusual in curling. At the 9.30 game the same players were on each rink as on the previous game that evening:

SOME GOOD GAMES IN LADIES' LEAGUE

Opening Matches of City Basketball Loop Attract Crowd.

The opening games of the Y.W. C.A. City Basketball League were played off Friday evening and started off the League most enthusiastically. A good crowd enjoyed the game last night, lining the big gymnasium on all sides and cheering lustily the many scores. The games will be played each Friday evening at 8 o'clock and the public will be welcome.

Boys' rules have been adopted for this year and it is expected that as the girls become more accustomed to the new rules the games will show better combination and more speed.

The games were:

"Y" Seniors vs. Brinton Carpet—The game was very one sided resulting 26 to 0 in favor of the 'Y' team. The Brinton is a new team this year and this team coming up against a senior team the score should not be discouraging. The Brintons played a good defensive game.

Second game—DeLaval vs. Quaker Oats, 2-0 in favor of the DeLaval won by default.

Third game—C.G.E. vs. Canadian Woollens, 22-8 in favor of the C.G. E. This was a very fast game and most interesting.

Fourth game—Westclox vs. 'Y' Elementary, score 5-6 in favor of the 'Y'.

The lineup was as follows:

'Y' Seniors—E. Outram, D. Graham, I Chambers, H. Jackson and V. Graham.

Brinton Carpet — F. Pavey, M. Doucette, M. Simpson, I. Delorme and A. Shaw.

De Laval—E. Forster, M. McPherson, E. Conroy, G. Guthrie, and H. Carson.

C. G. E.—M. Mortimer, H. Plunkett, M. McLaren, T. Taylor, M. Langton and A. Logan.

Can. Woollens—M. Bradley, L. Bradley, L. Slaughter, J. Gregory, E. Bradley and M. Ronco.

Westclox—J. McIlwain, B. Scott, G. Thomas, I. Thirnbeck, B. Graham, C. Clare and K. Murphy.

'Y' Elementary—S. Ecobichon, C. Long, G. Butcher, J. Patterson, and G. Robinson.

Referees—A. McLeish, N. Hamilton, A. D. Grayston and H. McLeod.

DINNER AND PRESENTATION TO HIS HONOR, THE LIEUT-ENANT-GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO, COL. HENRY COCKSHUTT, TORONTO, JANUARY 18TH.

A rousing interest is being taken by the people of Ontario in the banquet and presentation to be tendered on January 18th to Col. Henry Cockshutt, retiring Lieut.-Governor of the Province.

The banquet committee, under the able chairmanship of Mr. George Wilson and the secretaryship of Mr. N. M. McIntosh of Toronto, is working indefatigably to obtain as large a representation of the citizens of the Province as may be possible, and all public bodies and organizations in the various municipalities are putting forth every effort toward assisting in attaining the objective. The co-operation of the Railway Companies follows as a matter of course, and the question of transportation of the guests is receving every attention.

A special train has been announced by Canadian National Railways as operating between Windsor and Toronto, thereby serving the territory from which the attendance is expected to be particularly heavy. From other districts transportation requirements will be protected adequately by the furnishing of extra coaches or parlor cars as may be necessary on regular trains.

The banquet committee have urged those at outlying points to form parties of ten or more, so that advantage may be taken of the special party fare, and this means of reduced transportation will at once recommend itself. Canadian National Agents and representatives at all points are keenly alive of the importance of handling the traffic originating in their areas with comfort and despatch, and will be glad to give complete information and to help in organizing special fare parties for the benefit of those who desire to participate in what will be an outstanding event for many years to come in the history of the Province of Ontario. 8-15

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear father, who died December 31, 1923:

Yes, dear father, how we miss you,
But you're gone to happy rest
Where the angels throng around you
And they'll crown you with the blest.
You have gone to be with loved ones,
Who have gone on long before;
They are waiting, watching for you,
Over on that golden shore.
Though your place on earth is vacant
And you'll come to us no more,
Yet we hope again to meet you
When our time on earth is o'er.
And in that land of song and beauty,
Parting hands are clasped no more.
When we meet again, dear father,
'Twill be when parting all is o'er.
All your days of pain and sorrow,
All your weary nights are past,
All earth's trials for you are ended,
You are safe in Heaven at last.

Inserted by loving daughter, —M"S. SAM WILSON.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear husband, William Lowes, who died January 8th, 1926:

I watched him suffer day by day,
It caused me bitter grief

My heart cannot tell what to say
God only knows how I miss him
In a house that is lonesome to-day.

Correction In Primeau & Riley's Advertisement

An error occurred in Messrs. Primeau and Riley's half page advertisement which appeared in last night's edition of the Examiner. The paragraph in the introduction which read "No goods exchanged or money refunded," should have read: "No goods on approval; goods exchanged or money refunded," which is in accordance with the long established policy of this business. The guaranties of the firm for giving perfect satisfaction to its customers is so well known that the correction was hardly necessary.

Their "Biggest Yet January Clearance" promises to be a record-breaker. Their advertisement should be read again having the above correction in mind.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

TRYING IT ON THE FAMILY

(By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.)

The story of how a baby is having any number of things "tried on him" makes one wonder why we could not make a clinic of sorts from each of our homes. This particular baby is a real one. His mother is a member of a staff that works at the testing of household appliances and the baby seems to be having the best time of any one. My readers already know that I like to turn things about a bit and show that the housewife can learn something from the commercial world. This baby gives me another idea along the same line! Why not keep in mind, when testing the effects of diets on various members of the family, the fact that information acquired concerning the diet about one member may be extremely useful in feeding others. Not that one should literally experiment except with established dietary standards. To "try out" some new food or idea in food combinations just for the sake of trying a new experiment would be the height of folly and might lead to permanently undermining health.

Like most good ideas, however, this one can be adapted. Certainly one is always counseled to learn by experience, and when he proves beyond peradventure that the liberal use of fruit juice will take care of the digestive disturbances of the man of the house, why not let the boy of the house have the benefit?

Naturally, one would go about such a plan with discretion and should be armed with common sense.

After all, the chief idea involved is that of training one's own mind to make fresh application of some one or more facts gained through careful experiment.

When normal nutrition is disturbed, there must needs be considerable actual experimenting with diet. The old saying, "What is one man's food may be another man's poison," is particularly applicable in digestive disturbances. There can be no plan capable of covering the requirements of all-father's lumbago, mother's neuralgia or Aunt Jemima's pleurisy.

So let us, by all means, "try out" tested theories, but let us, in the process, be careful to avoid foolish experimentation. The scientist experiments so wisely so as to make his work constructive. He does not say to himself, "Go to, I will advise Mrs. A. to eat frogs' legs because they are good for Mrs. B."

SEVENTY-SEVEN DIE IN MONTREAL FIRE

Children Crushed to Death in Panic At Sunday Afternoon Picture Show When Slight Blaze Alarms Gallery

Tots of Five Years and Older Perish Five Steps From Safety When Some Fall and Block Exit — Most of Victims Crushed Under Fear-Maddened Scores Rushing Before Smoke.

FIREMEN BREAK THROUGH WALL AND TUNNEL UNDER STAIR IN VAIN EFFORT TO RESCUE STRUGGLING BOYS AND GIRLS

Heart-Breaking Scenes Fill Sunday Evening as Parents Crowd Theatre, Hospitals and Morgue in Hopeful and Then Hopeless Search of Families — One Boy Celebrating His Birthday.

EFFORTS OF TWENTY MEN PULLING ROPE AROUND HIS BODY FAIL TO DRAG BOY FROM CROWDED DOORWAY OF THEATRE

Tragedy Stalks at the Heels of Comedy While Spectators Are Amused by Antics of Screen Comedians—"Everybody Was Laughing," Says Boy Who Crawled Over Mangled Bodies to Safety.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Seventy-seven and possibly more smoke-stained, blood-blotched boys and girls lie lifeless on the floors of the Montreal morgue. A score of other children and a few adults, scarred, crazed and burned, repose at four city hospitals. All are victims of a stampede that followed a minor outbreak of fire yesterday afternoon during a moving picture show at the Laurier Palace, in the east end of the city.

All evening the toll mounted, and may continue to mount, hour after hour, as ambulances made still more journeys to the old gray building near the harbor where mortuary chambers held scores of bodies ghastly in death. Long after the last wisp of steam had disseminated over the gaunt east end building which had been a tomb for so many, mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters tramped wearily from hospital to hospital. Some cried hysterically as they found their little ones in safe care. Others left the last hospital with one more call to make. And the morgue, enveloped in the deathly stillness of a business district hushed in the seventh day, saw ever-filling lines of taut-strung men, women and children even still searching and awaiting the worst.

The mute and mutilated were taken in mid-afternoon from a stairway, barely thirty feet long, leading from the eastern end of the theatre gallery to the street. Ten minutes encompassed the whole tragedy. Out of the bright January sunshine, which threw alluring blue shadows under the trees of the snow-covered park opposite the theatre, troops of adults and children, had filed, rosy-cheeked and laughing, into the ground floor and the gallery of the show house. Glaring bills, rich in startling colors, had filled them with anticipation of the fun they would get from the comedy "Get 'Em Young," of the excitement that would come from the serious films. Chattering and gay they filled the greater part of the theatre. Then, from the balcony, the cry of fire. It was an usher who sounded the alarm. There was a startled gasp from the audience; a stir and the ominous mutterings of a panic. Trained employees hushed the anxiety, for only a little smoke was coming from beneath the front of the gallery. It grew in volume. The audience on the ground floor was advised to take the exits, and that was done without semblance of scramble. Upstairs, the children were piling toward the ways that led down to the sidewalk. The western stairway was clear, and the youngsters were descending rapidly. Things were equally good on the eastern stairway, then—

Five steps from the sidewalk, five steps from safety, the tragedy was born. Boys and girls, in the van of the stampeding mob and pressed suddenly from the rear, stumbled and fell. Behind them in serried ranks were others. In an instant, panic had seized those at the rear. There was shoving and scrambling. Then boys and girls piled in a heap, and a minute or two was sufficient for the stairway to be a solid, suffocating, groaning, shrieking and dying mass.

Firemen and policemen were on the spot instantly. The blaze became secondary. Many of the children were rescued from the jam, though twenty men pulling on a constable's sturdy leather belt could not snatch one little fellow from death. Practised eyes saw the need for heroic measures. Holes were chopped through the wooden stairs, directly under the jam of bodies; another hole was made in a wall. Firemen formed a human chain, and gradually undermined the mass.

Nearly all pulled out of the stairway were dead. Two or three boys gave their names and died, crushed and mangled. Outside, the police worked feverishly. While motor fire pumps roared in ear-splitting cacopsony and as the interior blaze was attacked with tons of water, doctors were summoned. Frail little bodies were laid in rows on the sidewalk. Dead and injured were quickly separated. Priests were on the scene, and the last rites were given to a few gasping little ones who revived a little in the open air, then died.

Nearby fire and police stations became temporary morgues. Mortuary wagons started their trips. Ambulances rushed the injured to the various hospitals. The news spread, and some listless, anxious parents were on the run toward the theatre. Reinforced police were merciless to the curious, kindly and sympathetic to the people who feared their little ones were inside the building. They got little news. The safety forces of the city, and the hospital squads, worked so quickly that neither hospitals or the morgue alone could answer the queries.

Then the trek of tragedy from hospital to hospital, and then to the morgue, began. Admitting officers at the four big hospitals were besieged for the names of the patients they had. The best was done for the questioners, but there was need for tact, for more were dying, and the rustle of the soutane was heard in more than one corridor.

The End of the Journey.

At the end of the journey was the morgue. Line after line of police, repelled the insistent, near-crazed people who wanted to decide once for all if the loved ones were dead or missing.

In each mortuary chamber the crucifix topped an unforgettable scene. Under the brilliant lights, stretched on the shining, gray-tinted floors, were the boys and girls. There they lay, some with blood-stained faces, others smoke-blackened, most of them just pale and suffocated. Bright red mufflers,

London Newspapers Issue Extras Telling Tragedy

LONDON, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Several London newspapers issued special editions last evening to publish the latest cables telling of the disastrous panic at Montreal, when 77 lives were lost.

127 LIVES LOST AT CROSSINGS

Injuries Caused To 367 More, According To Railway Board.

IN ALL CANADA.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.— The level crossings of Canada took a record total of 127 lives during 1926, and caused injuries to 367 others, according to statistics compiled from the monthly reports issued by the Railway Board. There were reported to the Board a total of 297 crossing accidents, and in 229 of them automobiles were involved. As recently as 1912 there was not a crossing accident in all Canada in which a motor car was concerned, according to available figures. The previous high total of crossing accident deaths was set in 1924 when 94 lives were lost in this manner.

In the past 12 months 22 passengers were killed on Canadian railroads, and 334 passengers were injured. In the same period 12 employes were killed and 1,741 injured, and others killed totalled 21 and injured 555, this classification including the victims of railway crossings.

ROTARY HEARS OF TRIP AFTER BIG CONVENTION

Rotarian Lou Potvin Tells of Tour of Denver Delegates.

ON PIKE'S PEAK.

Party Visited Yellowstone Park and the Grand Canyon.

Rotarian Lou Potvin, who was the representative of the Peterboro Rotary Club at the convention of Rotary international at Denver last summer, was the speaker at to-day's luncheon of the local club, and his glowing description of the trip taken by the delegates following the convention, left his hearers wishing that they had all attended the Denver gathering.

Rotarian Potvin stressed the good fellowship that existed among the Rotarians who participated in the trip, and paid a compliment to the organizing efforts of Hart Seeley under whose direction the tour was made.

He described the visits made by the Rotarians to Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak, the Cave of the Winds, the Garden of the Gods, Salt Lake City, the Utah copper mines, Yellowstone National Park, with the bears and geysers and hot springs, and the Grand Canyon, perhaps the most wonderful sight of all the wonders that greeted the amazed eyes of the party. In all, the delegates travelled 5000 miles, found fresh activities planned for every hour, and had a most enjoyable and remarkable trip, that was punctuated at frequent intervals by enthusiastic welcomes from Rotary clubs in the districts visited.

Rotarian Potvin in conclusion said that if more Rotarians could attend International conventions there would be no difficulty in securing 100 per cent members.

Past President J. H. Seels moved a moved a vote of thanks to the speaker and it was supported by Rotarian W. R. Morris, who took advantage of the opportunity to bring this year's Rotary International Convention at Ottawa before the members.

During the luncheon it was announced that Past President J. H. Seels was well on his way in his third year of 100 per cent. attendance at Rotary meetings, and that Rotary Gerald McClelland was on his second year without a miss.

CAPITAL COSTS RAISE TAX-RATE

Toronto Mayor, in Inaugural Address, Warns Against Expenditure.

DEMANDS LARGE.

TORONTO, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press) — Mayor Foster, in his inaugural address delivered at to-day's meeting of the 1927 council, stressed the need for guarding against too much additional capital expenditure over what the city is committed to now. He pointed out that "uncontrollable" expenditures, or debt charges in other words, have been in the past and will be in the future of most vital effect on the tax rate. The huge capital requirements to be undertaken in the next few years will considerably increase the demands on the tax payers, the Mayor said.

THE WEATHER.

This (Monday) morning was more moderate, with the temperature at 10 degrees above zero. During the night, however, the thermometer had been down to 5 below zero. Sunday was a pleasant winter day, with the temperature rising to 24 degrees. In the early morning it was bitterly cold, with the lowest point at 16 degrees below zero. This is the lowest this winter so far. In my note on Saturday I said that the lowest temperature on Friday night to Saturday morning was 5 below zero. This was true as far as it went, but it was not all the truth. Later on Saturday morning (between 6 and 9) the thermometer went down to 11 degrees below zero. I always endeavor to have these notes absolutely authentic, hence this little explanation. Probably a dozen people asked me if there was not a mistake somewhere. The lowest reading of the thermometer is generally at daybreak. On this occasion it was not.—W. P.

Carroll Must Serve Term In Atlanta For Perjury In Connection With Inquiry Into His "Bathtub" Party

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, lost his appeal today from the sentence of a year and a day in Atlanta Penitentiry for perjury, committed in connection with the Grand Jury investigation of the "bath tub" party in his theatre. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed both the verdict of guilty and the sentence imposed by the lower court.

Carroll was brought to trial last Spring after newspaper stories had been printed saying that, at a party at the Earl Carroll Theatre, Joyce Hawley, a show girl, had served champagne to male guests from a bath tub on the stage in which she was seated undraped.

Before two Grand Juries Carroll swore that no one had occupied the bath tub, and that the beverage it contained was not intoxicating. He was found guilty on July 3 of the two counts which related to his telling the Grand Juries that no one occupied the bath tub.

He was fined $2,000 and sentenced to a year and a day on each count, but the terms were made to run concurrently.

INQUEST OPENS INTO DISASTER BEFORE INQUIRY

Witnesses Tell of Children Going To Show Without Permission.

BRIEF SESSION.

Coroner Says Only Few of Victims Should Have Been Admitted.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press).—The inquest on the 77 dead in the Laurier Palace Picture House fire and panic yesterday afternoon was adjourned until next Thursday, shortly after the hearing opened here to-day. The proceedings were postponed by order of Coroner McMahon, after the hearing of one father as to the identification of his child and the hearing of Dr. R. Fontaine, morgue autopsist, who told of having examined the bodies of 72 of the victims, all children. Coroner McMahon stated that he wished to have the outcome of the Fire Commissioner's inquiry, which will open to-morrow, before the coroner's jury would be asked to render a verdict.

Thos. Girard was the first to appear before Coroner McMahon to claim a death certificate for his son Raoul. He stated under oath that his boy, aged 14, had no permission to go to the show. Girard believed his boy went to the show sometimes, but did so against his father's will, and in opposition to his orders. The boy went with a 13-year-old brother, who was saved. Joseph Hetu was then called as the first witness, and stated that his 10-year-old boy Adrien was among the victims. Adrien had been accompanied by his eight-year-old brother who had been saved and was in hospital.

"Had the children your permission to ko to the show" asked the Coroner.

"They had permission to go to another show, not that theatre," the witness replied.

The Coroner — "Why not that theatre? Did you think it was dangerous?"

Hetu — "Yes, there were not enough exits."

The Coroner — "How do you know?"

Hetu—"I have been there myself."

The proprietor of the theatre, Ameen Lawand, and three of his staff were released on $100 bail each, pending investigation.

In his preliminary address to the jury, Coroner McMahon expressed the opinion that probably not more than three or four of the victims had any right to be admitted to the picture house at all. A Provincial law prohibits the admittance of all children under the age of 16 who are not accompanied by an adult.

"I myself interrogated 51 parents overnight," the Coroner told the jurymen. "Not more than three or four of the children identified by their parents were accompanied by an adult, as required by law. No, I don't believe there were as many as four."

FRENCH EXPECT JOINT ACTION OF POWERS IN CHINA

Latest Reports From Consul at Shanghai Have Been Alarming.

CANTONESE BLAMED.

Held Responsible For Riots Against Foreigners at Hankow.

PARIS, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press)—Joint action of the powers to safe guard foreign concessions in Shanghai is now foreseen in French official quarters.

The latest reports from the French Consul at Shanghai have been rather alarming, although no aggressions have occurred. It is felt here that the 40,000 inhabitants of the foreign concessions could not evacuate the foreign colony unless stiff defence was offered in the event of an attack.

Accuse Canton Leaders

HANKOW, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press)—Responsibility for the riots of January 3 which resulted in evacuation of the British concession here and the removal of Americans from Hankow, was laid at the door of the Cantonese regime today after the results of an investigation made by foreigners was announced.

The survey holds that the riots were instigated with the connivance of government officials; that the coolie mobs were harangued by Nationalist orators; and that anti-British posters were supplied by the Nationalist (Cantonese) propaganda department.

About 150 British business men and the remnant of the population of the British concession remained behind barred doors in the building of the Asiatic Petroleum Company.

SHOOTING VICTIM IN SERIOUS STATE

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Irving Earl Graves, 50 years old, formerly of Shannonville, Hastings County, who was twice shot last evening by Smith, a negro chauffeur, is in a dangerous condition, nurses at the Hotel Dieu said at noon to-day. Both bullets have been extracted by Dr. Paul Poisson, who expects Graves to recover.

Mussolini Plans To Extend Ban Upon Cabaret Dancing Says There Can Be No Squandering By Wealthy Minority

ROME, Italy, Jan. 10 (United Press).—Premier Mussolini's next joust may be against the dance. It was understood today that Mussolini planned soon to extend throughout Italy the prohibition of dancing in cabarets which already is in effect in Rome. Provincial cabaret owners planned a protest, but Mussolini discouraged them by letting it be known that if the entire country must eat brown bread and otherwise economize, there was no excuse for the wealthy minority squandering money on nonsensical entertainment. Many of Rome's fashionable cabarets, largely patronized by foreigners, have closed.

EX-ALD. WALTER STOCKER NAMED BY COUNCIL TO COMPLETE TERM OF EX-ALD. E. M. TURNER, RESIGNED

Committees Formed at Inaugural Meeting of City Council This Morning—Ald. Phelan, Fife, Hancock and Greene Head Same Boards as Last Year.

THREE MEN NOMINATED FOR VACANCY AND CONSIDERABLE DISCUSSION ENSUES

John R. Marshall and Ex-Ald. John W. Myers Proposed For Place—Will of People Should Be Obeyed, is the Feeling of Aldermen on Matter.

The vacancy caused by the resignation of E. M. Turner was filled this morning at the inaugural meeting of the City Council held this morning by the appointment of Walter Stocker who ran sixth in the Aldermanic race at the recent election.

Little enthusisam was evinced by those present when the matter came up for discussion, a long pause ensuing after Alderman M. M. McIntyre, the newly-elected member, moved that Mr. Stocker be appointed to the position. Ex-Alderman J. W. Meyer's name was suggested, as also was that of John R. Marshall, and after some considerable discussion Alderman R. S. Cotton seconded Alderman McIntyre's motion. On being put to the vote, however, the motion carried and Mr. Stocker was appointed.

Several of the Aldermen spoke in favor of the chairmanships of the various committees being handed around the various members and in the nominations that ensued all the appointments were unanimous until the matter of appointing a chairman for the finance committee came up. Alderman J. M. Greene was the first nominated; then Alderman N. E. Phelan, who has been chairman for the past six years was also nominated.

The matter caused considerable controversy, both Aldermen Greene and Phelan declaring that as far as they were concerned they were content to leave it in the hands of the Council. On the first vote, the result was a tie; as was the result of the second as when Alderman Greene voted for Alderman Phelan, His Worship the Mayor tied up the result by voting for Alderman Greene. On the third vote, Alderman Phelan voted for himself, and was appointed chairman.

In his opening address, Mayor W. T. Holloway expressed the opinion that the year 1927 promised to be a banner one in the history of the city, and asked for the support of every Alderman in making it a reality.

FOUR KILLED IN GANG WAR WHEN ROADHOUSE BLOWN UP IN SATURDAY NIGHT ATTACK

Southern Illinois Gang Leader Absent When His Home Dynamited.

VICTIMS UNKNOWN.

Farmers Who Hear the Explosion Did Not Dare Investigate Cause.

MARION, Ill., Jan. 10, Canadian Press. — At least four persons were killed late on Saturday night when Shady Rest, a roadhouse and armed camp of Charles Birger, the Southern Illinois gang leader, was dynamited and burned to the ground.

The bodies which were charred beyond identification, were brought to the court house here yesterday.

Birger is supposed to be in Harrisburg; Art. Newman, former east St. Louis hotel keeper and friend of Birger and his wife, have been living at the roadhouse. Neither Newman nor his wife or any of the employees of the roadhouse have been seen since.

Two of the bodies are believed to be those of Steve George, caretaker and his wife.

Farmers living in the vicinity of the roadhouse reported that they heard explosions about midnight in the direction of the camp, and shortly afterwards saw flames there. None of them dared to investigate.

Shady Rest consisted of a one story log cabin with basement, a power house and a barbecue stand. The cabin was burned to the ground, the power house was blown up and the barbecue stand riddled with bullets.

He was showered with congratulations from friends all over Canada, as well as in the city. To mark the occasion he took his place on the platform of the Central United Church Sunday morning and made a brief address to a large congregation.

By a standing vote the congregation passed a resolution expressing congratulations and good wishes to the veteran minister on entering his 97th year.

OTTAWA TALKS WITH ENGLAND BY TELEPHONE

Empire Wireless Telephony Instituted on Sunday With Inward Ring.

SEVERAL CALLS.

Communication Very Clear Over Beam Radio System and Wires.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 10.—(Canadian Press.)— Empire wireless telephone connected Ottawa with Bridgewater, Somerset, England, at noon yesterday. T. Ahearn, well known Ottawa financier, picked up the telephone receiver at his home and "central" informed him that "England desires to speak to you, sir." Immediately he heard the voice of R. N. Vyvian, Engineer in Chief of the Marconi Company's long distance communication at Bridgewater. The conversation between the two was most distinct. Mr. Ahearn afterwards spoke to Mr. Matthu, personal technical representative of Signor Marconi. A few minutes later Commander C. P. Edwards, director of radio in the Marine and Fisheries Department spoke from his home in Rockcliffe, his city, to Mr. Vyvian and Mr. Matthu, after which J. Fred Booth and his son J. R. Booth also conversed with the same parties in England. The communication was over the Beam radio system between England and Drummondville, Que., to which Ottawa was connected with the regular long distance telephone. So distinct was the test that Mr. Ahearn turned on the loud speaker of his radio set and Mr. Vyvian heard a minister in one of the local churches whose sermon was being broadcast at the time. The distance from Ottawa to Bridegwater is slightly under 3,500 miles.

Mrs. John Thornburn, who died at Ottawa at the age of 91. Mrs. Thornburn was a founder of the Womens Missionary Society and also of the National Council of Women.

CRY OF "FIRE" CAUSES PANIC

Nobody Hurt, However, in Rush From Niagara Falls Theatre.

BLAZE EXTINGUISHED.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Jan. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—An audience that filled Bellevue Theatre was thrown into excitement early last night, when fire broke out in the projection room. Some one cried "fire," and the crowd started to leave the theatre in a panic. The excitement subsided when the fire was put out. No one was injured.

OLD MASTERS

The worldly hope men set their hearts upon
Turns ashes—or it prospers; and anon,
Like snow upon the desert's dusty face
Lighting a little hour or two—is gone.

And those who husbanded the golden grain,
And those who flung it to the winds like rain,
Alike to no such aureate earth are turned
As, buried once, men want dug up again.

Think, in this battered caravanserai
Whose doorways are alternate night and day,
How sultan after sultan with his pomp
Abode his hour or two and went his way.

They say the lion and the lizard keep
The courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep;
And Bahram, that great hunter—the wild ass
Stamps o'er his head, and he lies fast asleep.

I sometimes think that never blows so red
The rose as where some buried Caesar bled;
That every hyacinth the garden wears
Dropped in its lap from some once lovely head.

—Edward FitsGerald: Translation from the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A RAINY NIGHT

I heard the raindrops in the night,
Drip-drip, drip-drip, drip-drip, drip-drip.
It made the fire seem twice as bright,
Gave home a closer fellowship.
On such a night how doubly dear
The simple joys of life appear,
On such a night how good a fire,
How poor the things we most desire.

I heard the raindrops on the roof,
I heard them splash against the pane,
And life is good, for here was proof,
A shelter on a night of rain.
A king could ask no more than this,
A king a house as much would miss;
A cotter that no storm can sting
Is richer than a roofless king.

I heard the raindrops, and, I thought,
A roof above, and walls around,
Whatever fortune I have sought,
What better fortune have I found?
When have I felt as much of peace
And felt from sorrow such release
As when I lay upon my bed
And heard the raindrops overhead?

Montreal Has Had Three Other Disastrous Fires During Past 20 Years With 113 Persons Killed

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10 (Canadian Press)—Considering its size and the cosmopolitan nature of its population Montreal has been singularly free of disastrous fires, but the city's record includes three instances where the loss of life was heavy. On the evening of February 14, 1918, the top section of the west wing of the Grey Nunnery, Guy street, burned and destroyed 64 fonts in the creche there, the aged men and women in the home of the institution and invalided soldiers in the St. Matthew street end of the building having to be carried to safety.

On June 13, 1910, at shortly after half past ten in the morning the building of the Herald Publishing Company on the south side of Victoria Square caught fire following the collapse of a wall and several floors of the structure, the death toll being 33 lives.

On February 26, 1907, in the afternoon, fire broke out in the Hochelaga school of the Protestant Board of school commissioners on Prefontaine street, and before it was brought under control 15 children and a teacher, Miss Sarah Maxwell, lost their lives, having lost their way in the smoke which filled the class rooms and passages at the time.

ENGINEER KILLED IN WRECK WHEN TRAINS CRASH IN FOG

Fireman Seriously Injured, But Passengers Escape With Minor Hurts.

NEAR SYRACUSE.

Sections of Twentieth Century, Limited, N.Y.C. Train, Collide.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.— (Canadian Press.)—Two sections of the Twentieth Century Limited, famous New York Central train, collided at Savannah station, west of Syracuse, early yesterday morning during a fog. Engineer Walter Scoville, of Buffalo, of the fourth section, was killed and his fireman, Stanley Henderson, also of Buffalo, was seriously injured. Several passengers sustained minor injuries, but all except Arthur Kennedy, of Oakland, Calif., were able to continue their journey.

These facts were announced by the New York Central here. Its account of the wreck said the fourth section of the train, eastbound, and carrying passengers for Boston and New England points, ran into the third section, eastbound with passengers for New York near Savannah Station, 31 miles west of Syracuse. Only the club car, engine tender and engine truck wheels of the fourth section were derailed, all the other equipment of the train remaining on the track. The two trains were moved to Syracuse from which all passengers excepting Mr. Kennedy, continued to their destinations.

Except for light local snowfalls in North Ontario and in Nova Scotia the weather has been fair in all Provinces, rather cold from Manitoba eastward and milder farther west.

CHILDREN CRUSHED

green sweaters, round-toed little shoes, mingled with tousled hair, upraised fists, chubby faces wrinkled and distorted into grimaces of the agony in which they died. The morgue officers had done their best. For the time being, the relatives, admitted two or three at a time, must look upon bodies just as they had been pulled from the choked stairway.

Sobbing, some near-crazed, went into the mortuary chambers and came away with nothing learned. Others caught their breath. "There," and a finger pointed at the victim. Constables moved reverently about the chambers, trying to find some little clue to identity. And all the time the mothers and fathers, the brothers and sisters, poured in.

The scene in the little room of the coroner's court was unparalleled. A long line of weeping parents led to the bench, where Coroner McMahon, investigator of crime and accident cases in Montreal for more than forty years, asked each one particulars concerning the deceased.

The coroner had opened the inquest in order to permit relatives to claim the bodies. The regular opening of the inquiry will be on Tuesday.

To each person Mr. McMahon put two questions. He asked the bereaved person whether or not the child who perished was accompanied to the theatre by an adult. In nearly every case the answer was "No." The coroner then asked if the child had permission of the parent to go to the show. Seventy-five per cent. of the answers to this question were in the negative.

The "death" line twisted from the bench to the door of the courtroom. Downstairs in the lobby of the building a crowd of persons seeking to identify their dead were held back by Provincial policemen. At intervals a father, a mother, or brother was escorted to the mortuary chamber, where recognition of a loved one brought a flood of tears or collapse.

After persons had established identification they were brought to the court-room upstairs to replace those in the line who had passed before the coroner.

To Celebrate Birthday.

Touching episodes were witnessed as the coroner directed his questions. Asked the age of his son Rene, Benjamin Roy, of 1440 Prefontaine Street, replied: "He was fourteen years old, in fact to-day was his fourteenth birthday. He and his brother went to the show to celebrate. The other boy was saved." Both the Roy children were under sixteen years of age.

Prosper Martel came to identify the bodies of his daughters, Eva, aged 8, and Yvette, 7. His son Philbert, aged 13, accompanied the little girls to the picture house, but escaped with injuries. He is at the Notre Dame Hospital.

Relatives began gathering at the morgue shortly before five o'clock. An hour later the place was congested, and by nine o'clock many were waiting outside the building. There was a constant stream of new arrivals.

All persons who were given a certificate of death by Coroner McMahon were told that they could return in two hours for the body.

Morgue employees were preparing to cope with the situation which would develop when the many hearses started to arrive.

Investigation To Open In Montreal On Tuesday

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10.— (Canadian Press). — The investigation of the Laurier Palace blaze before the Fire Commissioner's court will open Tuesday, and the investigators will continue their work to-day.

On Sunday they were unable to find any cause for the fire, and conditions were against allowing them to have a good look at the premises. Doors and other matters prescribed by municipal by-laws will be examined with care.

WINDSOR NEGRO ATTACKS TWO

Kills White Woman and Wounds Her White Companion.

KILLS HIMSELF.

WINDSOR, Jan. 10. — A tragedy was enacted here yesterday afternoon, when James Smith, aged 35, negro, shot his paramour, Mrs. Amelia Johnstone, aged 38, white, to death, sent two bullets into the body of Irvine Graves aged 50, also white, dangerously wounding him, and then turned the weapon on himself, put a bullet through his heart. The negro fell dead almost across the body of the woman. Graves, blood streaming from two wounds in chest and arms, was able to flee from the house, and turned in a police alarm.

The murder and suicide took place at 716 East Wyandotte St., a neighborhood to which the police have made many visits. According to the story as pieced together to-night by the police and newspaper men, the Johnstone woman and Smith have been living together for about three weeks. Previous to that time, Graves was a boarder in the Johnstone home but he left when Smith arrived and took up his quarters there.

All these are expected to live as their injuries are slight.

In Notre Dame Hospital three of the sufferers lay in the one room, still gasping for breath. Two of them were able to speak during short spells in which breathing became easier, but the third lay in a coma.

Joseph Valee owed his escape to a break in the front wall, made by some of the first firemen to arrive. Between efforts to clear his lungs of

The stage setting will be done with soft candles as illumination, and Madame Jackson will bring with her a picture of the cottage in which the Bonnie Prince took refuge, painted by the president of the Scotch Royal Academy. Miss Betty Jackson, who has just returned from study at the Royal Academy in London, England, has attracted the notice, through her voice, of the famous Edward Johnson.

EX-ALD. WALTER STOCKER NAMED BY COUNCIL TO COMPLETE TERM

Alderman N. E. Phelan occupied the chair when the Council meeting as a committee of the whole commenced the discussion leading to the appointment of an alderman to fill the place rendered vacant by E. M. Turner's resignation.

The Will of the People

Alderman M. M. McIntyre started the ball rolling by nominating Walter Stocker to fill the vacancy. "It looks to me only reasonable to appoint the next man on the ballot" he declared. "It would only be carrying out the will of the people and I therefore nominate Walter Stocker on account of the vote he polled on election day."

Silence ensued for a few minutes, no seconder speaking to the motion. Alderman Hancock then moved that ex-Alderman J. W. Meyers be appointed.

Alderman J. M. Greene declared "Under the circumstances the people's voice should be acquiesced in. It's the people's will we must obey and I think we have no other option but to appoint Mr. Stocker."

Alderman R. Denne in nominating John R. Marshall, who topped the list of defeated candidates at the 1926 election, said "We sat here when Mr. Stocker resigned to better himself by taking the market. I have nothing to say against him and I want this thoroughly understood. Last year when Mr. Phelan resigned to run for the Mayoralty we appointed him to the City Council and as a result Marshall was passed over. In justice to him I think he is deserving of a chance for consideration. Whoever you appoint let the appointment stand for harmony and good business.

At this stage Alderman J. O. Fife took the floor. "Stocker sat around here for two or three years," said Alderman Fife indicating the aldermanic benches. "He is qualified and unless we consider the personality of the man, he is entitled to the appointment.

"To be outspoken and sincere," continued Alderman Fife, "We know what he is; the public knows. There are those for him and those against him. I sat with him and I know him as well as any of you, as he sits beside me—yet I have a certain amount of feeling that he should be appointed."

Mr. Hancock—"As far as I am concerned I have nothing against Mr. Stocker."

Alderman Cotton at this stage seconded the motion moved by Alderman McIntyre that Mr. Stocker be appointed.

The amendment that Mr. Marshall be appointed was put to the meeting, Aldermen MacDonald and Denne supporting it, while Aldermen McIntyre, Hancock, Fife, Cotton and the Mayor opposed it, the amendment being defeated.

On the motion that Mr. Stocker be appointed, Aldermen Greene, McIntyre, Cotton and the Mayor voted in the affirmative. It being obvious that the motion had carried Mr. Denne interjected with the remark, "We might as well make it unanimous and show him we have nothing against him." The remaining members then voted in favor of the motion.

Committees Formed.

The council then retired to form the committees for the ensuing term. On the motion of Aldermen Hancock and Cotton, Alderman Fife was appointed chairman of the Board of Works. Alderman Cotton was appointed chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee on the motion of Aldermen Greene and Phelan. Alderman Denne, on the motion of Aldermen McIntyre and Fife, was appointed as chairman of the Manufacturers' committee. The appointments were all unanimous.

Two Tie Votes.

At this juncture Alderman Denne declared that in his opinion the committees should be passed around as he did not consider it right that one man should monopolise a committee. He moved, seconded by Alderman Cotton, that Alderman Greene be appointed to the Finance committee, Aldermen McDonald and Hancock, however, moved that Alderman Phelan retain the position of chairman. On the first vote Fife, MacDonald and Hancock voted with the ayes, while Denne, Cotton and McIntyre voted with the nays— Aldermen Greene and Phelan not voting. The result was a tie. On the second vote Alderman Greene voted for Alderman Phelan, but the Mayor voted for Alderman Greene, thus making another tie. On the third vote Alderman Phelan voted for himself, carrying the motion in his favor.

The following appointments as chairman were unanimous: Property, Alderman Hancock; Legal and Reception, Alderman MacDonald; Railways and Parks, Alderman Greene.

The Mayor's Address.

In opening the session Mayor Holloway delivered an address touching on the work to be accomplished.

"As we are about to commence our civic duties for 1927, our responsibilities seem to rest more heavily than they did a year ago," he said.

"To the old members of the Council I would ask of you the same co-operation and kindly consideration during 1927 as you gave me in 1926.

"To the new members I would say that you will require all your best efforts if you are going to equal the 1926 Council in sincerity and earnest attention to the business of all Council and committee meetings. I feel sure that such is your serious intention and that you will do all you can to facilitate business and use your best judgment to carry out only such measures as are in the best interests of all citizens, not to favor any individual or class, but to ever hold the general welfare of the city your chief desire.

"We will have some careful financing to do in order to preserve a reasonable rate of taxation and must carefully scrutinize the various departments so that nothing of any importance be lost sight of and that no opportunity be overlooked to make any saving in our expenditures consistent with true efficiency. We are already committed to some pavements and we have other large schemes which will require careful consideration.

"I hope that in a few years more our fair city may be able to expend considerably more on permanent improvements, at least when a reasonable amount of our debenture debt has been retired, and I do not wish to seriously handicap our taxpayers by anything like an extravagant programme of expenditures.

"This I think will meet with the approval of the majority of ratepayers and we must not forget that they have honored us with their confidence.

"The work of the Council is very interesting, and I hope you all enjoy it as I do—feeling at the same time that you are doing your bit for the promotion of the best little city in Ontario.

"Good times are surely just around the corner for Peterborough, so let us all get behind and push hard for a banner year in 1927.

"In conclusion; I wish to extend to you gentlemen and your families a most happy and prosperous New Year."

CHILDREN TELL ABOUT TERRORS OF AWFUL HOUR

Firemen Played Hose on Struggling Mass Menaced By Flames.

BOY SAID PRAYER.

Usher Threw Children Through Window Until Smoke Choked Him.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10.— (Canadian Press.)— Antoine Girouard, aged 16, of 2142 Nicolet street, who was taken to the Montreal General Hospital, said that he went to the theatre with two of his brothers. The trio were seated in the balcony.

"I noticed flames shoot up through a crack in the floor, and immediately everyone rushed from the balcony," said the boy. "I got safely down the stairway to within five steps of the botton, when I was knocked down by the rush on the stairway, and fell, with people piled over me. Three dead boys were beneath me when the police raised me, and above me five or six injured boys had to be removed before I could be reached. The stairway was blocked with the rush of the crowd, and people were lying about on the steps. While I was crushed and lying on the steps the firemen began to play the hose over us, and no doubt it was due to this action that more us were not burned to death. When I was picked up I was soaked with water, but my life had been saved."

Girouard, in addition to contusions was also slightly burned, but will recover.

Said a Prayer.

Ernie Fitzpatrick, aged ten, who lives at 1691 St. Catharine street east, two doors from the scene of the tragedy, crawled over heads and bodies in the fighting mob on the aisle and stairway and made his way to the lobby, whence he was carried to the street, affected slightly by the smoke, but otherwise none the worse for his experience.

The lad was standing in the aisle of the balcony when the fire occurred. "There was a comedy play and everyone was laughing," he said. "I had been there for about a half hour, and couldn't get a seat, and I was standing in the aisle. The lad who paid my way into the show got a seat and his brother stood near me. We saw flame and smoke coming from near the first row of the balcony in the centre. Some men were pouring water on the fire with extinguishers, and we were telling everyone that it was not a serious fire. Smoke began to get in our throats and everybody began to shout and run. I said a prayer and started to climb over the benches and over the other people. They were mostly children in the balcony. Then downstairs someone carried me in their arms and brought me somewhere."

The Fitzpatrick boy was with Michael Murphy, aged 14, and Eddie Murphy, aged 12, a brother. They had invited him to come to the theatre.

Usher Tells His Story.

"I was on the ground floor, placing when the fire started," said W. Pare, usher of the theatre, giving his version of the tragedy.

"I saw smoke coming from the floor of the balcony and I saw the ushers there throwing water on the spot. Then I realized that the fire was gainig headway and shouted to the audience that there was fire in the house and to walk out quietly.

"In a few moments everyone on the ground floor was going out through the four exits, and I climbed up to the balcony by the west side stairway. There I found the people coming down slowly because a fat woman was blocking the way. I gave her a push and then told the people to walk down quietly. They obeyed and in a short time I was able to run to the east end stairs and there I found a terrible jam. I picked up children, smashed a window over the canopy, and threw them out as fast as I could. I got nine of them out, but I guess that they were all dead. Then when I tried to get in again and bring some more out the smoke got me and I just managed to crawl to the window and fall through it myself. Firemen then came to me and carried me down to the street on a ladder."

WHAT ARE YOUR EYES WORTH?

There is no sense so precious as that of eyesight; seventy five per cent. of our education is obtained through the eyes, and yet some folks go on neglecting their eyes as if they were not worth much. If you are in doubt see W. H. Lacey, Optometrist, 410 George street; for evening appointment phone 1160 or 1084J.

On the last day of the year it is the custom of the Japanese to eat vermicelli, as this is supposed to bring plenty of money for the coming year.

William J. Kearns

A Biographical Sketch

(Contributed.)

William J. Kearns was born at number 7, Union street, Peterborough, on little Christmas Day, 1858. Educated at St. Peter's Roman Catholic School until he was thirteen years of age.

He left school to enter the lumber business, and for a number of years was with Mr. A. Sperry, of Blythe Mills. He was also with the Dickson Lumber Company. He put in the first shingle mill, his own invention, manufactured by the William Hamilton Manufacturing Co., for Mr. Ludgate, of Harwood and Peterboro.

In the fall of 1877 he took out square timber and board pine in Muskoka for Irwin & Boyd, of Nassau, the said timber being driven down the Magnetewan River to Byng Inlet, rafted there and taken to Midland and by train from Midland to Port Hope, rafted again at Port Hope for the Quebec market. Many times has Mr. Kearns taken drams of timber to the Quebec market for Mosom Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, and for other timber companies.

In 1879 he met with an accident in the Dickson Company's employ, which nearly severed his leg close to the body.

In 1880 he entered into the syndicate of Possette & Rogers, deceased ex-Mayor of Peterboro, and remained with them for three years at Young's Point. Many millions of shingles he manufactured there and every million went to the American market, and orders came back for as many more millions as could be furnished of the same quality.

In September, 1883, he severed his connection with Possette & Rogers and went West on the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the northern shore of Lake Superior, for the late Sir R. G. Reid of the Reid-Newfoundland Railway. He superintended the construction of thirty miles of the railway and Jackfish Bay tunnel and all the bridges from Big Pick to the Nipigon bridge, some of them 100 feet high above the water level. Put in at Lake Superior the largest number of yards of rock from Halifax to Vancouver, over 15,000 yards. Came down and built the international bridge from the Canadian Soo to the Michigan Soo; also the Soo branch from Algoma Mills to the Soo. He assisted Mr. Reid in the construction of the C.P.R. bridge across the Lachine Rapids above Montreal, but did not go to Newfoundland with Mr. Reid. He then joined the late Mr. James Conmee, ex-M.P.P. and ex-M.P., and assisted him in the construction of the C.P.R. Port Arthur, Duluth and Western Railway into the nickel mines northern Minnesota in 1892; also the Algoma Central and Michipogen Harbor into the Helen iron mines; also the Algoma Central from Saulte Ste. Marie to Mile 68.

Mr. Kearns has not only hired and shipped thousands of men of all nationalities and creeds, but has hired and shipped hundreds of thousands, and always made it a point to treat every one as he would like to be treated himself. He never had any dispute with men re wages; any wage he ever hired them for they always received. Always gave each man three chances to make good; if he failed at one job tried him at something else, and then if he didn't want to make good, paid him off quietly and let him go.

He was in the employ of Mr. John Bertram & Sons, late ex-M.P., off and on for some thirty odd years. He hired all their men for them, and also for Manley Chew, who bought out their interests some seven years ago at Collins' Inlet, Georgian Bay.

He was also connected with Foley, Stewart & Welsh on the Grand Trunk Pacific in British Columbia, when he had to take the men hired by him from Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Deseronto, Belleville, Trenton, Peterboro, Toronto and London via Chicago to Winnipeg, Edmonton, down to Fort George on the Fraser River. He also helped construct the C.P.R. from Mattawa to the head of the Long Soo on the Lower Canada side of the Ottawa River. He helped Fokey Brothers lay the steel from Burkton to Bobcaygeon, forty miles, in twenty-eight days so a passenger train could run over the entire route.

Mr. Kearns also assisted Hughes Bros. & Bangs, the multi-millionaires of Syracuse, N. Y., to construct the Poe Lock at the Michigan Soo.

He also assisted Messrs. M. J. Hainey & Ryan in constructing the ship canal at the Canadian Soo. He and ex-Alderman Calder, of Winnipeg, furnished Mr. M. J. Hainey with all the men they required for the construction of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway down in the Kootenay district, and also M. Hainey, Quinlan & Robinson with the men they required for the Healey Falls locks and the locks built by them below Campbellford.

He assisted the late George Goodwin in the Burleigh Falls canal and Lovelick locks.

He was connected with Gough Bros., late of Peterboro, now of Toronto, in the clothing business, for a number of years.

Mr. Kearns has been very much interested in the welfare of his native city. Many thousands of dollars of orders through him were sent to the William Hamilton Manufacturing Co., the Peterboro Lock Co., the Peterboro Canoe Co., the Turner Tent and Awning Co., Adam Hall, and several others too numerous to mention.

He also built a portion of the northern extension from Gravenhurst to North Bay, above Bracebridge, in 1885. He built about four miles of the Temiskaming Northern Ontario Railway from North Bay to Cochrane. Widdifield Station is on the north part of his work there, which he has not been paid for yet, but it is expected that the present Ontario Government will see that Mr. Kearns is paid for the work he did and the money he expended on that work. They are collecting passenger and freight rates for the work that he did, which, he states, he has never received a dollar for as yet.

Mr. Kearns is father of nine sons and five daughters. He made scientists out of his sons and gold medalists out of his daughters, and always taught his family as he was taught himself at his dear father's and mother's knee, in his school and in his church, to love his neighbour as himself, mankind of every description without any distinction, persons who injured him or differed from him in religion. Mr. Kearn's religion is the love and fear of God and the brotherhood of mankind.

In politics he is an independent protectionist and believes in Canada for the Canadians first, last and all the time.

He issued a challenge in the city of Ottawa, April, 1900, to debate any subject pertraining to Canada's prosperity, happiness, etc., in either law, medicine or theology, and he issues the same challenge today and is prepared to carry it out.

Mr. Kearns has worked for the uplift of Canada, towns, cities, Provinces and Dominion, since he was thirteen years of age, and now he intends to devote the balance of his life for his beloved country to redeem it and defend it.

His advice to all young men who start out in life is to work to the interest of individual, company or corporation that employs them, and to all employers of labour to take their men into their confidence and they will have better results. What we want in Canada is Capital and Labour to go hand in hand.

Mr. Kearns states we have the richest country in the world. Eighty-five per cent. of the asbestos of the world and the third richest gold mine of the world is ours. We have the copper, nickle, tin, iron and galena. We have timber of all kinds and the greatest pulp and paper mills in the world. Our agricultural lands are the finest under the sun; many millions of acres uninhabited. We have the fish. But we have more political grafters to the square inch than any two countries on earth.

It is to be hoped we are in for a change to try to win back some of Canada's fair sons and daughters who were forced to leave this country to seek a livelihood in Uncle Sam's domain.

The ambition of Mr. Kearns' whole life is to see a united Canada.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

CANADA'S SILVER PRODUCTION.

Q. What is Canada's silver production?

A. Canada has held the premier place within the Empire as the greatest producer of silver for the past two decades. During the last few years Canada has been the third largest producing country in the world, being outranked only by Mexico and the United States. Last year (1925) third place was captured by Peru, whose production exceeded that of Canada by slightly over one and a half million ounces.

. . . MIRROR OF THE PUBLIC MIND . . . INTERPRETER OF THE PUBLIC INTENT . . . TROUBLER OF THE PUBLIC CONSCIENCE.

THE MONTREAL TRAGEDY.

All Canada has been shocked by the terrible theatre fire in Montreal yesterday, one of the most distressing catastrophies in the history of this country.

The feature about it, apart from the shock caused by the loss of so many lives, that is most appalling is the realization that an accident of this nature is possible at any time in theatres and public halls all over the Dominion.

It is probably true that in most cases there are enough exits and fire escapes to make it possible for an audience that did not become panic-stricken to escape in the event of a fire alarm.

But the element of panic, unfortunately, cannot be eliminated.

The average crowd at the first sign of danger is likely to be instantly changed from a reasoning thinking assembly into a frenzied mob from whose minds everything has vanished but the instinct to save themselves.

And with that transformation the means of escape become inadequate and disaster follows.

Out of the Montreal tragedy should come a determination that theatre and public halls shall be made safe even when panic threatens.

THE TOURIST GOLD MINE.

Just what the tourist traffic means to Ontario can readily be estimated from the figures given out by C. C. Hela, Director of Publicity for the Ontario Government, which show that visitors to this Province last year spent $50,906,816, of which automobile parties contributed $30,779,566.

This total does not include the revenue derived from the tax on gasoline sold to tourists, which is estimated at $216,108.42, or about three times the total amount expended by the Government on publicity.

Practically as many visitors entered Canada last year as there are permanent residents in this country, and Ontario welcomed 6,668,416 tourists, of whom 5,583,326 came by automobile.

High as these figures are, it is expected that the present year will see a new record broken, as in addition to its many other attractions the new liquor policy offered by Ontario is likely to have its appeal with the very many residents of the Republic who chafe under the restrictions of the Volstead Act.

The city that does not exert every effort to secure a goodly share of this immensely lucrative tourist traffic is certainly not alive to its opportunities.

What proportion of this year's shower of gold is coming Peterboro's way?

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

The chief topic of discussion at the Progressive caucus last week, according to Hon. W. E. Raney, was "whether the proposed new liquor law should apply in ridings that had elected supporters of the O. T. A."

That will strike a lot of people as a sheer waste of time.

The election was not fought out on the basis that the results in any one district would decide the question of whether or not the sale of liquor would be authorized in that particular district.

It was indeed made plain by Premier Ferguson that should the Government be returned the sale of liquor through Government vendours would be established in all sections except those that had prior to 1916 voted themselves dry under local option legislation.

To attempt now to confine the Government sale of liquor to the districts that returned supporters of Government control is introducing a factor into the situation that was not stressed at all during the campaign, and that was not a consideration upon which voters arrived at a conclusion as to how their ballot should be marked.

If that is to be the Progressive plan of campaign it is not likely to make much headway.

PHYSICAL STOCK-TAKING.

These are days of inventories, of stock-taking. In stores and factories men are counting their assets and listing their deficiencies.

How many of these sagacious business men have made the most important inventory of all, an inventory of their bodily health? How many of them began the new year with a visit to their physician, their dentist, even to their optician?

How many of Peterboro's pastors (men like the rest of us, whose "days are few upon the earth),' after recommending the new leaf and extolling the new life, bethought themselves, as wise men should, of a physical examination?

And in the country farmers will fix the fences about their fields utterly heedless of any incipient impairment of their own "physical fences" which a physician's scrutiny might reveal.

Men who will of necessity take their cars to a garage for an "overhauling job" preparatory to another season's use, will never think of taking themselves to their doctor's office for a sounding of those vital organs which sustain the human machine's efficiency.

Signs of Time's incessant attrition are all around us, wearing down the barriers of our vigor, relentlessly moving us on in the stream of life and sweeping us one by one out into the sea of eternity.

Why not make a stand here at the turn of the year, throw up a new barricade against this pitiless enemy in Nature, and gather reinforcement from our doctor, our dentist.

Eventually we must abandon it and fall back to other and feebler defenses, but we surely can delay the retreat by a little personal solicitude now.

An annual or semi-annual physical examination is helping more and more men retain their health and strength. And this life extension idea seems to be a sound precautionary economy.

A few dollars for an examination are obviously cheaper and better than a few hundred for an operation; but the chief value is in the probable discovery of the beginning, the seeding, of some stealthy disease that might otherwise seize fast upon us before we discovered it.

Not a pleasant thought for this first month of the new year, but who will say it may not be timely and profitable to him!

THE COMING YEAR.

Nineteen Twenty-Seven dawned upon a Canada more optimistic and more surely confident than at any time in recent years. The close of an old year and the beginning of a new is a time when men invariably hope for better things and too often make their longings the father of their prophecies. And yet when every allowance is made for the hope that springs eternal it is still true that not for a long time has there been so much of the substantial and the concrete upon which to base fresh optimism.

The year just closed, taken all in all, was one of high achievement. In industry, in agriculture, in commerce and finance, in most of the things that go to heighten the lot of the common man, there was measurable progress. Today, in Canada, there is less of poverty, we think, less of unemployment, less of social and industrial unrest than for many years past, and certainly much less than may be found in nearly every other country. A political crisis, making for uncertainty, has been passed, and while the solution may not have been that which many had hoped for, there is in any event a greater stability. Our mines and our forests, our fields and our fisheries, continue with a richer and richer yield; our international trade expands; our railways are reasonably prosperous; there is peace and harmony among the various sections of our people; and the national health is good.

Canada, too, is emerging from the financial waters. Despite tax reductions last year, revenue has increased. Income tax and Post Office receipts are better than expected; and excise and sales tax and customs returns are considerably higher. As a consequence, the era of national deficits, continued almost steadily since pre-war days, has come to an end, Mr. Robb, with an assured balance on the right side of his ledger, and freed from the necessity of putting up for the National Railways, will be in position with his new budget to further reduce taxes, his only problem being as to where they should be reduced. This, of itself, should be a stimulus to further prosperity.

Thus, everything considered, Canada may well face the new year with cheerfulness and confidence. Sometimes as we contemplate our problems of transportation and distribution, and our differences of sections and races, we are apt to grow despondent. But when we remember that those who have gone before us faced those same obstacles in far more perilous array, and when, too, we compare our own troubles with the tribulations that beset other lands, we have cause for nothing but thankfulness. Canada, in truth, is a blessed part of this earth, a land where ambition and imagination and courage are sure to bring rewards, and of whose future, if her sons are but worthy of their heritage, there can be no doubt.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Peterboro Hockey Club seems to have run into an overdose of higher education.

That story about Lady Godiva the other day suggests the thought that a repetition of the famous ride today would attract attention only because the lady's tresses were not bobbed.

The banquet to Col. Cockahutt is expected to have 2,000 guests. The static produced by the soup course ought in this case to create a new record.

All is not sunshine in Florida apparently. It is said that someone threw a ham sandwich into a Miami real estate office the other day and three salesmen were killed in the scramble.

The Ontario Safety League suggests the adoption of safety first practices as a sensible New Year's programme. There is surely need of taking this advice.

Rural Ontario is so consistent in its adhesion to the dry cause that it is objecting to the proposal that all vehicles should be "lit up."

Talk may be cheap, but not as yet over the Atlantic wireless telephone.

Progressives are talking about an investigation into the "last night party." Why all the hurry?

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour were well maintained under a quiet demand.

The millfeed market was fairly active and values ruled firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were steady.

An active business was transacted in eggs and the undertone to the market continued easy. The receipts were 997 cases.

A feature of the butter trade on Saturday was the announcement that jobbing prices for finest creamery butter would be 1 cent per pound higher at 43c per pound in solid packages, and 44c per pound in one pound blocks owing to the continued strength in the wholesale market. The wholesale market was active and firm. The receipts were 115 packages.

The cheese market was moderately active and firm. The receipts were 169 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press).—Spread trading enthusiasm in which wheat was sold and corn was bought turned the wheat market downward Saturday at the last. There was also much late selling to realize profits for previous speculative buyers of wheat. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1-8 to 1-4c net lower with corn 3-8 to 5-8c up; oats unchanged to 1-8 and 1-4c off, and provisions varying from 7c decline to 25c advance.

Corn gained, influenced by backwardness of crop movement and by prospective heavy demand throughout the winter. Oats were neglected.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"THE WRONG WORD"

Under the heading, "The Wrong Word," T. A. Rickard, one of the editors of "Engineering and Mining Journal-Press," wrote:

"Words may have several meanings; most words have a primary or usual meaning, and after that they have their secondary meanings. Take such a word as 'economic'; it is the adjective corresponding to 'economics'—that is, relating to the science that deals with the production and distribution of wealth. 'Economical' primarily means 'saving' or 'thrifty,' but it can also be used in the sense of 'economic.' Again, take 'proposition.' Its primary meaning is a 'statement' or 'assertion,' yet it is used commonly instead of 'proposal,' a proposing of something, an offer put forward for consideration.

"Now, if we use the wrong word—that is, the word that does not fit—we spoil our vocabulary. The man who uses 'economical' for 'economic,' and 'proposition' for 'proposal,' has only two words in his vocabulary, whereas he who uses these words in their primary meaning has four words at his service."

FROM MR. ABRAHAM

Peterborough, Ont.,
January 6, 1927

Dear Mr. Editor.—Should like to trespass on a little space of your paper. It gave me much pleasure to read your report of the splendid address on Democracy given at a recent meeting of the Kiwanians. It contained a great deal of food for reflection. In dealing with the ambitious man it matters not if he be born in splendour or the humblest shack in the country, if he had the gifts of character he could be a motive power in this or any other country and then leave this world far better than he found it, for good character was the greatest gift that a man could possess, it embodies everything a man should be. Character can be acquired in a great many ways, and a great many men who had made a success in life today had acquired their lesson in the school of adversity, as there was nothing like overcoming difficulties in forming character, the three essentials were truth, honesty (which is truth in action) and courage.

Helping Others

It does not mean necessarily physically what is needed is the courage to be straightforward, the courage to be honest and ever strive to follow the path of duty, and make very best use of his gifts; truth, honesty and courage are the key to force of character, and in the great work of Democracy if we are to help one's self, we must also cultivate the habit to help others and be quite sure when we are offering something we give it with clean hands and hearts. "Backbone required, not wishbone," is what man requires and the adoption of the right attitude toward others was another mark of true greatness, to be truly great we should always put ourselves in the other fellow's shoes; it would be playing the game and show a splendid spirit of Brotherhood, and never condemn in others what one would pardon in himself.

Many men possessing good talents and abilities had failed miserably because they lacked self control, which is a most essential quality in these days. No matter what a man may be, the most important thing for him to have is a healthy body and mind, and on all sides you cannot but say that "Education" is the primary cause of controlling this. Education goes on from the cradle to the grave, but to my mind what we term the infant education—or schooling—the idea is not only to implant into the young mind the classics or all the "ologies" but also to ensure each individual should be of some use to mankind.

It has been said by some that the youth of today had not the character of the youth of the past; let us wander back to 1914 to 1918, on the Fields of France and Flanders, where thousands of these young men now sleep; those young men had shown the finest spirit of self sacrifice, they did not fail. If the older man of today says the young men of today are not as good as his forefathers, then it was because a good example has not been set. Let them help the young man to the advantage of character and then they will have gone far to help strengthen the true greatness of Democracy.

Yours truly,
JAS. ABRAHAM.

WHAT IS OUR AMBITION?

The Little Things of Life

There are perhaps too many people who want to do the big things in life, the things which show up the most, but someone must do the little things, for it is the little bolts and screws which hold the big machinery of life together, so after all one is as necessary as the other.

Someone has said: There are men and women who seem to be doing so little, yet who in reality are doing so much. They seem to be doing so little because they are working with higher agencies, and yet are doing so much because of this very fact. I will pen here a few thoughts from the pen of Robt. Louis Stevenson. He says: we require higher tasks because we do not recognize the height of those we have.

Endeavouring to be kind and honest seems an affair too inconsequential for men of our heroic mould; we had rather set ourselves to doing something bold, arduous and conclusive; we would rather found a schism, or suppress an heresy, cut off a hand or mortify an appetite.

But the task before us is rather one of microscopic fineness and the heroism required is that of patience.

As I grow older I want in spirit to grow younger for, to quote Stevenson again: The Kingdom of Heaven is of the childlike, of those who are easy to please, of those who love and who love to give pleasure. And so as I stand and face 1927 my desire is to build up rather than tear down, to encourage rather than discourage, to be broad-minded, and allow the other fellow his point of view for he is entitled to it as much as I am to mine. If we want strife to cease and darkness to flee, then in order to help bring our desires to pass let us not rail at the darkness but spread sunshine to dispell it. The iceberg will melt in the sunshine, and the flowers will bloom around us if we shall be glad because others are glad. I remember a little story about the infection of ill temper. The boss comes into the office and he's mad, he rails at the stenographer; she in turn gets mad with the office boy and he goes out and kicks the poor cat; but let us reverse this in our mind and see how it goes—the infection of cheerfulness, of good temper and good will, why everybody would be singing and the poor cat basking peacefully in the sunshine.

I know it is easy to talk and there are so many things to hinder, but after all there is only one way—that is to link ourselves up with the Devine and as His followers He expects these things from us else why did He say: Ye are the light of the world; a city set on an hill which cannot be hid; so let your lights shine before men. What for? That they may behold it and glorify or praise God.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

INSTINCT NOT A SAFE GUIDE

We know that thousands of years have elapsed with no improvement in the animal kingdom due to the animal following their own instinct. It is true that, while living in a wild state, they are comparatively free from disease, and this is, no doubt, largely due to the fact that they have not developed intellect.

Man has evolved intellectually through the centuries, and our modern scientific inventions of the day show how much change has taken place, due to man's increased intelligence and his reasoning power. The telephones, streetcars, wireless telegraphy, flying machines, and all of the modern inventions have so changed man's habits of living that instinct is no longer a safe guide for him in the conduct of his everyday affairs.

Within the last hundred years or so, our food has become entirely revolutionized. Those foods that your ancestors used in a natural state are now preserved, purified, pickled, canned, distilled, polished, frozen and stored. They are so entirely changed from the way they grow naturally that we are not able to select the proper ones alone by the call of instinct.

I often hear people say, "O, I eat whatever I feel like eating, whatever I want at the time, and I am sure that I stay well because I do not take up any of these diet fads." What do you think of this explanation to account for apparent good health? The one who makes such a statement is probably well, in "spite" of the way he lives. We ought to take advantage of all the modern scientific inventions, and we are unwise if we think we can eat food haphazardly according to our appetite or desire for it, and not suffer consequences which, in the end, will be disastrous. Appetite or instinct calls us to eat a pickle, but intelligence warns us against it.

We must not take our lessons from primitive races who lived in a very natural manner, "uncontaminated," if we can put it that way, with all of our modern scientific inventions. They lived in the open air, gathered what food they needed, and lived a joyful life in every way without the mental strain and stress of our everyday civilized life.

Where reason is progressive, instinct is practically stationary.

Life is but one continual course of instructions, and we live in a scientific world from which we cannot well escape. Only the most brutish of men live by instinct. The stupid must often learn by necessity. The average person spends their whole life learning by experience, but if we are wise we are instructed by reason, and we see all of the truths of modern scientific researches.

It is not necessary nor advisable to go back to nature; it is much better if we bring nature to us, and learn her secrets.

In the first place, very few people have a normal hunger for food; the desire they have can better be called "appetite."

You who are reading this article would find that you could not be happy if you went over to Africa and lived in the wilds with the natives; you have enjoyed too many benefits of civilization to be able to be happy in such primitive surroundings.

Learn that, while you are living in a scientific world, you must live on a scientific diet, and be as careful of the foods you put in your body as you are of the fuel you put in your automobile.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

THE GREAT EMPEROR

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

Have you ever heard of the man who ruled over the greatest empire in the world in all time?

He reigned seven hundred years ago and he arrested the progress of the world as one might stop the hands of a clock.

He was born in a nomad tribe, but steadily rose until he became ruler of the largest number of people ever under a single authority.

He was the most feared of men.

He was Genghis Khan, who ruled half the world and terrorized the other half.

The people of Cathay called him the Perfect Warrior. The Turks of Central Asia spoke of him as The Mighty Manslayer. The Mohammedans called him the Scourge of God. Others called him Master of Thrones and Crowns. His birth name was Temujin, which means "Finest Steel," and he is known to us Genghis Khan.

He made mighty wars. Instead of warring with kingdoms he annihilated countries. He not only captured cities, but often obliterated them so that the grass grew over their sites. Rivers were diverted from their courses, and when he had passed wolves and ravens ranged over once fertile lands. The human lives he took stagger the imagination. The slain in the World War would not measure a third of it. Whole civilizations were consumed by him. The survivors of nations lived after his passing in the shadow of the tomb.

Harold Lamb in the magazine "Asia" gives an excellent history of him and calls to our recollection this most dreaded of all monarchs.

Roger Bacon said that undoubtedly his subjects were soldiers of Antichrist, and Frederick II of Germany wrote Henry III of England that they were probably the descendants of the lost ten tribes of Israel. The Pope called the Council of Lyons partly as a means of stemming the Mongol conquests.

There was nothing supernatural about Genghis Khan, but he was simply an example of a successful warrior. He did no good in the world, but is an illustration of the amount of harm a cruel and wicked man can do.

Of all conquerors, including Julius Caesar, Napoleon and Charlemagne and the like, Genghis Khan was the most potent.

The above facts are condensed from the article by Mr. Lamb in the magazine referred to.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce; but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, lumber king with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman! Abner maliciously causes Ranny a nasty fall. Ranny accuses Joan of accepting Stivner's yachting invitation only because Abner is to be a guest—

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

There were too many people too near for Joan to throw her wonted tantrum. Yet the mere look of a married woman can sometimes be very eloquent, very soul blasting, very vicious—and understood as such only by her husband. Joan's was!

Ranny felt rather as though a boomerang had smote him as he made his way moodily towards the paddock, faced with a polo game finish in which, if he played as he felt, he would probably lose the biggest business deal for which he had ever bid!

And faced, beyond that, with a yachting trip week-end in which, even if he felt better than he now did, he would probably lose his wife!

This frame of mind continued to hang down upon him like a wet fog as he mechanically mounted Judy, mechanically cantered to midfield and awaited the toss-in, and mechanically blocked and rode and stroked after the opening scrimmage had quickly melted into one of those dazzling and wide-scattered dashes, hither and thither in the wake of the white ball, that are the bewildering medley of excitement and color which make polo so alluring to those men, horses, and spectators who know it.

"Better if young Drake had stayed in!" criticized the spectators amongst themselves; "Ranny's dead in his saddle!"

Just then the ball, glancing off an Argentine mallet, swished through the air and came within an inch of taking Ranny's nose in its flight. It served to do two things: rouse Ranny's playing instinct, and demonstrate to the watchers that he was not dead but mopsing.

After stopping Judy up so short that her forelegs left the ground, like an overbalanced wheelbarrow, Ranny paused only long enough to glance down, cross-eyed, and make sure that his nose was intact.

Then he gave the eager Judy her head in a mad pursuit of the ball.

Forgotten Abner. Forgotten the moral responsibility of Stivner's huge bet. Forgotten Joan. Mr. Ranny Forbes was again wholeheartedly and whole-mindedly the polo star par excellence.

A blazing and elusive star, indeed, who demanded the most brilliant attentions of the whole Argentine galaxy. A comet that threatened to shower in sparkling glory across the Argentine goal orbit at any moment; and was held the slightest bit off his course only by reckless and spectacular play hardly less marvelous than his own.

Never before had an International final been so bitterly, so madly, fought; through the fifth, sixth, and seventh chukkers the score remained a deadlock, and the furious pace was maintained until the spectacle on the field blurred for the tensely wrought spectators into a streaking race of frenzied dervishes and insane ponies.

Into the eighth and last chukker they swept. Ech player had a fresh mount for this last desperate attempt; but it seemed incredible that the men themselves could live through another seven and a half minutes of such wild play without dropping from their saddles. But the blood of the Spartans lives today—if at all—in the fibre of polo thoroughbreds, men and ponies.

Then Ranny flamed! An encouraging shout from Stivner, once when the play thundered near the side board acted as a powder match.

He felt suddenly bitterly sick of the selfishness of this great man, whose paramount thought evidently was upon his wager.

He felt sick of Abner Gratman, the sneaking interloper.

He felt sick of Joan, the wife who thought so little of him that she could sit and flirt with a sissy runt while her husband played a man's part on a man's field.

He would show them something—one and all! Then he would smash the ball at Abner's head, if he were within shot, and then go away to Patagonia or Petrograd or some place and join a revolution. If there were no revolutions, he'd make one.

Swish—crack! The echo of his clean, strong hit tinkled on the crisp autumn air; and before it died away it was taken up and blended with the pounding beats of Judy's flying hoofs.

The Argentine defense concentrated upon him. But if the nimble and infinitely sagacious little Judy had been coated with grease, she could not have slipped more easily in and out between the straining opponents at the veriest touch of Ranny's spurs.

It was a weird, miraculous exhibition. A man and his pony acting as one indivisible unit!

Blocked by the full brunt of the Argentine team from a straight rally, Ranny deftly dribbled the ball zig-zag across the field—always just out of the reach of the Argentine mallets; Judy always slipping by just a hairbreadth from the Argentine stirrups.

The crowd, realizing that it was witnessing the greatest individual rally in all the bright history of Long Island polo, forgot its etiquette inhibitions and went into an uproar more reminiscent of college football than of society's polo matches.

Dribble—Dribble! Smart, short hits, at unexpected angles; baffling turns. Always nearer and neafer to the Argentine goal; always nearer to a complete demoralization of the great Argentine team, whose defense was being slithered into smithereens by one man and one pony, who rode more like wraiths than like flesh and blood.

Now Ranny was back again on the side of the field where his sedan was parked. He hustled the ball in a beautifully direct line down field just inside the board.

A wild-eyed Argentine ride and snorting pony loomed ahead. Ranny adroitly cut the ball past the defending mallet, deeper into the field, slid past with Judy, and—before the Argentine could wheel—crowded back towards the board, and tore on! on! on!

His swirling rush had left the other players, friend and foe alike, far behind now; and it had broken down at last the beautiful teamwork defense of the Argentines.

No one loomed ahead of him. Far off to Ranny's right the Argentine Captain was fleeing down the center of the field on a mad race to try and thrust himself and his pony in front of the goal and thus block Ranny's coming shot. But it was a hopeless errand. He could not expect to beat the ball to the papier mache posts. Ranny knew it. The crowd knew it. The tine Captain himself knew it. Yet on he pounded. That was the dauntless spirit of polo.

The moment for which Ranny, in his wile, had been directing his course, came. Without the slightest slackening of his whirlwind speed, he deliberately smashed the ball into the side board.

His sureness of stroke and purpose were as skilful as that of the most expert billiardist on a salon table. The ball caromed off, deep into the field, and rolled in a dead line and angle towards the Argentine goal, so that all there remained for Ranny to do now was to let Judy head in towards midfield, approaching the ball on his hitting side. Then it would be merely up to him to make a straight smash, so sure and simple that the greenest amateur could not dub it.

Judy knew what to do without any hint from her rider. Holding her nose low and whistling through it, she streaked after the ball.

Ranny upswung his mallet. The crowd was in a tempest. Even those portly or blase spectators who had stayed, up to this point, in their cars got out and excitedly crowded close to the board.

None of that enthralled multitude but was out of his car and on his toes, watching. None, that 's, except two, whose interest lay not in the outcome of Ranny's mallet brilliancy but in the fond lights of each other's eyes.

Out of the corner of his gleaming, triumphant, game-bound eyes Ranny saw these two just at the moment he veered in to make his killing shot. He was abreast of his sedan in that instant.

NORRIS TRIAL STARTS TO-DAY

Fort Worth Pastor Seems Least Concerned Of All Involved.

HEARING AT AUSTEN.

AUSTEN, Texas, Jan. 10.—The State of Texas will ask a jury to assess the death penalty against the Rev. J. Frank Norris, Fort Worth Fundamentalist pastor, who went to trial here this morning on a charge of murder for the admitted killing of D. E. Chipps, in the pastor's study, prosecution attorneys announced yesterday.

Self-defence will be relied upon by the Rev. Norris, it was indicated. He cancelled his plans to preach to his Fort Worth congregation last night. Slight illness was given as the cause.

Over 400 Summoned For Venire.

Up to Saturday night over 400 Travis County residents had been summoned for the special venire, out of which the jury is to be selected.

The trial is expected to rival the Scopes' evolution case in intensity of interest. Criminal District Attorney Judge James R. Hamilton was to call the case to trial at 10 o'clock. Both sides are in readiness.

"Only an act of God will now delay the trial," according to defence attorneys.

Selection of the jury will occupy two days or longer.

Both sides must go into the controversy between Norris and the Fort Worth city administration in seeking to establish the intents and purposes of the two men when Norris and Chipps met face to face in the pastor's study last July 17, at which meeting Chipps was shot and killed by Norris.

Norris will seek to prove that Chipps had been sent "to settle" with him for his fiery pulpit attacks on Mayor Meacham and others of the city.

Norris Is Cheerful.

The central figure of the momentous trial, the lithe, fiery-tongued young preacher, is apparently the least concerned of the hundreds of persons who have milled through the ancient court house. Norris is cheerful, smiling, as though the trial and grave charge were wholly impersonal.

Hundreds of his faithful congregation will gather here to witness the trial.

When told the State would demand the death penalty, Dr. Norris said: "This proves my contention that hate is written all over the State's case and that it was persecution, not prosecution."

The accused expressed "unflinching confidence" in the outcome of the trial and declared he wished to take the stand "to tell just what is back of this case."

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

CORINNE CAPTURES COMEDY CHARACTER.

Beautiful Star Wins New Honors in "Syncopating Sue," Coming Here To-Day.

Corinne Griffith, after several romantic productions, has gotten hold of another light comedy picture of the sort "Classified" made famous. The dainty Duse is due at the Regent to-day in "Syncopating Sue," which New York audiences are greeting as her most finished performance on the screen.

There were not many who disagreed when "Liberty" pronounced Corinne the most beautiful woman in the world. There will be few to challenge the advance reports that "Syncopating Sue" is one of the best pictures First National has released in this season of sensational screen hits.

Cast as a piano player in a music store when she "plugs" songs to attract the attention of well-known vaudeville artists, Corinne gives a wistful yet comic portrayal of a stage struck young flapper whose greatest desire is to see her name spelled out in the electric lights of Broadway.

Dancing and singing, in and out of snappy situations, mimicking, emoting, cutting up antics like the flapper she plays, Corinne handles this part with even more finesse than she showed in "Classified," which clinched her claim to highest histrionic honors.

Tom Moore plays the happy-go-lucky trap drummer in a Broadway cabaret, who is in love with the winsome "would-be." Marjorie Rambeau, well-known stage star; Rockcliffe Fellowes, Lee Moran, Joyce Compton and Sunshine Hart complete the cast. Richard Wallace, Hal Roach veteran, directed.

A relative of the real Frank Burgess upset the man's story, pointing out that Frank had only nine toes. The relative identified the man as Lewis Burgess, a cousin of Frank.

"Better take this pipe out," commented Mr. Bruce just before the shutter clicked, and with that he removed the familiar briar pipe that has accompanied him from Australia to the United States and to Canada. Also shown is Mrs. Bruce. The Duke and Duchess of Manchester, two of the most picturesque and volatile figures in the British artistocracy, have reached an out of court agreement in their impending divorce action, it is rumored. The duchess — formerly Helena Zimmermann of Cincinnati—is shown at the left, with her daughter, and the duke is seen at the right. The duke is financially interested in some Quebec mines, which he visited about three years ago. His son, Lord Edward Montagu, sprang into the limelight last June when he suddenly "chucked" the position which he held as a student-farmer on a ranch in Alberta, and started for home, declaring that he was "fed up" on the treatment meted out to him. Later he returned to the ranch.

Theatre Seats Thousand And Has Four Doorways

The Laurier Palace Theatre bears the civic number, 1683 St. Catherine Street East. It has been in operation several years. It is a two-storey building with a stone and brick front. The seating capacity is about one thousand.

The orchestra seats about 800 persons, while there is a large gallery which fills the back of the house and runs on either side. The place has four exits, two at the front of the house into which lead the stairs from the balcony, and two at the side leading into a lane, with a sortie on Desery Street.

After the fire yesterday, the orchestra ceiling beneath the balcony was badly damaged, while the floor of the balcony was burned through in spots. The ceiling at the back of the balcony was also damaged by the flames and the glass in the windows fronting on St. Catherine Street were broken. The lower floor suffered severe damage by water.

HOSPITALS ARE

the smoke that filled them, he told a reporter his version of the story, which differed only in minor details from stories told by other survivors.

He had gone to the theatre alone, he said, and had taken a seat in the fourth row of the balcony, only a short distance from the projection room. The first intimation he received that the theatre was on fire was when he saw flames breaking through the floor in the aisle way immediately to his left. Almost at the same moment, he said, he could feel hot air blowing on him from the back, and as he turned he realized that fire was sweeping down on him from what he thought was the projection room. He was certain, however, that he had seen flames break through the floor of the aisle.

Theatre Filled With Smoke.

Others became aware of the fire at the same time, and in a moment the people in the balcony were in a panic and cries of fire precipitated a similar panic downstairs. Valee, with others, rushed for one of the two stairways leading from the balcony, and in doing so was caught in the mob that sought refuge from the smoke. The flames seemed to have died down, but the whole theatre was filled with smoke, and only the general trend of the crowd toward the stairways enabled young Valee to locate them. He finally reached the stairs on the left side of the balcony and stumbled down them just as firemen reached the building.

Valee milled about with the crowd and was finally pushed toward a hole which firemen had made in the wall, when they found it impossible to cope with the crowd that sought exit through the main door of the theatre. He finally gained the open air and was taken care of by one of the doctors of the hospital.

Asks For Parents.

On a cot opposite lay Jean Paul Paquet, aged 10. The little fellow was in some pain from a burn on his cheek, and he expressed great difficulty in breathing, but he forgot his pain to ask if his mother and father had got out all right. He was with them in the theatre when the fire broke out, but in the ensuing panic lost them, and had not heard from them since.

So far as he could tell the fire broke out in a corner of the balcony. From his description of the place, this was probably the projection room. His one idea, he said, was to gain the stairs to the left of the balcony, but he was pushed about by the crowd and did not find the stairway for some time. Eventually, however, he gained the head of the stairs, and, grasping the bannister with one hand and trying to brush the smoke from his eyes with the other, he started down. He had gone two steps when some one pushed him, and he fell under the feet of the mob. In this manner he reached the foot of the stairs and rolled about on the floor until he regained his feet after a time. Some one, thinking perhaps that his clothing had caught fire, turned a hose upon him, and his next conscious thought was when he was in an ambulance on his way to the hospital.

At the Montreal General Hospital there are:

S. Marsan, 13.
Fernand Combky, 13.
Eleanard Godon, 12.
Jerome Poirier, 10, who was able to go home at 8 o'clock last night.
Antoine Girouard, 16, who has two brothers receiving attention at the Notre Dame Hospital.
Ernest Forget, 26, of St. Jerome.

An added note of contrast is introduced in the flowers placed at the shoulder and hip closing. No. 1501 is for Misses and Small Women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"I see that you tumble," Cherry's crisp, sarcastic voice answered the piteous question in Faith's eyes. "Your little blue-eyed friend, Bob Hathaway, in person!"

Faith shielded her eyes with a trembling hand. Oh, it couldn't be Bob who would stoop so low as to blackmail a girl! Not Bob—her Bob!

"You look pretty sick, Faith. Can't I get you a drink of water or something?" Bill Warren's voice came to her dimly through the waves of nausea that poured over her.

"No," she shook her head. "Go on Cherry. What else? How did you happen to see so much?"

"I wish I hadn't told you a word," Cherry whimpered, cowering against Bill Warren like a child seeking comfort. "As I was telling you, Chris and I danced, until I was so hot that I begged him to take me out on the veranda. We noticed as we passed by our table to get my handbag that Handsome Harry, the sleuth, had disappeared. Well, we went out on the veranda, and stood leaning against one of those rough log posts—not talking, just—just looking at the moon."

She flushed under the gaze of Faith's accusing, painfilled brown eyes. Faith had a sudden picture of that scene as it must have been enacted.

"Yes?" she whispered, as Cherry paused.

"Well, then someone bumped his head right under our feet. You know the veranda there is not quite high enough from the ground for a man to stand up under it. We heard someone say 'damn!' and I recognized Bob Hathaway's voice instantly. So did Chris. We kept real still for a minute, then Chris vaulted over the bannister and dropped to the ground.' It isn't enclosed under the veranda, you know, and he saw Bob and this Handsome Harry talking together. The sleuth was giving him a piece of paper.

"When Bob saw Chris he pocketed the scrap of paper and said, 'Hello, Wiley!' as cool as a cucumber. Chris answered him, and then came back up on the veranda by way of the steps. We beat it then, and by the time we were a quarter of a mile from the cabin, Handsome Harry's flivver was rattling along behind us."

"When did you join Bill?" Faith asked in a flat, dull voice.

"Oh, don't spoil this story by beating me to my climaxes," Cherry laughed. "Like a little fool, I'd told Chris all about the anonymous letters, and he got it into his bean that the only thing for us to do was to elope tonight. He's still got that marriage license parked in his vest pocket—"

"Marriage license!" Faith echoed, staring at Cherry in bewilderment.

"Oh, sure, he took out a marriage license about two months ago, over in Marlboro county, where he's got a cousin in the license bureau, who promised Chris not to record it until he gave the word. He's always flashing it on me, like he did tonight. He can't get it through his bean that I'm going to marry Mr. Cluny, and—well, he tried the same old stunt again. Tried to abduct me. Stepped on the gas and lost Handsome Harry in about two minutes, then burnt up the road toward Marlboro. Imagine it! Me trying to grab the wheel away from him, and yelling my head off, not when any car was close to us, you understand, but just to scare him and make him behave. If he hadn't turned the car over on that hairpin curve—"

"Turned the car over?" Faith gasped. "Oh, darling, were you hurt?"

"Gee, you're a riot, Faith! A wow!" Cherry chuckled. "Neither of us was hurt a bit, but you ought to see the car! I jumped and Chris slid to the bottom of the car out from under the steering wheel. When I heard him scrambling out and swearing, I knew he wasn't hurt a bit, and I began to run down the road. I looked back over my shoulder, just to make sure, you know, and there was Chris, walking around and around the car, and I staggered on with the one big idea—to get away from there!"

"Then I came along," Bill Warren grinned at Faith reassuringly. "I'd been over to the Marlboro Country Club to a dinner dance, and as the girl lives in Marlboro, I was driving home alone. I thought I must be bughouse or something when my headlights picked up Cherry, running like a two-year-old in a steeplechase. It was one time the infant was glad to see old Bill, huh?" His hand ruffled Cherry's short, red-gold curls with affectionate familiarity.

"You said a mouthful!" Cherry tweaked his nose impudently. "And so we are here. Now, I ask you—isn't that a hot story? But what do you think of Bob, Faith? It does prove something, doesn't it?—his pow-wowing with the sleuth under the veranda, I mean? Aw, honey," her voice was suddenly warmly sweet and contrite. "I wish I hadn't told you, but I thought you ought to know. You look as if you'd been sick a month, honestly! He's not worth it, darling. Don't waste any more sleep over him."

"All right, then," Faith smiled wanly. "I'll go to bed, and stop wasting sleep right now. Thank you, Bill, for bringing Cherry home. It will make it much easier for Cherry as far as Dad's concerned. Good night."

In bed, however, Faith found that she could not obey Cherry's sisterly advice to waste no more sleep over Bob Hathaway. The letters had undoubtedly come out of his office, written either by him or his stenographer.

His stenographer! Why hadn't she thought of that before? She sat up in bed, resting her tired head on her knees and staring into the darkness. His stenographer had done it without his knowledge, paid to blackmail Cherry into jilting old man Cluny by some unscrupulous member of the Cluny family. Of course! She began to sob with relief. But—how had a stenographer known so much about Cherry? And why had Bob Hathaway met the "sleuth" clandestinely?

At last she did go to sleep, but only after she had determined to face Bob Hathaway with the damaging evidence against him which Cherry had accumulated.

(To be continued.)

YOUR HOME AND YOU

If you have young children the chances are that you frequently reprove them for appearing with unwashed faces. Most mothers are quite outspoken in this matter. "John, your face is dirty," you say at the luncheon table—or when Molly starts to school you reprovingly tell her that you don't believe she has washed her face. It would be quite a shock to know that even when your child's face shows smudges it may be cleaner than your own. The face skin of children is very smooth and close grained and does not absorb the soot and grime, while most adults have larger pores and oilier skins. Even when you have washed your face in the usual way it may still retain a good deal of grime.

If you have ever had reason to believe that the use of soap was injurious to your face this has probably been because you have not washed the soap off sufficiently. You should use the soap freely, rubbing in the lather with your fingers and a soft cloth—not piping hot water, but water that is comfortably warm. After that the soap should be carefully rinsed off. It may be that your face needs a cleansing cream. This should be applied five minutes before the soaping process is begun.

NEW WAYS WITH OLD POTATOES

Russian Sour Cream Potatoes.—With a French potato scoup make potato balls, saving what remains to cook and use later for potato salad or scalloped potatoes. Put the balls into a pan with water to cover and a little salt and cook until done, but not broken. Drain the water off and add butter. For a pound of potato balls to begin with you will need two tablespoons of butter. Add also a tablespoon of flour, and a half cup of rich, sour cream. Now place over a gentle fire and let cook, shaking the pan occasionally until well blended.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

1-10

Pleated ruffles cover the entire skirt of this little frock of red crepe de chine, trimmed with gold embroidery on collar and cuffs.

* * *

Word is going the round that fashions are to be, shall be, must be more feminine. Supposedly women are getting tired of frocks of severe, mannish simplicity. Men—we are told—like to see women dressed in dainty feminine things. The dressmakers seem to feel that it would be to their advantage to revive very feminine fashions—so they have racked their brains to recall all the frilly, fussy feminine fashions they could think of and they have scattered these things generously over the new frocks they have been making.

But take all this talk about a revival of feminine fashions only for what it is worth. Don't imagine that you will see any marked change in the new clothes for spring. There are women who simply cannot be weaned away from the simple, easy-to-wear clothes they have become accustomed to. On the other hand, if you are one of the women who really yearn to wear ruffles and frills, flounces and furbellows—then here's your chance.

The ruffle is a trimming device that has been much neglected of late. All women used to wear ruffles as a matter of course—ruffles on their petticoats, ruffles on their nightgowns, ruffles on their negligees, sleeve ruffles and neck ruffles. Some of these ruffles have been brought to light again. Ruffled lace may be seen on some of the newest net collar and cuffs sets. Whatever you may think of ruffles as such, you will have to admit that these dainty ruffles near the neck and wrists are very becoming.

Jenny among French dressmakers seems to see great possibilities for the ruffle—and she manages to make use of it without losing that simplicity of design for which her gowns are noted. She has recently been making little taffeta frocks with skirts entirely covered with inch wide-pleated ruffles. Some of the dressmakers have been showing little ruffles of chiffon. Sometimes they are simply gathered or shirred and sometimes the ruffling is produced by tiny pin tucks extending part way down the ruffle. When the ruffle is pleated as in the frock shown in the sketch the pleating is so handled that it actually assumes the outline of a ruffle—flaring out somewhat and not lying flat as is the case when the pleating assumes the form of a tier.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

FOOD AND FEAR

(By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.)

Oh, for a pied Piper who would pipe away all the foolish fads and fancies connected with fear!

It is amusing to reflect how easy it is to spread rumor and how comparatively difficult it is to broadcast fact. Even when the rumor is developed so that it takes on the guise of a half truth, it still holds possibilities for harm. History does not tell the name of the individual who first set going the rumor that tomatoes are harmful. History does, however, tell of a number of specialists who dismissed the tomato with damning faint praise. Best of all, history goes on to record that these same specialists are to-day teaching us that the tomato contains three of the first vitamins to be discovered, and that it is an invaluable food.

Then take the question of half truths. Able and conscientious workers showed us at one period that white flour had lost some of its valuable elements. The world had to wait for the sons and even grandsons of some of these individuals to learn that although white flour does lack certain elements, this lack may be made up by the addition of milk, fruit and vegetables to the diet. These later workers are then careful to instruct us that there are even certain conditions where white flour is to be prescribed, and where the dark flours may do actual harm.

Fear them, whether in the realm of dietetics or some other, may frequently be traced to rumors and half truths. We should be careful to cultivate the power to discriminate between this foolish and harmful fear about food and a wholesome fear that keeps us from disobeying the laws of nutrition. Many persons in normal health are prone to fall victims to the first type of fear. They realize that they need not take special care of their diet beyond that which insures them normal nutrition. In their zeal, however, to follow these laws, they may have got hold of one or more rumors, and fear is at their heels. They may not only deprive themselves of nutritious food, but they are almost certain to interfere with the proper digestion of food that they do eat, so subtle and so insidious is the ondaught of fear.

If we are, as the children would say, "afraid" of some one food, our sensible course of action is that advocated by the psychologists.

Once let us walk boldly up to some pet fear and we shall acquire the information necessary to help us in bracing up, we shall find that there is nothing to be "afraid" of. To revert to the illustration of the tomato, all he has to do if he is "afraid" of a food, is to seek some one who knows the facts. Facts about food are fundamentally necessary to our mental equipment as are facts about any other important item of our daily lives. Let us not obscure these facts with fears.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR TUESDAY JANUARY 11 1927.

Benefic aspects dominate this day, according to astrology. There is one strong adverse influence.

There is a good sign for educators who are to command even more attention than they have in the past.

This is a stimulating day for brain workers. Editors and writers should benefit.

Lawyers now come under a direction of the stars which promises much fame as well as money. Much important litigation is indicated.

An international incident is to bring world attention to one or two American members of the bar, it is foretold.

This is not a favorable rule for women and children who should especially safeguard their health.

An epidemic has been foretold and it should be prevented from spreading, if possible, at this time when it probably will make its first appearance, the seers warn.

This is read as rather an unlucky wedding day since one party to the marriage contract is likely to be domineering and dictatorial.

For the Pacific coast as well as the Atlantic coast unusual storms are prognosticated and San Diego may suffer severely.

Increase in travel around the world is foretold and this winter will bring out more tourists than in any previous season, if the stars are to be believed.

Railways should benefit, for there will be many who patronize excursions as well as armies of men who make commercial trips.

Restlessness will be prevalent among men and women and this is said to be a sign of coming events that causes tremendous changes in national affairs.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year into which come many unexpected pleasures.

Children born on this day probably will enjoy rarest good luck all through life. They must be trained to avoid vanity and egotism.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

SAMUEL F. B. MORSE, LUCRETIA WALKER AND SARAH GRISWOLD

(Copyright, 1927, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Samuel F. B. Morse, the inventor of the telegraph, was by profesion, at least until his invention was given to the world, a portrait painter, and in this capacity he found himself once in Washington, painting a portrait of General Lafayette which was ordered by the City of New York. From amidst the gaieties of the capital, Morse wrote this light-hearted letter to his wife, not knowing the tragedy that was taking place at his home, even as he penned these lines:

". . . I am making progress with the General but I am much perplexed for want of time. He is so harassed with visitors and has so many letters to write that I find it exceedingly difficult to do the subject justice. I give him the last sitting in Washington to-morrow. . . . I have gone on thus far to my satisfaction and do not doubt that I shall succeed entirely if I am allowed the requisite number of sittings. The General is very agreeable. He introduced me to his son by saying: 'This is Mr. Morse, the painter, the son of the geographer; he has come to Washington to take the topography of my face.' . . . I have little room in this letter to express my affection for my dearly loved wife and children; but of that I need not assure them. I long to hear from you. . . ."

Before this letter had reached its destination, another one, from his father, had crossed it:

"My affectionately beloved son: Mysterious are the ways of providence. My heart is pained and deeply sorrowful while I announce to you the sudden and unexpected death of your dear and deservedly loved wife. . . ."

So ended a beautiful romance between Morse and his young wife, who was Lucretia Walker. In time, however, pain of his loss was dulled and Morse married Sarah Griswold and his feelings toward his second wife are shown in this letter, written during the period when litigations against those who were set on pirating his invention, embittered him:

". . . If I can bring Sarah down with me I will, to spend Christmas, but the weather may change and prevent that. What weather! I am working on the lawn as if it were spring. You have no idea how lovely a spot this is. Not a day passes that I do not feel it. If I have troubles abroad I have peace and love and happiness at home. My sweet wife I find indeed a rich treasure. Uniformly cheerful and most affectionate, she makes sunshine all day. God's gifts are worthy of the giver."

Morse's life-long interest in the study of chemistry and his acquaintance with Prof. Freeman Dana, a lecturer on the electro-magnet, brought about his invention of the telegraph.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

ARE FATHER'S PARENTS?

Strictly legally, father is considerably a parent. In fact, up till a very short while ago he was the only parent legally recognized as having judgment and authority.

But to-day, when any lambkin seems to be straying from the path of prescribed righteousness or breaks into the public print in an undesirable way, mother comes in for all the blame.

Take a certain young girl who married a certain rich old man and became ridiculously notorious—with the usual unhappy results. Wherever this case was discussed, someone was sure to condemn her mother. "It was all her mother's fault," became almost a chorus.

And no one seemed to remember that the girl had a father. But she certainly had. And, according to all the traditions of his sex, his judgment and authority should have been infinitely superior to her poor ignorant mother's.

When we hear horrible statistics about youthful criminals, publicists always deplore the laxity of their mothers. If mother had done her duty, such and such could never have happened. Mothers' clubs, mother's bobbed hair, mother's short skirts, mother's poor home-making are all brought into condemnation. A male teacher in a certain high school recently told his students that women's clubs, which took mothers out of the home, were responsible for youthful wildness—and my young son came home and retailed it to me with infinite glee! (I managed to make it pretty clear that that alibi would not work at our home! That it was pretty rotten bad form for a fellow to blame his mother, instead of accepting his own responsibility.)

In fact, we can see for ourselves that father is not really regarded as a parent at all. He is just a business or professional men who may or may not adequately support his family. He is at best the male provider round the house. He may have responsibilities regarding the family, but they don't have a thing to do with the children's moral and spiritual upbringing. Once in a while we hear some ardent publicist recommend the old lickings that father used to give the boys behind the barn—so when he is recognized as a parent at all it is only in a punitive guise. Not a guide, philosopher and friend in everyday life, but merely an instrument of vengeance, the black bogey who administers the punishment if mother did not prove a super-genius at instilling complete virtue.

If I were a father I think I should resent this attitude. I don't think I could be such a poor sport as to let mother shoulder all the parental responsibility—and particularly all the blame. And I am dead sure I would resent being a mere instrument for punishment. I simply cannot imagine permitting mother to be publicly condemned and myself ignored, because I had shirked my half of the responsibility towards my offspring. I wonder?

The next time you hear someone condemning some poor mother, just rise up and ask if the lambkins did not also have a father. The effect is amusingly startling. Great Scott, is somebody trying to drag father in as a responsible parent? How novel! Yet those same staggering statistics anent juvenile crime reveal an extraordinary lack of widowed mothers! A high majority of these youthful sinners have fathers!

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SNOW PICNIC

(By Howard R. Garis.)

Just as Uncle Wiggily was getting ready to hop away from his hollow stump bungalow one morning, to look for an adventure, the rabbit gentleman heard a jolly little laugh outside his door.

"I hope that isn't the Skillery Scallery Alligator laughing because he thinks he is going to nibble my ears," thought Uncle Wiggily to himself. "If it is I'd better not go out right away."

"It isn't the Alligator," spoke Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, looking from the window. "It's some of the Wogglejig children from the Bungleump of Boppy and Um, next door. And they have a sled with -thing on it."

"That is very kind of you," said the rabbit.

-one has the sled—Boppy and Um?" asked Mr. Longears.

"No, the Wogglejigs," answered the muskrat lady. "And they seem to be having some joke, for they are laughing hard."

When Uncle Wiggily opened the door there stood Dazie, Mazie and Gazie Wogglejig, the little wooden girls, with Bumple, Wumple and Bumple, their wooden brothers. Bright red, blue, green, yellow and white were the queer Wogglejigs. Gay colors, indeed!

"We have brought you an apple pie, Uncle Wiggily," said Gazie.

"It is one our mother Um made yesterday for our daddy Boppy," said Bumple.

"But why bring it to me?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "Of course, it is very kind of you. But I saw Um make that pie. even told her how to turn herself into a rolling pin to flatten out the crust. She was so sure Boppy would like the first pie she ever made. And now you bring it to me I don't understand!"

Just then Um, the little wooden woman, called across the garden from the door of the Bungleump where she stood, saying:

"It's all right, Uncle Wiggily. I sent the pie I made yesterday over to you. Wasn't I silly! I forgot that Boppy, being made of wood, never eats. Neither do I. Neither do the Wogglejigs, except once in a while. We never eat pies or anything else, and as I know you and the little bunnies do, I sent you the apple pie I made."

"That is very kind of you," said the rabbit gentleman. "I can make good use of that pie. All my little bunny children have gone to school. But I will hop along and at recess I will make a snow picnic for them. I will give them some pieces of the apple pie you made for Boppy."

"And we'll watch them eat it," said Gazie Wogglejig.

"It will not make us hungry, either," added Wumple. "For we couldn't eat any if we wanted to; not to-day."

Uncle Wiggily took the pie off the sled on which the wooden Wogglejigs had pulled it to his bungalow, and then Gazie and her sisters and brothers hurried on to the Hollow Stump School so the Lady Mouse Teacher would not mark them late.

After Uncle Wiggily had twinkled his pink nose a while, he took the large apple pie under his paw and started to hop over the fields and through the woods.

"Where are you going?" bleated Uncle Butter, the goat gentleman, who was skiddering along to buy his wife a pot of paste to make a rice pudding.

"I am going to have a little snow picnic for the children of the Hollow Stump School," answered the rabbit.

"A snow picnic!" bleated the goat. "It won't be any fun eating snow."

"They aren't going to eat snow!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "They are going to eat this fine apple pie Um made for Boppy, but which the little wooden man can't eat. And the little boy and girl animals will play about in the snow after they eat the pie. That will be a snow picnic."

"I see!" said Uncle Butter jiggling his chin whiskers.

It was recess when Uncle Wiggily reached the Hollow Stump School, and when the Lady Mouse Teacher had cut the pie into many pieces, each pupil was given one to eat. Everything was going along nicely, and Uncle Butter said Uncle Wiggily's snow picnic was quite jolly, when, all of a sudden, along came the snippy old Bob Cat with his silly little tail.

"Oh, run! run!" cried the Lady Mouse Teacher "The Bob Cat will get you if you don't run!"

But Uncle Wiggily just reached in his piece of pie, took out an apple seed and he flipped that apple seed on the Bob Cat's nose so hard that the bad chap gave a howl, turned a somersault and away he ran over the snow. So he didn't harm any one and the snow picnic went along merrily.

But this teaches us that it is a good thing apples have seeds, that sometimes get into pies.

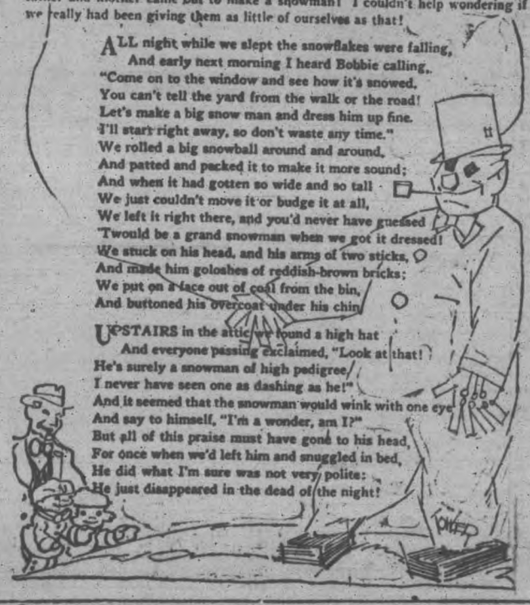
JOLLY JINGLES By Graham Hunter

The Snowman

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

MOST fathers and mothers take altogether too little time to enter into the play and interests of the children. A mother confessed to me, "You know I've always considered myself a good mother, as mothers go, but I had a shock the other day when, after much pleading on the part of the children, my husband and I went out to help build a snowman. We really had a wonderful time doing it. We laughed and played more than we had for months, and, do you know, I was positively ashamed when I saw how thrilled the children were to think that father and mother came out to make a snowman! I couldn't help wondering if we really had been giving them as little of ourselves as that!



ALL night while we slept the snowflakes were falling,
And early next morning I heard Bobbie calling,
"Come on to the window and see how it's snowed,
You can't tell the yard from the walk or the road!
Let's make a big snow man and dress him up fine.
I'll start right away, so don't waste any time."
We rolled a big snowball around and around,
And patted and packed it to make it more sound;
And when it had gotten so wide and so tall
We just couldn't move it or budge it at all,
We left it right there, and you'd never have guessed
'Twould be a grand snowman when we got it dressed!
We stuck on his head, and his arms of two sticks,
And made him goloshes of reddish-brown bricks;
We put on a face out of coal from the bin,
And buttoned his overcoat under his chin.

UPSTAIRS in the attic we found a high hat
And everyone passing exclaimed, "Look at that!
He's surely a snowman of high pedigree,
I never have seen one as dashing as he!"
And it seemed that the snowman would wink with one eye
And say to himself, "I'm a wonder, am I?"
But all of this praise must have gone to his head,
For once when we'd left him and snuggled in bed,
He did what I'm sure was not very polite:
He just disappeared in the dead of the night!

SHORT STORY

MISTAKES WILL HAPPEN

By Dorothy Douglas.

Nothing could have been simpler than the original error made by the newspaper man who had the stand at the corner of Broadway in the seventies. He had confused two of the books ordered by patrons and delivered them that morning to the wrong apartments.

Nancy Cromer received a recent novel entitled, "Heartstrings" in place of "Ever Ready" and Owen Stanley got the latter instead of the former.

And Nancy, being an omniverous reader, decided to gobble up as much of "Heartstrings" as she could before the mistake was rectified. The plot unfolding was fearfully exciting and the book itself was a gem of the binding art. Exquisite mauve leather with letterings of old silver. The author was a new one even to Nancy's well-posted brain. She couldn't recall having read anything by Owen Stanley and knew it must be a first attempt.

"Stanley—Owen Stanley, you've got a small fortune and a reputation in 'Heartstrings,'" she thought. "Especially if one Nancy Cromer can persuade you to let her do the scenario for the films." Nancy was not really conceited but she knew her value as a writer. Her first two scenarios were undoubted successes.

And Owen Stanley, a trifle annoyed that the mistake had been made, wrapped up "Ever Ready" and took it back to the book stand. The lovely volume he had had especially bound was to be presented to Cora Masters, the young lady who he hoped would, accept him now that he had promise of being successful.

While Cora had not been wildly enthusiastic about his literary career she had not exactly discouraged him. Stanley felt quite reasonable hopes that his lovely mauve volume of "Heartstrings" would do the trick.

"You could get your own book if you just call at No. 19," the book man informed Stanley. "I'm sorry I mixed them up."

And Stanley, because he really wanted to see his brain child in its new mauve raiment, decided to stop and ask for it. He also took along the other book.

Nancy opened the door herself, the volume still in her hand.

"Oh, dear," she said when she caught sight of the book in her caller's hand, "I was hoping I could have finished this story before anyone came to get it. I couldn't sleep a wink if I didn't know how it ends."

"It must be an extraordinarily good tale," he said.

"It's one of the best I've read for ages," Nancy told him.

"Well—I don't want to be responsible for your losing sleep," said Stanley. "How long will it take you to finish it. Shall I call back about five?"

"Oh!" breathed Nancy gratefully, "it's too good of you. I will give you a cup of tea and toasted muffins when you come."

Stanley grinned his thanks and went off. His footsteps were light. Such praise as had been his was worth any amount of advertising. Somehow his heart beat less strenuously in the direction of Cora.

He had a bite of lunch, and went back to his rooms.

His telephone rang.

"Is this Mr. Stanley," came a very nice feminine voice. "I am Nancy Cromer and would like to talk about your book, 'Heartstrings,' which has come to my notice in rather unusual circumstances. I was wondering if you have placed the film rights."

"Well, not exactly—though there are some dickerings going on."

"I do so want to make the scenario it's the chance of my life. I've done two—'Tiger's Teeth' and 'Shallow Hearts'—and they've both gone well."

"That's rather a tall order, considering I don't know you."

"I was hoping," suggested the girl, "that you could come over and get acquainted with me. I don't live far away—just at No. 19 on your street."

It didn't take a Napoleonic brain to figure out that the girl to whom his book had been delivered by mistake and this fair one of the telephone were one and the same. He had a sudden but definite feeling that he would never propose to Cora.

"I could run over about five," he said and smiled to himself.

"Oh, dear, I have an engagement at five. Could you come about five-thirty?"

Stanley agreed, pleased that she desired to have her tea alone with the man who had asked for the return of his book.

They had a splendid tea time, chatting about things in general but mostly finding one another decidedly the very nicest person in the world. And not having thought about names or anything so commonplace Stanley took his departure promptly at five-thirty with his mauve-bound book in his pocket.

He went down in the elevator then dashed up the stairs again so as not to be a minute late for his five-thirty appointment.

Opening the door Nancy smiled. "Did you forget anything?" she asked.

"Why no," said Stanley, "I have an engagement with Nancy Cromer to talk over scenario rights to my book. I suppose you don't want to break it." And he stepped in, laughing like a young boy at his own foolishment.

"Oh, is it really true?" gasped Nancy. "How lovely."

Cora did not get the book bound in mauve.

It's Better Because It's Canadian

C-1227

AS a climax to the most outstanding automobile success of recent years, Chevrolet announces the greatest triumph in its history—

—a complete line of cars, mechanically finer, entirely new in line, contour and color, and offering elements of style, distinction and elegance hitherto undreamed of in the low-priced field:

Here are new bodies of beautiful lines—brilliant in their modi... new Duco colors—irresistible in their distinguished smartness—and outstanding in that individuality and perfection of silhouette regularly associated with costly custom-built creations.

Here are score upon score of advancements in design—a new and massive radiator shell—full-crown fenders—bullet-type head lamps and cowl lamps—new, heavier running board—new gasoline gauge—new A.C. Oil Filter—new A.C. Air Cleaner—Co-incidental ignition and steering lock—new, luxurious upholsteries—new sliding seat in the Coach model—new large steering wheel—and many others too numerous to mention.

But, however complete—however enthusiastic—no mere description of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History can adequately portray the new measure of individuality and style it brings into the field of the low-priced car. This can only be gained by inspection of the cars themselves.

So, we urge you to visit our show-rooms. And we ask you to come in anticipation of the revelation you would expect when the World's largest builder of gear-shift automobiles announces the Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History, at the Lowest Prices for which Chevrolet has ever been sold in Canada.

ROGERS HORNSBY WILL RECEIVE $80,000 ON TWO YEAR CONTRACT

New Giant Quickly Comes To Terms at New Price.

NAMED CAPTAIN.

Ranks Next to Ruth as the Highest Priced Player.

NEW YORK, Januar, 10 — Rogers Hornsby on Saturday signed a two-year contract with the New York Giants, after a conference with Manager John J. McGraw in the club's West Forty-second street offices.

While the terms were not made public, it is understood that the former manager of the world's champion Cardinals will receive close to $40,000 a year. If this sum is right he will be the second highest-paid player in baseball. Only Babe Ruth of the Yankees draws more than that, and his contract, which expired at the end of the 1926 season called for $52,000. Hornsby's cantract with St. Louis called for 30,000 a year.

Hornsby also was made captain of the Giants, McGraw announced. The captaincy was held last year by Frankie Frisch, who was deposed after he left the Giants in St. Louis late in the season. His place as captain was taken by Travis Jackson, who held the berth until the close of season. Frisch who was traded by the Giants to St. Louis for Hornsby, is reported to have receive an offer of the job of captaining Cardinals next season under the managership of Catcher Bob O'Farrell.

On Way Back Home.

The Giants' new second baseman departed on Saturday for St. Louis, where he plans to stay, save for a trip here in February, until the opening of the Spring training season t Sarasota late in February.

Both McGraw and Hornsby were very much pleased to get the contract cleared up. McGraw said that there has been no trouble at all in reaching terms. Hornsby already was bound to the Giants at $30,000 a year by the terms of the contract St. Louis had with Hornsby and which was assumed by the Giants when McGraw traded Frisch for the St. Louis star. This co tract with a year to run was scrapped at the start of the conference and the new one drawn up.

After the Spring training season Hornsby plans to make his home in this city, he said yesterday. He wanted to make the change at once but cannot lease his home in St. Louis until the Spring.

The fact that Hornsby and McGraw arrived at terms so quickly was not a surprise. The new Giant came here on Friday in response to a telegram from McGraw and indicated at once that he had achieved one of his ambitions—that of becoming a Giant.

Won the First Pennant.

Hornsby, however, would have preferred to stay in St. Louis had conditions been right since he felt a natural pride in the fact that he had won th firs pennant for the Cardinals—the first for St. Louis in 38 years, in fact.

However, he acted as manager of the Cardinals for two years at his players' salary, albetit this was one of the largest paid any baseball player. After the Cards had defeated the Yankees in the world's series he asked for a three year contract at $50,000 a year and thus precipitated a controversy with Owner Sam Breadon of the Cardinals.

Several years ago, when it seemed likely that Hornsby could be purchased, McGraw had offered $250,000, and at that time declared that he believed Hornsby to be the most valuable baseball player in the business. His offer was not accepted nor was the later one of $285,000 made by the late Charles H. Ebberts of the Brooklyn Robins, Breadon refusing the highest price ever offered for a player.

No Money Involved.

When it became known this Winter that Hornsby was not likely to come to terms in St. Louis, McGraw quickly made an offer he knew would appeal to Breadon—one involving the trading of Frisch.

According to McGraw and Breadon there was no money involved in trade that brought Rogers to Giants for Frisch, but this generally is scouted by baseball men who consider the previous high value placed on Hornsby.

Hornsby started his baseball career 12 years ago and cost the St. Louis club $500. His first salary with the Cardinals is said to have been only $1800. Two years ago, or ten years after his start. Hornsby signed for three years with the Cardinals at $30,000 a year.

TWEED DEFEATS MADOC AT HOME

Fast Game Won By Tweed Scoring Three in the First Period.

SCORE 4-2.

MADOC, Jan. 8.—Madoc rink saw first game this season of the Hastings County League when Tweed and Madoc engaged in a fast hockey game, resulting in a score of 4-2 in favor of Tweed.

For some minutes in the first period it looked as if no goals would be scored, both sides working hard but unable to score. Then Blue brought forth enthusiastic cheers by making the first shot for Madoc and a few minutes after M. Geraldi did the same for Tweed. The period ended 1-1.

The second period saw a good deal of long shooting. Both sides played with snap and vim, and the goalies were kept busy. Toward the end of the period Watson, who had been keeping Tweed goalie, Wagar, on the keen look-out for some time, succeeded in putting one past him and brought home the bacon for Madoc. The period ended 2-1 in favor of Madoc.

The third period opened with much enthusiasm and grim determination on the part of both teams. The play was carried repeatedly to Madoc's goal, and at last Tweed succeeded in scoring. Madoc goalie, C. Wallbridge, who did fine work in the first two periods, seemed a bit off color in this last inning, and was drawn out twice more by G. Geraldi, who scored the last two shots for Tweed. While Madoc was leading at the end of the second period, these three shots brought the game to a close in favor of Tweed.

A fairly large crowd attended the game in spite of the zero weather, which drove everybody into the stores between periods.

The line-up:

Referee—N. Jackson of Peterboro.

MAROONS GO BACK TO OLD FORM TO WHITEWASH BOSTON BRUINS

Score in Every Period and Are Unbeatable in Defence.

FAST HOCKEY.

Victory Gives Them 2 To 1 Edge Over Bruins Throughout Season.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 10 (Canadian Press)—The Montreal Maroons were back in form Saturday night to defeat the ambitious Boston Bruins in a National Hockey League fixture here, 3-0. Maroons scored in every period and were unbeatable on defence. Their victory gives them a two-to-one edge on the Bruins in games played between the two clubs this season.

Bruins were in good fettle, and carried the attack for most of the playing time, but could not beat a rejuvenated Benedict and a determined Montreal defence. After Stewart scored in the first period, the Maroons resorted to defensive hockey, and waited for the breaks. Any luck there was Saturday night was with the visitors. Montreal's second goal was on an individual dash by Noble, while Carson added the third in the final period.

The Bruins labored incessantly to pierce the Maroon defence, often leaving their own goal unguarded. Both Stewart and Carson capitalized the fact in making their tallies. Several times Bruins had an open net to shoot at, but the shots were wide or Benedict luckily got in front of them. The crowd of ten thousand disapproved of the Maroons defensive tactics but they were effective. Although the history of the two teams had led to expectation of a rough game, the play was rugged but fairly clean. Referees O'Hara and Laflamme clinched down on frightfulness in the first period inflicting light minor penalties, and the lesson was learned.

There was one penalty in the second session and none in the third. Hitchman of Boston had three terms on the bench.

Boston's new men, Frederickson and Meekins, performed creditably For the Maroons Oatman also did diligent and useful work.

Bruins opened a fierce attack from the face off, the flying forwards swarmed through repeatedly, testing Benedict severely. Broadbent took an early penalty for tripping and this made things no better for the lanky Maroon goalie, but they were all even again without score and then Nelson Stewart led an attack that won first blood for the visitors.

Batching Boston with three men up the ice Stewart secured and dished down, Siebert and Broadbent close behind, the latter's shot was blocked but Stewart drove in the rebound. The time was 4:18.

Bruins went madly into the onslaught again, Hitchman was benched for a crude trip. As he returned to the ice he graplied with Munro and both were put away. Shore, diving in on the Maroon goal, was tripped as he was about to shoot. Carson charged in on Doc Stewart and missed by inches. It was fast and rough work now. All the reserves were given a chance in turn.

Dutton was banished for rough work aginst the boards. Bruins ringed the Maroon defence and rained shots on Benedict. The opportunity went by. Cleghorn roughed Munro and was sent away. Dutton evened the squads by taking a penalty for dumping Shore.

Then Munro charged Short and went away. Maroons were two men short. Brilliant stops by Benedict staved off disaster for the Maroons at this stage. The exiles came back before anything happened.

Bruins were carrying the attack when the strenuous period ended.

It was listless for a minute or two as the second session began but the Maroons quickly added the spice. There were a few desultory exchanges, and then Noble secured in Maroon territory, foxed the Bruin defence and got right in on Stewart to score. It was a great piece of individual work. The time was 1:53.

The breaks were with the visitors just after that when Fredrickson, Stuart and Oliver got in on Benedict. Over eager shooting and luck helped the Maroon goalie out as the shots rained in.

Maroons, with Carson, Phillips and Oatman in the game turned the tables for a time with a swift, driving attack, and Doc Stewart rose to the occasion, saving some dangerous attempts. Herberts was warned for free use of the body, Hitchman threw Munro and took his third penalty.

Maroons were unable to pierce Boston's defence while Bruins were short handed. Later, Coutu broke through on Benedict and had an open goal, but the tall Maroon goalie lay down and smothered the shot. It was a close call but luck had been with Maroons thus far. Shore was playing a star game for Boston, charging time and again on the Maroon defence, but Noble and Munro stopped him beyond the danger line. The Montreal defense was working better than in the earlier period. Bruins were held powerless until the bell ended a period that went to the Maroons by a wide margin.

Boston started its first string stalwarts in the third period and made a fierce effort to even things up while Maroons were content to defend their goal area. The crowd jeered as the Montreal players lifted the puck down the ice. Benedict had some close calls as Bruins at times broke through the Maroon cordon. It wasn't much of a spectacle at this stage, however.

But the Bruins' policy proved their undoing, as the squad thronged about the Maroon goal, Carson got away and was down the ice before Boston could follow him and Stewart was all alone but saved the shot. The rebound beat him, however. Time 8:56.

Maroons reverted to defence with a clear lead of three goals. It was a rough party again but the officials were lenient. Cleghorn and Munro mixed it back of Simmons net without penalty. Broadbent was through but Doc Stewart lay down to block his shot. Benedict made a great save with his pads when Herberts broke through for a close in try. Galbraith drove in another, but it was a smart stick stop. The Maroon goalie was back in his best form tonight. As the period waned the Bruins wore themselves out driving on the Montreal defence. They hurdled sticks and charged fearlessly, but it was of no avail. It was Montreal's night.

The summary:

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

Dempsey was then the champion, undisputed. He took on about a dozen fellows, including Joe Heiser, Jim Fell, Jim Barry, Joe Hennessey, Tom Sullivan, Bill Dacey and others. Most of them went out in two or three rounds.

Dempsey was the pride of the neighborhood. He mingled with the big sports of the Bowery and made a little money. None of it went to his head. He tried to induce me to leave the cooper shop and fight, too.

Then Harry Fuljames came along. He was a bull dog type. Short, stocky. He came from Canada and so impressed Marty Malone, a big New York gambler, that a challenge with a $5000 side bet was hurled.

After a lot of scrapping Dempsey finally got enough money to meet the challenge. The fight was held in Rye, N.Y., but few of us had enough money left to make the trip.

We heard nothing from Dempsey for nearly a week and then, suddenly one day he showed up at the cooper shop and what a sight!

His hands were all battered and broken. His face was a mass of bruises and discolorations. He had been pounded unmercifully and he was ready to quit the ring, he said, dejectedly. He had won the fight all right but the price he had to pay in pain and suffering was too high.

He disappeared entirely shortly after.

We did not hear of him for some time and then word leaked out to us he was a manager in Billy Madden's saloon on Thirteen Street in New York.

Every saloon in those days had a boxing hall and a "house fighter" and the rivalry was pretty keen.

Dempsey was the hero of Madden's place, beating all comers for $25 a week. He was dressed like a duke in a three-button cutaway, white vest, high hat and all the trimmings.

"I'm getting $25 a week here and hardly dirtying my hands," he said to me proudly. "I'd have to slave to make $10 a week as a cooper."

I wondered as he was talking if such fortune would ever fall to me. He must have sensed my thoughts for he patted me on the back and said, "Don't worry, I'll get you a job as house fighter and just think—you can make $25 a week, too!"

Note: In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how he wangered into the back end of a saloon and won his first fight—and how his manager took all of his first purse, $20.

FIST FIGHTING FEATURES GAME WITH SENATORS

Highly-Pitched Crowd Watch Ottawa Snatch Washout From Montreal.

SCORE IN FIRST.

Are Unable To Cope Against Smooth Work of the Senators.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press).—Written apologies from an overwrought spectator who struck Hec. Kilrea, Ottawa substitute; match penalties and automatic suspensions—the first of the National Hockey League season—for Aurel Joliat and Hooley Smith for a two-round bout which threatened to develop into an affair of serious proportions until Chief of Police Belanger suddenly cooled the two gamecocks off with a warning that they would be landed somewhere else than a penalty box if they did not desist, and a 2-0 triumph for the Ottawa Senators over the Canadiens were the direct results of the explosive hockey staged at the Forum between the two teams Saturday night.

Twelve thousand ardent hockey fans, keyed to a high pitch in anticipation of a thrilling contest, were sent into a nerve-wracked state by the wildly exciting play and the side issue which were added as the tension broke and both players and spectators gave way to their feelings in two disgusting exhibitions.

The crowd was just short of the record for the Forum and just before the game time, President Calder of the N.H.L., sensing possibilities, pressed Dave Ritchie into service to assist Referee Hewitson. The first flare burned early. Aurel Joliat became annoyed with Frank Nigbor, who had tricked him in the first minute of play. Canadiens immediately after lost Gagne to the penalty box and, while he was off, Cy Denneny scored for Ottawa.

Hardly had the teams settled down after the goal than Joliat rushed with the puck. He was met by Hooley Smith. It appeared as if both were to blame for what happened. They started a polite joust with one another, which ended with the two having their sticks locked above their heads. They held there for a moment and started to break and it apeared as if the affair had died down. But in the break Joliat made a motion with his stick and, like a shot Smith landed a right to the point of Joliat's chin. Down went sticks and the pair went at it with fists. They went to the ice, with Smith on top and showering punches with a two-fisted action. Players swarmed from the benches and after a minute managed to separate the combatants and escort them to the penalty bench—still striving to get clear and start it again.

Smith climbed into the bench first. Joliat came along later and was about to climb over the rail when Smith promised him more when they returned to the ice again. Joliat wanted to settle it there and then. He leapt at the Ottawa player. Spectators in the vicinity grabbed Smith. Penalty-timer Andy Hamilton got the blow, his bench toppled and Andy took an unceremonious tumble out on to the ice, where his head and shoulders lay while his feet held him fast to the bench so that he was pinioned fast in the middle of the milling. Gus Bourrassa dropped his timer's watch and in trying to rescue it, was accused by Smith of twisting ears—a cast of mistaken identity. Chief of Police Belanger was sitting next to the timers and roared his warning, suggesting a different law than the hockey rule to handle the case. It was enough. In the meantime, Referee Hewitson was alongside ordering the two players out of the game.

Matters kept peppery and the hockey was dazzingly fast after this episode—so much so that it suggested that while the craze for rule alterations is on, somebody might as well point to the subsequent play, with its spectacular combination and fleet rushes as suitable proof that five-man is better than the six-aside. Canadiens launched attack after attack on the Ottawa goal. They dominated the aggressive play. Ottawa, with a rare confidence in their ability to nurse a one-goal lead, let Canadiens batter themselves into exhaustion. Then in the final period, with Canadiens all up on the attack, Finnegan slipped through to clinch the game with Ottawa's second goal.

In the dying moments of the game Ottawa appeared to be away for another tally. But Billy Boucher rushed in and put Kilrea off balance by a sharp jab with his stick on Kilrea's neck. Kilrea skated around after Boucher and poked him near the boards on the west side of the rink.

Like a flash, a spectator, who had been sitting in a box seat and who had come to the promenade, landed Kilrea a punch across the boards. The spectator hit and ran. Kilrea was over the boards in one stride. King Clancy shot from the Ottawa bench, skated across the rink, threw his stick over and jumped into the action. There was some wild milling until the spectator was finally collared. He was allowed to secure his coat from the box seat and was taken to the Forum office. It looked like another court case, as has been the custom when spectators have been over-zealous. But the culprit in this case satisfied the management that he was duly penient for what he had done. According to the officials, he wept in the office, admitted that he had been absolutely wrong and stated that he had been carried away in the excitement. He apologized to Kilrea for his action and promised a written apology, which was satisfactory to the player and others concerned. And there the matter ended, though it left a dark taste with the more reasonable fan and a feeling that such episodes must be stamped out promptly.

Unknown to many there was the possibility of another such outbreak on the opposite side of the rink. A highly-excited spectator, also carried beyond himself in the excitement of the early play, was using abusive language to officials and Ottawa players and at one time drew back his fist to strike Alex Smith, Ottawa defence player, as he was skating along the boards towards the penalty box to serve time for heavy work on Morenz. Smith showed his cool-headedness, merely inviting the spectator to come out behind if he wanted action. President Calder, of the League, was interested in the actions of the spectator. He watched him and saw, probably, reasons why some referees are driven to strike spectators ove the boards. He had the man in question warned to keep quiet or be barred altogether from the Forum. The spectator insisted he could say anything he wanted to provided he did not curse—but soon lapsed into a quiet state, seething inwardly, but confining himself to a tight grip on the rail for the remainder of the battle.

These outbursts were but the high marks. Seldom has a crowd been so keyed to the breaking point as was the vast gathering Saturday night. That more direct action did not take place was directly due to the smart and willing work of the Forum ushers, who quickly centered on the scenes of disturbance, their promptness proving a deterent to others who were set unquestionably in wreaking their vengeance, but thought better of it. And the interesting point was that those spectators who came under the eyes of the management gave every appearance of being of a class who should know better than to conduct themselves as gang rowdies.

For the last fifteen minutes of the first period; the first fifteen of the second and the first ten minutes of the third session, the puck went up and down the ice at a terrific clip. Canadiens were always the more aggressive; they shot nine times on Connell in the first period to seven shots on Hainsworth; there were 13 on Connell in the second to 11 on Hainsworth, and 14 on Connell in the final session to four only on Hainsworth—and yet Ottawa won.

A perfect defence won for Ottawa and on their display they deserved to win. Canadiens, on their aggressive tactics, had more than enough opportunity to win. But Ottawa played a strong defensive game and had faith in the goal-keeper to hold on if the outer bulwarks were penetrated. The confidence was well placed. Connell could not be beaten, though he was tested from far out and close in with every conceivable kind of shot. He had some luck in clearing away from scrambles in which Pete Lepine tried hard to net the tying goal for Canadiens. But it was the luck which goes to a player and team which battles with a winning morale and makes its own breaks.

The line-up:

Canadiens:	Position	Ottawa:

BAILEY STARS IN ST. PATS' WIN

Former Local Player Gives Carson Pass for Two Goals.

AMERICANS BEATEN.

TORONTO, Jan. 10. — St. Patrick's have played faster hockey and more interesting hockey, but seldom have they turned in such a satisfactory hockey game as that of Saturday night, when, before a packed Arena, they defeated the New York Americans by a score of 3 to 1. Thanks to Dr. "Bill" Carson, the Irish finally conquered that Saturday evening complex, for this game was the first week-end home game the Irish have won in the N.H.L. race this season.

All three Toronto goals were scored by Carson. The first one came in the opening period, and the other two in the final session. Irvin Bailey shared the honors with the former Stratford dentist, for he handed Carson the pass that put the doctor in a scoring position on the first two counters. The final goal was a high-speed drive from near the visitors' blue line that travelled shoulder high and proved too hot for Forbes to handle, the New York goalkeeper making a futile lunge for it, only to miss is completely.

The lone New York goal came from the stick of Lionel Conacher, late of the Pittsburgh club. 'Conny,' whose low-geared rushes were bothersome, even if they weren't very productive, strolled down to the Irish end of the rink with the puck a minute after the beginning of the second period. He shot from the wing and went in after the rebound, which he promptly looped into the nets. The goal put the teams on even terms, and it looked like anybody's game until St. Pat's went out in the third period and skated the Rickard team into submission.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

R. G. C. CLUB ICE CARNIVAL

Prizes and Refreshments Given to a Large Company.

A BOYS' CLUB.

R. G. C. Club of the West-End of the city, celebrated its sixth anniversary of its inauguration by a masquerade ice carnival on the club rink, Gilmour street, on Friday evening, Jan. 7th.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the company started to skate in full regalia of startling costumes, that gave Mr. R. A. Tucker, the judge, some difficulty in finding a winner, but ultimately his choice fell upon Dorothy Foster, who was dressed as a "maid of the nineteenth century," and Miss Leola Roseborough, as "Red Riding Hood,' gaining a suitable prize. Max Hutchinson was declared the best costumed boy.

During the proceedings an interval was called so as to allow the assembly to retire to the Club House, which was decorated with evergreens and a small Christmas tree. The members of the boys organizations supplying real hot dogs, hot drinks and soft drinks. Thereafter the party returned to the ice where a clown dressed in orange and black, and a Chinaman were worth mentioning, along with many impersonators of all descriptions.

A very capable committee, composed of Warren Turner, chairman, Jack McWilliams, James Turner and Alfred McKee, deserve praise for the splendid entertainment.

The R.G.C. started another year with the best ice surface of the season.

GERMANY VIES FOR DAVIS CUP

Will Make First Bid For the World's Tennis Honors Since 1913.

LONG ABSENCE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—The reinstatement of Germany as a member of the International Lawn Tennis Association after an absence of 13 years, holds forth promise of a new and formidable Davis Cup threat. Germany's good standing dates from January 1 so that the Teutons will be able to challenge for the historic team trophy for the first time since 1914.

The Teutonic tennis threat is of immediate concern to France, which has dominated European tennis for the past few years, reaching the Davis Cup challenge round twice in a row and now being regarded as capable of upsetting America's long supremacy next summer.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS

Fatigue and that tired feeling is the result of poison in the blood. When the kidneys fail to remove this poison from the system it leads to backache, rheumatic pains and sometimes to that fatal ailment known as Bright's disease. When this condition exists, don't delay, go to your druggist and get a box of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills and they will quickly correct the cause of your trouble.

Mr. Arthur Finch of Smith Township states that Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills give him more speedy relief than any other preparation that he had tried. m-th-31-442

U. S. Steel Advances On Increase In Orders

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. — An unexpectedly large increase of over 150,000 tons in the Dec. unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel Corporation furnished the stimulus for another advance in to-day's stock market.

Trading, however, was only in moderate volume and confined largely to the professional element; the gains ranged from 1 to 5 points.

U. S. Steel Com. crossed 159 for a gain of more than one point.

Prospects of special dividend distributions furnished the motive for bullish demonstrations in several of the rails, special strength being shown by stocks of the so-called "Hill roads."

Atlantic Refining, General Asphalt and Barnsdale "A" with early gains of 2 to 3 points were among leaders in the oil group. Commercial Solvents "B" extended its early gain to 5 points before the end of the third hour.

ART ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEETING

Interesting Paper is Given By Mrs. J. Forbes Allan.

A meeting of the Women's Art Association was held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, when a very interesting paper on "The Mother and Child in Literature and Art" was given by Mrs J Forbes Allan, and Miss Margaret Dickson sang Miss Dickson, a newcomer to the city, formerly of Campbellford, now on the teaching staff of the King Edward School, has a very fine voice of lyric soprano quality and her vocal numbers were warmly applauded With accompaniment by Miss Gwen Donley, she sang "A Brown Bird Singing," "In Summer Time," "The Chestnut Tree," and "Rainbow Land" At the conclusion of the programme, the president, Mrs William Blackwell, expressed appreciation of the "very delightful, artistic and comprehensive address given by Mrs. Allan, with its romantic and emotional atmosphere," also extended thanks to Miss Dickson and Miss Donley. Mrs. J. E. R. Munro announced the first general meeting of the Arts and Crafts Guild, to be held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. B. L. Barns. Afternoon tea was then served.

Mrs. Allan's address was exceptionally good, and was delivered in two sections; the first dealing with "The Mother and Child in Literature," the second section considering the same subject, "In Art." In poetic and beautiful language, Mrs. Allan referred to child, as immortalized in various ways in literature, in "The Spanish Gypsy," of George Eliot, in Tennyson poem on the passing of Little Emmie in the two mothers and the child, commemorated in the story of the wise King Solomon, in Coventry, Patmore and in Shakespeare. Allusion was made to the tower of Helen, erected by the late Lord Dufferin, once Governor-General of Canada, on his Irish estate, looking over the sea, to immortalize the memory of his beautiful mother, Helen Sheridan, with its inscription written by Tennyson. "The sobs of the poet were audible" in Cowper's lines, "To My Mother's Picture," and lovely quotations were given from Tennyson's "Princess' and from Sir Edward Arnold, also in the moving stanzas of Kipling's "Mother o' Mine.' Dickens immortalized the mother in several of his wonderful works, giving a fine picture of the over-indulgent mother in Mrs. Steerforth, and the picture of Sir James Barrie's mother has been drawn in "A Window in Thrums." The story of a mother's bleeding heart is engraven in the pages of the old favorite "East Lynne." The picture of an ignoble mother, who contributed much to the downfall of her child, is drawn in that of the mother of Lord Byron, who had nothing but hatred and contempt for her son.

Dealing with the "Mother and Child in Art," Mrs. Allan prefaced her paper with an allusion to the singularity of early Greek art, in which "the absence of the child is borne in upon us. But the art of Greece dealt only with the beauty and strength of perfected maturity, therefore the undeveloped child could have little place in their artistic efforts. The influence of religious ideals also had its effect in this way also. John Ruskn says: "From the moment when the spirit of Christianity had been interpreted to the Western races, the sanctity of womanhood the worshipped in the Madonna, and the sanctity of childhood in unity with that of Christ, became the light of every honest hearth and the joy of every pure and chastened soul."

Mrs. Allan went on to describe briefly the various schools of art and the influence of the mother and child upon them, illustrating her address with a number of copies of pictures from her own collection, supplemented by several steel engravings loaned by Mrs. J. A. Aylmer. These were shown to the ladies by Mrs. J. H. Seels.

From the time of Cimabue, the great Florentine painter, born in 1240, Giotto, the Van Eyck Brothers, Rotticelli, Da Vinci, Michael Angelo, Giovanni Bellini, Raphael, Titian and Coreggio, to Durer, Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Rubens and Murillo, Mrs. Allan progressed to the French school, in Madame LeBrun, perhaps most famous in her painting of herself and her daughter, and to the English school, represented by Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Lawrence, Hoppner, Leighton and Sargeant, all of whom immortalized the mother and child in varying artistic ways. Millais, painter of the exquisite "Bubbles" picture, Watts and Sims, were also alluded to, with the concluding words:

"We have glanced at the chief schools of art, and I think we failed to find a child that completely satisfied our longings until we gain some reward for our study in the childhood art of England. The beauty of Italian babyhood, and the gradually unfolding character of the Dutch children, are united in perfect harmony in the children of the English school. Whether they are children of the eighteenth century, or of the present day, they concentrate in themselves the truest beauty of form and character. This essence of perfect childhood we found first in the pictures of Reynolds, and not in our own day has the harmonious ideal been lost, and the portrayal of childhood in its innocence and simplicity is still one of the glories of British Art."

OBITUARY.

J. D. McARTHUR.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10.— (Canadian Press.)—J. D. McArthur, a pioneer railway contractor of Western Canada, died aboard his special car at the railway station here this morning. He was 73 years old. Mr. McArthur arrived in the city this morning from Battle Creek, Michigan, where he had been undergoing treatment for acute anaemia.

MRS. DANIEL McISAAC.

There passed away after a brief illness at six o'clock Sunday evening, Mrs. Daniel McIsaac. She was a faithful member of the Roman Catholic church and was loved and esteemed by all who knew her.

She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband and one son, John D., of this city.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. from Sacred Heart church to St. Peter's cemetery.

C. W. MITCHELL.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 10.—(Canadian Press.)— A picturesque career ended with the death here Saturday of C. W. Mitchell, aged 84. Mr. Mitchell helped establish the Ottawa Free Press in 1869 and became sole proprietor in 1870. He conducted the paper mill until he sold out in 1903, when he retired from journalistic work. He was a large property owner in the city at the time of his death.

"Charlie" Mitchell, as he was most frequently termed by those who knew him, was born at Gibraltar, where his father was a founder of the 79th Highlanders, a regiment in garrison there. He came to Quebec when a young man and later resided in Hamilton and London, Ont. He learned the printing trade in London. He moved from there to Michigan and fought through the American Civil War. Afterwards he went to sea on a barque which sailed to the South Atlantic. The exploits of this ship ended when she was beached at St. Helena Island after she had taken fire, and Mitchell joined another, eventually arriving in Plymouth, England. He remained there for a time and again sailed for Canada arriving in 1865. He came to Ottawa the end of that year and had been a resident here ever since. He was a man of dominating personality, keen judgment and much ability. He is survived by five sons and three daughters.

DAVID BATTEER.

The death occurred at seven o'clock this morning at the Nicholls Hospital, of David Batteer, in his seventy-third year.

The deceased was born and brought up at Centreville, in the Township of South Monaghan, and farmed for many years in the vicinity of South and North Monaghan, Westwood and Cavanville. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Batteer, who, with one brother, William, pre-deceased him some years ago. He retired from active farming life some years ago and then engaged in the occupation of mail-carrier for Peterborough on Rural Route No. 5. He was a Presbyterian in religion and in politics an ardent Conservative. He was a man of sterling character, well and widely known and many old friends will mourn his passing.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Helen Laing, of North Monaghan, and one sister, Mrs. Frank Campbell, both of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday at two o'clock from his late residence at 3 McGill street, to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. William Allan officiating.

IN POLICE COURT.

Justice came slow but sure to a local resident who stole an overcoat from another man at a dance held in the city during February last year. He pleaded guilty and was remanded for sentence.

A boy, a resident of Havelock, who stated that he had attained his sixteenth birthday yesterday, was remanded in connection with a serious charge. The mother of the prisoner, who it is understood will stand trial on the same charge, was unable to appear in court through illness.

Joseph Wearing appeared for the accused, the Crown being represented by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C.

No Word From Runaway Until Death 35 Years Later

HOBOKEN, N.J., Jan. 10 (United Press)—A telegram sent his father, who died 17 years ago, and refused by his younger brother, who didn't remember his name, was finally accepted by the sister of Michael Tivolin, who ran away from home at the age of 14 to become a jockey. That was 35 years ago, and the telegram was the first word Michael's family had received from him since the sunny Spring morning of 1892 when he left home. It said that Michael was dying in a Los Angeles, Calif., hospital. On its heels came message from the hospital, announcing that he was dead.

SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE.

"Seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put Him to an open shame," Hebrews vi., verse 6. Here is suggested that there would be virtually a repetition of the scene enacted in the Judgment Hall and on Calvary's hill. Was it not possible to see in these days those things which again present the mocking and scourging by the howling mob? Can you not hear the beat of the hammers as again those nails are driven into the hands and feet of Jesus Christ? Reflecting for a moment on the story of the Crucifixion, what think you of the murderers of Jesus Christ? I hear some heart saying, Would to God I had been there, I would have made the strongest possible effort to stop the cruelty enacted there. Some here whose hearts burn within them with indignation at the mocking and scourging, was it to be wondered that the heavens were darkened—that thunders roared—that graves were opened—yet even with all those who would have prevented that terrible scene, Scripture here tells us that there is repetition of that agony and suffering even in these days of enlightenment and that those who are indignant at the cry of the angry mob, "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" those whose hearts burn within them are possibly amongst those who are crucifying the Son of God afresh. The words spoken in this chapter by Paul are neither figurative nor exaggerated, they are positive facts. Those assembled here who are not on the Lord's side now are among the the mob crying "Crucify Him!" for did not Christ Himself say, "He that is not for Me is against Me," and even though you are following but afar though you are still one of the crowd." For a few moments let us consider those who are actively participating on the crucifying of Christ again. Firstly, those who deny the Divinity of Jesus Christ, do not give honor to Him as the Son of God. Then, secondly, those who deny the inspiration of God to earth, does not the Word say, "In the beginning God" (Genesis i., v. 1). And again, thirdly, those who deny the miracles of Jesus Christ, deny His power, deny or question the power of the blood of Jesus Christ. Thank God that the doctrines of the Salvation Army do not question again of these things. Then there are those who deny the bodily Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Again thank God for the belief of the Salvation Army in His glorious resurrection. Still again those who participate in this present-age crucifixion are those inconsistent followers of Jesus Christ, those who claim to be His but in their lives do not carry out His works. Were not the words of the Saviour when questioned as to those wounds. They are wounds received in the houses of friends.

It is more terrible not to confess Him in these days of enlightenment if, having seen the light and walk not in it, the prejudices of the days of the crucifixion do not exist now. If your life is not in accordance with the will of God—if you are treating with indifference the suffering and sacrifice of Jesus Christ—if you are unwilling to confess Him you are among those who "Crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put Him to an open shame." Accept Him to-night. Be not with the angry mob, crying "Crucify Him," but in all things "Crown Him Lord of all."

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

In introduction of a series of sermons on the Ten Commandments which will commence at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday next, Rev. P. Costello, speaking at the morning masses at the Cathedral yesterday, adjured his hearers with regard to the keeping of the laws of God. "There is written on the very souls of men a knowledge of the laws of God," he said, going on to refer to the natural laws which govern every phase of the universe, in the limitation of the powers of earth and water and of the planetary system. Natural laws are laid down for the dumb animals and the scientist who breaks the laws of science inevitably and immediately suffers. So with the laws of God. The man or woman who breaks them suffers for the transgression, whether it be against the laws of morality, or honesty, or sobriety.

The church has placed the father and the mother at the head of the home, giving them the place occupied in the Holy Family by St. Joseph and the Blessed Virgin Mary and the home is regarded as the sanctuary. Parents of modern times are overly anxious to guard their children against diseases, but they do not exercise such care with regard to contamination from vile tongues and scandal-mongers, from the evil story-teller and the blasphemer. The man who is a blasphemer, a drunkard and an impure man, loses little by little the faith that is in him, and finally suffers moral disaster.

Father Costello also alluded to the position occupied by the Church in carrying out the laws of God, immutable and unchanging, from age to age. Swords of persecution raised against it by Roman Emperors were as powerless to change its course as the efforts of modern days, such as are now seen in the country of Mexico, where evil men who have lost their faith through moral transgressions are striving to overthrow the Church of God.

MANY MATTERS ARE DISPOSED OF AT COUNCIL'S JANUARY MEETING; SALE OF RURAL LINES APPROVED

Council Confirms Action of Utilities in Selling Suburban System.

NEW RESTAURANT.

Many Appointments Made To Various Boards—Fire Risks Discussed.

Peterborough's City Council cleared the decks for 1927 business at the regular January meeting last night by the appointment of representatives on various boards and the transaction of other routine business which came up. By-laws were passed for the issuing of debentures for the Utilities Commission, the sale of the suburban lines to the Hydro for operation under a suburban area plan was approved, L. F. Humber was given permission to erect a boathouse at the end of Langton street, it was decided to attend Knox church in a body on Sunday morning next, and permission was given Charles Hum to take over the license of A. Murphy for an eating house in the Charlbond building.

H. R. H. Kenner was re-appointed to the Public Library Board for another term, Alderman N. E. Phelan was appointed to the committee to administer the funds left for charity by the late Elmira Grover Foley, and Ald. W. J. Hancock, Dr. J. M. O'Brien, and J. J. Turner were appointed to the Board of Health.

The members of the Utilities Commission were present and the chairman, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., explained the arrangement which has been made with the Hydro Electric Power Commission with regard to taking over the lines in Smith, North Monaghan, and Otonabee townships, the Utilities Commission to operate them for the rural area formed by these townships. This was approved.

L. F. Humber appeared and pressed his request for permission to build a boathouse on the end of Langton street at the river bank. He stated his willingness to make an agreement for its removal at any time. Alderman Fife said that when the matter had come up before he had supported it, and he still maintained that the request should be granted. His motion to that effect passed:

Another Restaurant.

A gentleman named Henderson spoke so convincingly that permission was granted for the opening of another Chinese restaurant on Charlotte Street, where A. Murray had a fish and chip shop. Mr. Henderson said that Mr. Murray had failed, but that he had a chance to get some money out of the business by selling his fixtures to the new restaurant, while the owner of the property, Mr. Braund, would get a tenant who would sign a five year lease, whereas recently he had had several tenants, none of whom had stayed very long.

Alderman Denne expressed the opinion that Mr. Braund should have appeared before the Council himself, while Alderman Hancock interjected, "Better an eating house than an empty house." Alderman MacDonald said it seemed to him that it was a case of survival of the fittest, and that it made no difference to the City if two hundred were started.

Alderman Phelan said that he had opposed the license because when the last one had been granted there had been a lot of talk, with complaints from the hotels. Two or three had failed in the store and they were doing the man a good turn by refusing the license. The Mayor said that Mr. Braund was the man who paid the taxes on the place and got the money, and if he was willing to have it below his apartments it was up to him. The request was granted, as was one to permit John Brownlee, blind newsdealer, to sell soft drinks. This latter one was, on the suggestion of Alderman Stocker, granted free.

The Memorial Gate.

A by-law to execute an agreement with Ernest Henry for the construction of a memorial gate at Nicholls Park was the subject of much discussion.

A clause fixing the date of completion at July 1 was struck out and "four weeks from the date notification was given" substituted.

THE WEATHER.

This morning at six o'clock the thermometer stood at nine below zero. There was no lower during the night. The days are now becoming a little longer. The sun is now setting one minute later each evening, but the gain in the morning is very slight—only one minute per week at present. The gain is becoming noticeable in the evening. An old proverb says: "As the days lengthen the cold strengthens." We shall see.—W. P.

Money Piled In Window Fails To Stop Bank Run

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—(United News.)—Two million dollars in cash was piled up like so much waste paper in the show window of a Broadway bank yesterday afternoon to convince a besieging army of depositors that the institution was solvent. The unparallelled display of ready money caused the eyes of the besiegers to grow like saucers, but it did not stop the run. The depositors stood firm. The unique gesture to stop a run on the Broadway Central Bank that began Saturday morning when news that three officials had been arersted for embezzlement of a quarter of a million dollars did not have an immediate effect. The scramble for ready cash continued.

FOUR BURNED IN OTTAWA FIRE

Woman and Three Small Children Dead—Mother May Die.

FATHER IN HOSPITAL.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—Three children and a young woman lost their lives, while the mother of the children received injuries which are expected to cause her death, in a fire that destroyed the home of Charles Hill on Gladstone Avenue, in the West End of the Capital, at an early hour this morning. The bodies of Lois Hill, aged 8, and her two brothers, Clifford, 7, and Roy, 4, and Miss Mildred Morrison, 20, were removed from the building when firemen succeeded in extinguishing the blaze after a difficult struggle.

Miss Morrison was a roomer in the Hill home.

Firemen, braving the death-dealing flames and smoke, fought their way into the blazing structure to rescue the mother of the three ill-fated children. She was rushed to hospital, suffering from severe cuts and burns.

The father of the family, a conductor on the street railway, collapsed when he arrived at the scene of the tragedy, and also had to be removed to the hospital.

Condition Critical.

Hospital authorities to-day regarded as critical the condition of Mrs. Hill, who suffered severe injuries this morning when she jumped from a window of her frame house in escaping from the flames which took a toll of four young lives and destroyed the structure.

Mrs. Hill is suffering from severe cuts and bruises and from exposure. She was forced to flee in her night attire and, after jumping from the window, stood in the snow barefooted crying for help to save her children. Neighbors and firemen hurried to her aid, but when the flames had been brought under control the children were dead, their bodies being found in their bed. The body of Miss Morrison was found under her bed.

Rockefeller Joins Searchers Who Grope In Radio Waves

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Jan. 11 (United Press). — John D. Rockefeller, for whom fortunes beyond the dreams of avarice have bubbled from the earth and flowed through the filling stations, finally has found something he wants for which he must grope and search and suffer all the torments of the average individual. And John D. has become a radio fan. In the company of his radio operator, Kenneth Hill, the oil magnate spent more than one hour yesterday afternoon bent over a six-tube set, unmindful of finance, golf and dimes.

Prisoners Thrive On Meals Costing Only Six Cents Carleton Jail Governor Finds Many Even Gain Weight

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Although it only costs 17 cents a day to feed prisoners at the Carleton County Jail here, they thrive on the food, and if there is a sufficient length of time, invariably leave the prison walls in better physical condition than when they entered. This is the opinion of Governor Dawson, who has made a science of feeding inmates of his institution at the least possible cost.

Governor Dawson states that he can feed men and women well at a average cost of less than six cents a meal. Over a period of years he has observed that men gain considerable weight in jail and are usually free from such sickness as usually result from overeating or from rich food. He has had prisoners who gained thirty pounds while eating six-cent meals.

Freedom from ordinary worries, regular hours, sufficient exercises and heavy work and regular meals of good plain food are the reasons given by Governor Dawson for the health of the prisoners under his charge. They get good pea soup three times a week and pork and beans three times a week.

RANGERS HOLD FINE SMOKER AT ARMOURIES

Good Attendance of Officers and Men at Second of Season.

BOXING FEATURE.

Musical Numbers and Competition Complete Splendid Programme.

The second smoker of the season was held last night in the recreation room at the Armories, and those members who failed to put in an appearance missed a very enjoyable evening's entertainment. Between sixty and seventy were present, however, and they made their presence felt, particularly so during the community singing.

The De Laval orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Nichols, contributed an excellent programme of music, and at the close they were given three rousing cheers for their efforts.

The feature of the evening's entertainment was the boxing, four bouts being staged. The first bout was between Major (Gunboat) Winterbottom and Q.M.S. (Basher) Kitchen. Major Winterbottom found his opponent altogether too elusive, but whenever the referee, timekeeper, seconds, or chairman came within his reach they suffered in consequence. Even the audience had to be on the alert because some of them discovered, to their sorrow, that the Major has a punch like Gene Tunney.

C.S.M. (Kid) Gaskell and Pte. (Tiny) Williams gave a sparkling exhibition of blindfold boxing, and whenever they came to grips the sparks flew thick and fast. Sgt. (One Round) Weir and Cpl. (Scotty) French indulged in two rounds of burlesque boxing, and they hit below the belt hard and often. Pte. (Mike) Shannon and Pte. (Sapper) James gave the audience an exhibition of how to fight, and they went at it hammer and tongs for two rounds, and both came up smiling after giving and receiving many hard knocks. Lieut. Dunkerley made an efficient referee, even though he got mixed up in the contests occasionally, through no fault of his own.

Capt. Melton sang two songs in his usual pleasing manner. C.S.M. Calladine won the first prize in the word-making competition. Other winners were C.S.M. Hale, Cpl. French and Pte. Perks. Staff Sgt. Thomas won the number-guessing competition, Ptes. Williams and Dyer being second and third respectively.

Previous to supper (which was efficiently arranged by Capt. Whatley), Lt.-Col. Hall thanked the members for the enthusiasm shown in turning out to the smokers.

Major Winterbottom also spoke with reference to the contemplated machine gun class which is to be held shortly.

Other officers present were Major Park, Captains Nicholls and Monkman, Lieutenants Bolton, Melton and Park.

A most enjoyable evening concluded with the singing of "Oh Canada" and the National Anthem.

Capt. G. Monkman acted as chairman for the evening.

SAYS COOLIDGE NOTE AFFRONT

Alabama Congressman Says States Drifting Into War With Mexico.

HOUSE DISCUSSION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—The statement that President Coolidge's Nicaraguan Mexican message to Congress was a deliberate affront to Mexico was made in the House today by Representative Huddleston, Democrat, Alabama.

He reiterated his charge that the United States "deliberately and consciously" is drifting into war with Mexico, and declared the President had brought Mexico into his message yesterday for the deliberate purpose "to put her in a bad light."

Mr. Coolidge sent the message to Congress, the Representative said, to back up the charge "That Mexico is a Bolshevist Government."

The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted today to take up consideration of the President's message tomorrow. The House Committee also will take up a batch of resolutions, asking information from the State Department on the Nicaraguan situation.

Buxom Lassies Will Be Beauties Of Near Future Should Be Weight Limit For Bobbed Hair, Artist Adds

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Jan. 11 (United News).—The beauty of the near future will be a buxom lass and a real armful, Norman Rockwell, nationally known magazine cover artist and illustrator, predicted Monday. Rockwell has been one of the judges in the National Beauty Tournament since its inception, and he knows his apple cheeks. "There should be an age and weight limit for bobbed hair," the artist declared. "Bobbed hair looks good only on slim young girls." But it won't be necessary to pass a law. "Eventually the buxom type of beauty," said the illustrator fondly, "will return to style.

Lamb chops and pineapple will disappear from the feminine diet, and unshorn locks will again be popular.

CHAPLIN CRUEL AND FAITHLESS WIFE CHARGES

Some of Her Charges in the Divorce Court Are Unprintable.

SCOFFS AT MARRIAGE.

Wife Asks Alimony, Share in Community Property, and Care of Sons.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Charlie Chaplin, known on the silver screen as a funny, guileless individual, is pictured as cruel and faithless, sixteen times a millionaire, with an income of more than $500,000, in a divorce suit by his estranged wife, Lita Grey. Some of Mrs. Chaplin's charges are unprintable.

She charges that her husband is a scoffer at marriage; that he boasted to her of his associations with other women, and that he was a man who believed his wife to be a "gold digger" and blackmailer.

Mrs. Chaplin also charged her husband had said he had married her to avoid going to penitentiary and that she had forced him to go through with the ceremony. She accused him of threatening her life and brandishing a pistol in her presence. She seeks the custody of her two sons, alimony, and a division of community property. Chaplin's fortune is estimated at sixteen millions, of which $10,000,000 is said to be in property.

Kingston Radio Amateur Talks To Ship In Baltic

KINGSTON, Jan. 11.—Fred H. Simpson, Jr., owner of Radio Station 3 AEL, on Sixth Street, reported yesterday that he had been in communication with a ship off the coast of Russia on Sunday evening. When Mr. Simpson first got the signal from the steamship Stockholm, Station SGL, he was surprised to hear the operator signal "Good-morning." It was 7 p.m. Sunday here and 2 a.m. Monday on board the vessel, which was in the Baltic Sea.

Although the operator on the Swedish steamer could not speak English, communication was established by means of the international code signals. The operator replied to Mr. Simpson's question regarding the reception with the signal "RV," which means "fair reception, signals easily readable." This is the last direct communication which this Kingston radio amateur has yet established, though he has several times talked with South America and the West Indies.

Slayer Of Teasing Boy Asks For Death Penalty

CHEROKEE, Jan. 11 (United Press).—C. E. Marble, 69-year-old night watchman who killed Gilbert Hutchinson, 14, because the boy teased him, will die in the electric chair at his own request. Marble pleaded guilty to the murder, and was told that two sentences were possible, life imprisonment or death. The watchman told Judge Charles Swindall that he preferred to die because of his failing eyesight and the fear he would become totally blind while in prison. Judge Swindall sentenced Marble to die in the chair, March 15th. "Thank you, Judge," was Marble's reply.

CABLE BREAKS AND KILLS TWO Brothers Fall Forty Feet Into Four Feet of Water.

AT POWER HOUSE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 11. — Two brothers, Donat Benoit, aged 3, and Florion Benoit, aged 24, both married of Valleyfield, Que, employees of the Fraser Brace Construction Co., died yesterday afternoon at the Chelsea Hydro Electric Development Hospital, following injuries received in the morning, when the breaking of a steel cable caused them to drop 40 feet on to the bottom of an emergency gate opener at the front of the power house.

There was about four feet of water at the bottom of the chute, and heroic efforts to save the two men were made by Raoul Lecompte, carpenter foreman who jumped into the water and brought the two men to the surface.

They were rushed to the company's hospital, where Donat Benoit lived for an hour and a half while his brother lived for three hours.

MAKE ADEQUATE PROVISION FOR FIRE ESCAPES

Lesson Learned at Montreal Be Applied To Every Other Theatre.

OFFER CONDOLENCE.

Stories of Miraculous Escapes From Panic Are Being Told.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11. Canadian Press. — Twenty four hours after the first blow of the disaster which left the citizens of Montreal utterly stunned at its immensity, and its character, when 77 children were killed in the wild stampede which followed an alarm of fire in the Laurier Palace moving picture theatre here on Sunday afternoon, the people of the Eastern metropolis were reviewing the tragedy, with the voice of public opinion growing more and more articulate in the demand that a searching investigation be instituted, and that the severest punishment of the law should be applied if it is determined that neglect or disobedience of the law in any way responsible for the deaths.

Throughout the city, which yesterday was like a city of mourning, the catastrophe was discussed, and the opinion of public leaders everywhere canvassed. With the full horror of the thing still upon them, they were unanimous in insisting that the affair be probed and that the lessons learned at such a cost be applied to every other theatre in the province. Not until the facts have been brought out at the enquiry will it be known just whether the provisions made to cope with such a situation were reasonably adequate and in compliance with the law.

All day messages of condolence poured in to the office of Mayor Mederic Martin, coming from many lands, and from the heads of many administrations. These indicated how widespread was the sympathy aroused throughout the world, and they furnished some meed of consolation to the bereaved parents.

Stories of miraculous escapes and of amazing premonitions of disaster, received wide circulation yesterday. Mingling with prayers for the souls of the little victims were heartfelt thanks from many who were saved from death by the curious intervention of Fate. Dinner was late in one house, just two blocks away from the picture house. Sunday afternoon at the movies was the weekly treat of three of the youngest members of the circle, who were usually accompanied by their 16 year old sister. On Sunday the girl, who worked in a west end home, received permission to leave early so that she might be in good time to take the three tots to the show. She left early, but the dinner at her own home was late. The four got ready to go but as they were preparing to leave, the news of the tragedy came to them.

Another little girl, sister of a lad who lost his life thanks to bothersome delay in finishing her housework for saving her from the catastrophe. The lady with whom she is employed had promised her additional time off if she would remain for an extra half hour. Although the girl had arranged to go to the Laurier Palace with her brother she was persuaded to stay. Her brother's body, smoke-grimed and horrible was identified at the morgue.

The enquiry into the disaster was opened yesterday by Coroner McMahon, who, however, discharged the jury until Thursday, after hearing two witnesses. Ameen Lawand, the owner of the place, was released in $500 bond, and three subordinate officials of the theatre on bail of $100.

Yesterday Coroner McMahon continued the work of issuing death certificates to the parents of the identified children, and yesterday afternoon his work was complete.

The floor upon which the little victims had been laid out was empty. In the mortuary chambers were two, a boy and a girl, but they were both identified and awaiting the arrival of the undertaker. The touching scenes of Sunday evening were re-enacted yesterday with the coming and going of undertakers' conveyances bearing the corpses of the children to their homes.

Speculation as to the cause of the fire which started the panic was rife. For the most part it is generally believed that the blaze had its origin in surreptitious cigarette smoking or in a dropped match in the front row of the balcony. There are electric wires near where the fire is thought to have begun, but these are enclosed in a conduit, and electrical inspectors can not trace the flames to the source. No definite conclusion has been arrived at however. The fire broke out, detectives say, under a seat in the centre of the balcony. The floor of the "gods" was a thin one, they declare, and the cigarette or match would soon have set it ablaze if it fell into a crack. The

ALL MONTREAL MOURNS DURING FUNERAL TO-DAY

Bell of Notre Dame Cathedral Tolls During Solemn Service.

THIRTY-SIX BURIED.

Church of the Nativity Crowded While Thousands Wait Outside.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11. Canadian Press. — While "Le Gros Bourbon" of Notre Dame Church tolled in the business district of the city this morning, funeral services were held in the Church of the Nativity, in the East End, for thirty six of the seventy-seven children who lost their lives in the Laurier Palace Theatre disaster here on Sunday.

The funeral mass was started at 9 o'clock, and at that hour the pealing of "Le Gros Bourbon," the second largest bell on the North American continent, which is tolled only on occasions of national grief, could be heard throughout the metropolis.

When the service began the church was packed and thousands gathered outside the edifice. Citizens from all walks and stations of life were present to pay tribute. Burial was in Cotes des Nieges cemetery.

Lord Willingdon, the Governor-General, was represented by one of the Hon. A. D. C.'s, Brig.-General A. De B. Panet. Scenes during the church services were pitiful, and few eyes were dry. The thirty-six bodies, enclosed in white coffins, occupied two rows of catafalques on either side of the main aisle of the church.

Mrs. E. Le Pailleur, who had known most of the victims in his capacity as pastor of the district in which the tragedy occurred, officiated at the funeral service.

Following the blessing of the bodies, the removal of the coffins to the hearses was started. After this was completed the corteges slowly wended their way through the city streets to the cemetery. The route of the funeral procession was lined five and ten deep with citizens.

AGITATION IS SPREADING OVER INTERIOR CHINA

Dispatches From Foreign Officials at Hankow Say Position Precarious.

MISSIONARIES LEAVE.

Nationalist Government Has Taken Temporary Control Over British Concern.

PEKING, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Agitation against foreigners is spreading rapidly over interior China and their condition has become precarious.

Dispatches from foreign officials at Hankow received yesterday stated that the British were removing their missionaries from all places they could reach in the provinces of Hupe, Hunan and Szechwan in the Yangtse River basin and from Fukiel province along the coast.

The Nationalist government has taken over temporarily the administration of the British concessions at Hankow and Kiaukang along the Yangtse where coolie mobs, incited by anti-foreign speeches and propaganda a few days ago tore down British concession's barriers and swept in riotously over the foreign section. British woman and children placed aboard river steamers to escape jeering, hostile coolie mobs, have arrived in Shanghai to receive protection of white residents there.

The Cantonese soldiers of the Nationist government, unpaid for months, have become surly, and foreigners expressed little confidence that they could be controlled. Transportation was sought at Hankow to convey more American women and children to Shanghai, following those who departed last week.

Officials of the Cantonese, or Nationalist government, which began its drive for a unified China last Spring from the south-eastern provinces of Kwantung and Kwansi, were endeavoring to induce foreigners to return to their concessions and resume business, but with little success.

The Cantonese were reminded that throughout their successful campaign over a large portion of China, they had frequently under Russian tutelage issued official proclamations of intent to abolish all foreign concessions.

Business at Hankow was at a standstill. Foreign men declined to reopen their business places until developments gave them more faith in the promises of the Cantonese to preserve order.

Most of the white men remained in barricaded buildings, while a special Chinese police force patrolled the streets, having placed Cantonese troops and pickets.

Meanwhile, the Chinese populace began to suffer from hunger brought on by unemployment and economic paralysis.

Former Duchess Of Marlbor ough Finds Shelter Among Art Treasures of the Vill Lou Souel

NICE, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A lone scullery maid, who repeats automatically "Mme Balsan is not at home," is the sole reception committee for the English and American reporters who repeatedly have made the journey to the Villa Lou Souel at Eze, where Mme. Jacques Balsan, the former Duchess of Marlborough, is now living.

The gates of the famous villa were swinging wide before Mme. Balsan arrived. Suddenly they clanged shut. For two days the rain and the landslides acted as barriers. Then the French maid appeared at the gate as the reporters scrambled over the fallen mountains. She convinced them that they were unwelcome visitors.

The discussion regarding the recent Vatican decree annulling the marriage of the Duke and the Duchess of Marlborough is secondary on the Riviera to the revived interest in the Villa Lou Souel. Visitors to the villa have reported marvellous tales of the treasures concealed behind the walls of the rambling structure. Common report has it that M. and Mme. Balsan agreed to furnish their home with furniture and decorations antedating the fifteenth century. Experts on the Riviera assert that more than three illion dollars' worth of antiques and paintings are hidden within the red brick walls which border the grounds.

PRIEST ASSISTS IN RESCUE WORK

Mgr. Le Pailleur is Pathetic Figure in Montreal Theatre Tragedy.

WERE PARISHIONERS.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—One of the pathetic figures in the aftermath to the panic disaster was Monsignor Le Pailleur, parish priest of the Church of the Nativity, to which many of the little victims belonged. When word reached him of the disaster he rushed to the scene and with the other priests of the locality hastily summoned, he aided in the rescue work, administering the last Sacrament and comforting the bereaved parents. Throughout the night he sat in his presbytery receiving mothers and fathers, and superintending the transfer of bodies from the morgue to the church. This morning he conducted services for the dead.

Father Le Pailleur knew all the little victims of his church, and his grief as he learned of their death threatened at times to overcome him.

OLD MASTERS

The poplars are fell'd; farewell to the shade
And the whispering sound of the coo colonnade;
The winds play no longer and sing in the leaves,
Nor Ouse on his bosom their image receives.

Twelve years have elapsed since I first took a view
Of my favorite field, and the bank where they grew:
And now in the grass behold they are laid,
And the tree is my seat that once lent me a shade!

The blackbird has fled to another retreat
Where the hazels afford him a screen from the heat;
And the scene where his melody charmed me before
Resounds with his sweet-flowing ditty no more.

My fugitive years are all hasting away.
And I must ere long lie as lowly as they,
With a turf at my breast and a stone at my head,
Ere another such grove shall arise in its stead.

The change both my heart and my fancy employs:
I reflect on the frailty of man and his joys:
Short-lived as we are, yet our pleasures, we see,
Have a still shorter date, and die sooner than we.
—W. Cowper: The Poplar Field.

FATE OF FOUR STILL UNKNOWN

No Trace Found of Men Aboard Burned Motor Boat.

NO ONE ON BOARD.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Jan. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Whether four men aboard the power boat Litle Margaret, when it caught fire in Gloucester bay Sunday, reached shore safely, remained undetermined early yesterday. Although a report was received here that they landed at Rockport, no trace of them has been found.

The 40-foot craft sank as coastguardsmen who went to her assistance were attempting to tow her in. No one was aboard when they reached the boat. The Little Margaret caught fire about three miles off Thatcher's Island. The blaze was seen by a man on shore, who notified the coastguard.

Only one of the men on board, Krank Sinigra, of Gloucester, was known here.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Harry F. Sinclair must stand trial on criminal charges of contempt of the Senate, for refusing to answer questions of the Senate oil investigating committee.

SPECIAL PREACHER AT CAMPBELLFORD

Rev. Mr. MacIntosh Gives Two Sermons In United Church.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 11. — Rev. Mr. MacIntosh of Parkhill had charge of the services in St. John's United Church on Sunday. In the morning he took as his text, Isaiah 60,.19: "The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy gloty." Just as we have just passed through a season of cheer and New Year greetings, so Isaiah wishes a new era for his people. He sends a message expressing God's will which influences the people and he exhorts the Jews to refrain from battle and leave Babylonia and go up towards Jerusalem, the land of freedom and of light. Just so we could follow out our New Year's greetings by trying to lead and influence others in leading a good life and making life happy for others and leading them to believe in the one Sun Who never fails.

"Change and decay in all around I see,
Oh thou who changest not, abide with me."

In the evening Rev. Mr. MacIntosh spoke from the text, Philemon, 11th verse, "Which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me." The young slave called Onesimus, which means profitable or useful, became an unworthy subject and was thrust into a Roman prison. During his stay in prison he came in contact with the Apostle Paul, and came out from that prison a self-controlled and temperate young man. We also are unprofitable and the only way to make our lives profitable is by learning to love and by the appreciation of the love of God.

The music for the services was especially well rendered. Mrs. A. L. Malcolm, Mrs. H. O. Richardson and Mr. Alex. Rollo took the solo parts in the anthem in the morning, and Miss K. Connor and Mr. A. Hazell, accompanied by Mr. E. C. Dolman, sang a duet in the evening.

GREAT ACTRESS ILL.

Dame Ellen Terry, whom Sarah Bernhardt called "the greatest actress in the world," is seriously ill from bronchitis at her home in London. She is in her 79th year.

MANY MATTERS ARE DISPOSED OF

The contract was originally awarded last year, and was intended to be finished before fall, but various matters interfered and only the cement base was completed.

Another clause calling for the payment of $200 was struck out. City Solicitor Wearing said that he understood from Mr. Henry that he had an agreement with the Council that he should get this payment, so had the clause inserted. Alderman McIntyre said that it was customary to pay contractors eighty percent of all work done as they went along, but no action was taken to do this.

The comment was made that $400.00 granted the Trent Waterway Development Association to help finance the exhibit at the New York Motor Boat Show was of more value than the money paid the Ontario Tourist Association, and the grant passed wtihout dissent. The matter of sending a deputation to Ottawa to urge the completion of the Trent Canal was left to the Mayor, as was representation at the Cockshutt banquet.

Invitation Confirmed.

An invitation tendered by Mayor Holloway to the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Ontario to hold their next annual meeting in Peterboro next fall was confirmed. It was estimated that entertainment of the delegates and others at a banquet would cost three or four hundred dollars. Alderman MacDonald questioned if the expenditure would be worth while, and Alderman Stocker said it would be a compliment to ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus, who is at present President of the Association. Aldermen Greene and Fife both favored the matter, although Alderman Greene said he could not see any return. He did, however, move, seconded by Alderman MacDonald, that the invitation be confirmed, and the motion passed.

Mayor Holloway said that it seemed useless to sand the streets and then have some George street merchants come out and sweep the sand off. He said that there should be a by-law to provide a fine for this, and Alderman Denne added that the whole matter should be cleared up, as failure to clean the sidewalk brought a warning from the police.

Alderman MacDonald was given authority to arrange for interim insurance from the first of February to cover accidents on the streets, and also to close an agreement with the present company for a similar policy at the same rate.

A resolution of sympathy and condolence was tendered Alderman Cotton, whose father died recently. Alderman MacDonald moving it and Mayor Holloway speaking of the respect in which the late Mr. Cotton had been held in his home town in Gananoque.

Alderman Denne asked the Mayor to take up with the Police Commission the matter of children attending moving picture shows without adults, stating that such a tragedy as that at Montreal could easily happen here on a Saturday afternoon. He also asked for an independent count of the number of street lights in the City, saying that new ones had been added without any system, while changes asked had not been made.

Alderman Cotton replied that the Utilities Commission was working on the new system of lighting, which would save money, and that it was hoped to get around to the south end this year. Speaking on the matter of fire hazard, he proposed that theatres should have some of their employees trained, so that they would know what to do in the evnet of fire or panic, and also urged that the presence of extinguishers be required.

Those present were Mayor Holloway, Aldermen Phelan, Cotton, Stocker, Fife, McIntyre, Hancock, MacDonald, Greene, and Denne.

PINCHOT DOUBTFUL.

Refuses To Certify To Election of William S. Vare.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 11 (United Press).—Governor Gifford Pinchot yesterday refused to certify United States Senator-elect William S. Vare, of Philadelphia, to the U. S. Senate as having been "duly chosen by the qualified electors" of Pennsylvania.

Instead, the Governor issued a certificate to Senator-elect Vare, which reads that "On the face of returns" Vare "appears to have been duly chosen by the qualified electors of Pennsylvania."

ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP PLACED UNDER ARREST

Charged By Mexican Authorities in Connection With Recent Uprising.

ORDERED DEPORTED.

People of Mexico Satisfied and Do Not Want a Revolution.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco, who holds the post of secretary of the Mexican Roman Catholic Episcopate, was placed under arrest at the Episcopate building early yesterday morning, together with five other bishops. Shortly afterwards, Bishop Diaz was removed to some unknown place, the police remaining within the building and arresting all who happened to call during the day, clergy and laymen alike.

There is a belief that the arrest of the Bishop and other prelates was in some way connected with reports that Rene Capistran Garza, a prominent Catholic leader, and one of the officials of the League at defence of religious liberty, who was recently in New York, had crossed the border at the head of a revolutionary group and had issued a manifesto proclaiming himself head of a revolutionary movement.

ELPASO, Tex., Jan. 10 (Canadian Press). — Rene Capistrian Garza and Jose Gandara, named as leaders of the latest "revolt" in Mexico, will pay with their heads if they visit Juarez or the interior of Mexico as a result of their so-called "revolutionary manifesto" issued yesterday, said Maor Jose Florenzana, chief of staff to General Roman Lopez, commander of the Juarez military garrison.

Neither man has any following and their revolution talk is all nonsense. The people of Mexico are well satisfied with the Calles administration and do not want a revolution, he said.

Jose Florenzana denied that the Juarez garrison is to be reinforced, saying that the force is large enough to take care of any eventuality which may arise.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco, arrested in the Catholic Episcopate building by the Mexican police yesterday, has been ordered deported.

KINGSTON POLICE OFFICER DISMISSED

Another Suspended For Disorderly Conduct While on Duty.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press). — Police Constable Gilbert Merritt was yesterday afternoon dismissed by the Board of Police Commissioners from the police force, following a charge against their conduct while on duty, while Police Constable Bert McWilliams, who was said to have been with Merritt in the offence, was suspended for a month, as from January 1st. The dismissal and suspension followed an escapade by the constables while on duty at three o'clock in the morning.

fire burned completely through a floor, and it was in the balcony that the greater part of the damage was done.

Odd little shoes, torn bits of clothing, and a smal overcoat, were among the reminders of the fatal stampede, which were f[illegible] in the building yesterday by the investigators. On the stairway leading from the balcony and in the aisles by which the children sought to escape, several of these articles were found. There was a shoe for the right foot of a boy next that for the left foot of a small girl; there were pieces of cloth from overcoats here and there, lying near bits of lighter dress materials; an overcoat lay in the aisle, torn and trampled, either dropped by a child making his frantic way to the street, or torn from his body in the fighting mass.

The investigation by the Fire Commissioner will begin this afternoon.

Sent Sympathy.

PARIS, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's).—Immediately after receiving news of the cinema disaster in Montreal, Aristide Briand, Minister for Foreign Affairs, instructed Baron R. de Vitrolles, of Montreal, Consul-General for France in Canada, to express to the Canadian Government the condolences of the French people.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—"Please accept on behalf of myself and the citizens of Winnipeg our sincerest condolence in the grievous loss you have sustained in Sunday's fire. Our sympathies are with you and with the bereaved families." This is the message despatched yesterday by Mayor Ralph Webb to Mayor H. Martin of Montreal.

Basques After Codfish Discovered America Long Before Columbus, French Writer Says

PARIS, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Codfish, and not the riches of India, was the inspiration that led to the discovery of America, and it was not Christopher Columbus but a Frenchman who made the discovery anyway, says the French writer Leon Sazie.

The desire of the people along the Basque coast, Sazie says in an article published here, to eat codfish, not only on Fridays, but on most of the other days of the week, led to America's discovery. Any one at all conversant with history, he says, knows that the people of Spain and the French Basques got the habit of eating codfish long before 1492, and the place where the fishermen went to fetch their favorite food was off the Newfoundland Banks.

"The wealth of India myth as a determining factor in the discovery of America is exploded," the writer says. In fact, he continues, it was these Basque fishermen who first took Columbus across the ocean, having crossed it themselves long before.

Hardy Basque fishermen, in fact, Sazie says, knew their way around the world long before Magellan made his famous voyage of circumnavigation. As proof he cites various names borne by members of the Japanese aristocracy, which he says are Basque and Gascon words and modes of expression in the Japanese language.

CANADIAN COMPANY WRITES HUGE POLICY OF MILLION DOLLARS

Mutual Life of Canada Establishes Remarkable Record in Insurance.

National Significance.

WATERLOO, Jan. 11.—Closing the door upon a year of fine deeds and work well done, Canada saw the placement of probably the largest individual life insurance policy ever "written" in her history. The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, with general headquarters at Waterloo, in the Province of Ontario, attained this distinct record. The policy was for $1,000,000 on the life of H. C. Hatch, President of Hiram Walker's Ltd., of Walkerville, Ont., and Gooderham & Worts, Ltd., Toronto.

Crowning Achievement of 60 Years

In about the year 1869 there was established in Waterloo, Ont., the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada. With the advent of Christmas, 1926, this company, then approaching its sixtieth years, created a bright and solid record in paving the way for protecting Mr. Hatch's company against any loss that might be entailed in the event of the President's death at a crucial stage in the progress of the recently incorporated distillery firm.

When commenting upon the magnitude of this remarkable life assurance accomplishment within the Dominion's frontiers, B. W. N. Grigg, Advertising Manager of the Mutual Life, stated to The Examiner that, "so far as our knowledge extends, this is the largest single policy ever issued by a Canadian company."

Secured in Open Competition

The salesman who has been awarded the credit for the placing of the $1,000,00 policy is J. A. Donovan. It so happens that one of the largest policies previously prepared by Mr. Donovan was also written on Mr. Hatch's life. This policy is dated some two years ago, when the President-elect of Hiram Walker's was insured for the amount of $250,000 by Gooderham & Worts when acting in a Presidential capacity. The initial premium on the policy just taken out on Mr. Hatch's life was $36,000. The business was secured by the Mutual Life of Canada in a straight competitive field with other companies and without reducing rates, which are on the usual basis. It is noticeable, too, that Mr. Hatch is designated as a first-class risk.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Donovan, the enterprising salesman who expressed a willingness to "prove all things," forsook the practice of law for the field of insurance.

Not a Singer, a Creator, Mary Garden Calls Self

CHICAGO, Jan. 11 (Associated Press).—Mary Garden told an audience at the Woodman Theatre Sunday night that she was "entirely in agreement with the critics when they say, as some of them do, that I am not a singer. I am not; I am a creator."

In the address, in connection with a concert by a French choral society, Miss Garden discussed her preparation for the title role in Honegger's ultra-modern opera "Judith," the latest novelty she is introducing here. The American premiere of the opera is set for next week in New York.

TRACE ORIGIN OF BARN FIRES

15-Year-Old Boy Says He Threw Matches Into Stored Hay.

CAME FROM ENGLAND.

SARNIA, Ont., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—The origin of two mysterious barn fires on the farm premises of David K. Stewart, 30 miles from here, in successive months, is believed by police to have been cleared up yesterday with the arrest of Herbert G. Firmin, 15-year-old farm hand, who confessed to setting both fires, according to the police. He was arraigned on a charge of arson, but was remanded for one week for inquiry without being asked to plead.

The first barn was fired on October 27, and on November 22 a second barn was discovered afire, but was saved from destruction. Matches thrown in stored hay was the method employed in setting them, the boy is said to have told the authorities. Firmin has been in Canada since May, 1926, and came over under the assisted passage plan. His parents are said to reside in Teddington,, a suburb of London, England.

Y.W.C.A. BOARD HOLDS MEETING

Reports Read of Activities of Association During Past Month.

MANY IN CLASSES.

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association Board of Directors was held yesterday afternoon. In the absence of the president, Miss M. Dickson took the chair and led the devotional period. After the reading of the minutes, Mrs. W. D. Scott read the financial statement, showing for the month a deficit on the public department of $146.71, and on the residence a balance of $139.27.

A letter from the Y.W.C.A., Dominion Council was read announcing plans for the Association national biennial conference to be held in Montreal May 28 to June 3, and asking that Peterboro be represented by board, staff and girl delegates.

Mrs. H. Wightman and Mrs. E. E. Harvey were appointed to attend the January meeting of the Local Council of Women.

The general secretary's report showed a busy month of Christmas festivities enjoyed by all the classes, clubs and groups of the "Y." Receipts from the English literature course total $270. New classes scheduled to start this month are the home nursing course in charge of Mrs. E. W. Wood, the ukulele club, and wood-carving class, and also a Bible study class.

The physical director reported on the work of the gymnasium classes, badminton club and basketball league. Four hundred and thirty members already belong to the classes, with 74 little tots under 8 years of age in the babies' class. A campaign for 100 new members started the first of January, and each class is working to bring in its share of the objective.

The report of the residence superintendent showed 70 permanent boarders and numerous transients. A special Christmas supper party was given December 22nd, and Christmas Day fittingly celebrated. Extra heating has been installed during the holidays.

Miss Margaret Storey, assistant secretary, gave an interesting report of a week's visit to the Montreal Y.W.C.A., returning with many new ideas for classes and girls' club programs, which will be a help to the local associations.

Mrs. Scott closed the meeting with prayer, after which tea was served.

NO CORDS, TALKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Lieut. Col. Aristide Moreno is learning to talk without vocal cords. An operation about two years ago necessitated removal of the cords, and surgeons predicted that he would be unable to talk. Now he is able to talk understandably, though he must enunciate very slowly.

INAUGURATION CAMPBELLFORD TOWN COUNCIL

Mayor Advocates Strictest Economy Consistent With Progress For Year.

MANY QUESTIONS.

Thanks Members of Council For Work During Past Year.

....CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 11.—The inaugural meeting of Town Council for 1927 was held in the Council Chamber of the Public Library Monday morning.

Rev. James Grier was present and led the gathering in prayer.

Mayor Kingston in his opening address, thanked the members of last years council for their support in handling the affairs of the community in a business-like way. He had no doubts of the ability of the newly-elected Recve, Major J. M. Bygott, and he asked for the same hearty co-operation as he had received in the past. The new Council would have a very important proposal from the Hydro to deal with in the coming year. He advocated the strictest economy consistent with progress for the coming year.

The statement of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham showing the amount received by Campbellford for roads and lighting of the bridge was accepted.

The communication of Trent Waterways Association re completion of the canal was left to the inquiry industrial committee.

The association's appeal was to attract more tourists by the water route, by completing the construction of the canal on the Severn River. Deroit was the heart of the motor boat industry and by opening a clear line of travel by water, many more would take advantage of the opportunities presented.

The Council turned down the invitation of the central committee of the Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt Banquet to form a local committee to raise funds for the memorial, and attend the banquet. The local Council were of the opinion the money was more urgently needed at home.

There was nothing done in the matter of the Council being represented at the Tourists Association Banquet at the King Edward on Jan. 18th.

The usual amount was granted to the Sick Children's Hospital.

Committees were appointed for the coming year by the Mayor naming the chairman, and he picking his own assistants.

Finance — Councillor Wiggins, chairman; Reeve Bygott, and Councillor Stone.

Road and Bridge — Councillor Abernethy, chairman; Councillors Cole, McDonald, O'Sullivan.

Police — Deputy-Reeve Davidson, Reeve Bygott, and Councillor O'Sullivan.

Charity—Councillor Stone, chairman; Councillors Cole and McDonald.

Inquiry Industrial—Reeve Bygott, chairman; Deputy-Reeve Davidson, and Councillor Stone.

Band — Councillor McDonald, chairman; Councillors Cole and O'Sullivan.

C. A. Wilson and C. W. Maguire were appointed auditors.

John Gay was re-appointed member of the local board of health, and A. J. Jenkins was re-appointed to the Canadian Public Library Board for 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Charles Benor was the Council's appointment for High School trustee for 1927-28.

Two applications were received for the positions of assessor for the town, one from Matt. Mulhearn and one from L. A. Denike. Mr. Mulhearn got the appointment.

A Court of Revision, composed of Mayor Kingston, Reeve Bygott, Deputy-Reeve Davidson and Councillors McDonald and Wiggins, for the Oliver Road Sewer will be held in the Council Chamber of the Public Library, Monday, Feb. 7, at 7.15 p.m.

Rat Serum For Cancer Is Interesting London

LONDON, Jan. 11. — The claim of Dr. Lumsden that he had discovered a serum derived from the blood and intestines of rats, which can be utilized to destroy cancerous growths in the human body, while being given serious consideration by the medical profession, is regarded with considerable scepticism by some of the London newspapers. Yesterday the public was warned not to place too much faith in the reported cure, but to suspend judgment until the actual results of the serum were known.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE CRICKET

The cricket is a little cuss:
He ain't got gold and lands, like us.
Even the house in which he is
Is ours, and isn't even his.
But somewhere down among the bricks
He finds a hole, and there he sticks
And chirps his tune the winter through—
What more could any mortal do?

He's nothin' but a bug, he ain't;
Yet, I don't hear him make complaint
Because the Lord has made him just
A cricket, creature of the dust.
He only sets and chirps a tune
And makes the winter seem like June,
Keeps happy, any place he's at—
And what could men do more than that?

The cricket sings, no matter what.
Whatever sort of job he's got;
And what the world needs most of all
Ain't folks that fly away in fall
But folks who sing when days are dim,
Yes, keep on singin' just like him.
The cricket is a little cuss—
But bigger than a lot of us.

MILLBROOK I.O.O.F. OPEN INSTALLATION

Interesting Ceremony Performed By District Deputy Master's Party.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 11.—One of the most instructive, interesting, and successful evenings ever given locally, under I.O.O.F. auspices, was held in the Oddfellows' Hall on Tuesday evening, about 160 visiting officials, members and guests (including Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176) being in attendance.

The occasion was the annual installation of officers for Millbrook Lodge, No. 308, and for the first time in several years an "Open Installation" was arranged for, the object being to interest those not yet allied with Oddfellowship, and give practical evidence, in a public manner, of the dignity and usefulness which have pertained to the Order since its inception 109 years ago.

The Installation Staff came from Peterborough, and included: District Deputy Grand Master, Brother George Lacheur; District Deputy Grand Warden, Brother Robert Martin; District Deputy Grand Marshal, Brother A. R. McWilliams; D.D. Grand Chaplain, Brother K. Throop; D.D. Grand Treasurer, Brother T. Pacey; D.D. Grand Recording Secretary, Brother George Hillier; D.D. Grand Financial Secretary, Brother J. Lancashire; D.D. Grand Inside Guard, Brother George Lowe; D.D. Grand Outside Guard, Brother B. Bartlett.

The list of local officers for 1927, who were duly installed in their respective chairs, is:

N. G.—Brother W. J. Ball;
V. G.—Brother D. Sheppard;
Rec. Secretary—Brother J. A. Vance, P.G.;
Financial Secretary—Brother P. I. Bentley, P.G.;
Treasurer—Brother David Hampton;
Chaplain—Brother C. B. Sutton;
Warden—Brother O. C. Garside;
Conductor—Brother H. Jordan;
R. S. S.—Brother Fred Elliott;
L. S. S.—Brother Arthur Fallis;
R. S. N. G.—Brother V. R. Hunter, P.G.;
L. S. N. G.—Brother E. Morden, P.G.
R. S. V. G.—Brother A. Jeffrey;
Inside Guard—Brother Wesley Wragg;
Outside Guard—Brother G. Copley.

Following the formal ceremony a brief programme was enjoyed, D.D.-G.M., Brother G. Lacheur, by request of the Noble Grand, taking the position of chairman. The items included:

Chairman's address;
Duet, "Bright Scene of Beauty," by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston;
Address—Brother (Rev.) F. C. Howard;
Reading—"A Lodge Story," by Miss P. Burnham;
Quartette—"April Eyes," by Messrs. W. H. Coombe, H. W. Johnston, M. McDowell and V. C. Lambert;
Address, by Brother (Rev.) F. H. Howard; including a reading of a poem; "The Parson at the Hockey Match;"
Reading—"Don't Life Divide into Compartments?" (original), by Brother A. R. McWilliams, Peterborough.

All of the speakers gave particular emphasis, in their remarks, to the benefits and high ideals belonging to the Order of Oddfellowship.

Millbrook Lodge enjoys the unique distinction, as Brother J. A. Vance, P.G. pointed out in a pleasing address, of having as its treasurer, Brother David Hampton, who has held this position since 1900; has been a charter member of the Lodge since 1894, and has been actively connected with Oddfellowship in an official capacity, for 44 years.

A hearty round of applause was tendered Brother Hampton in honor of his fine, and unusual record, and the District Deputy Grand Master took occasion to express his personal sense of privilege in having installed the esteemed brother in his office for another twelve months.

The committee in charge, Brothers V. R. Hunter, P.G.; H. A. Fallis, P.G., and P. I. Bentley, P.G., assisted by other members, served the refershments, and afterward dancing and cards were indulged in by those who wished, the gathering finally breaking up between one and two a.m.

BETHANY PERSONALS

BETHANY, Jan. 10.—The Young Ladies' Mission Club of the United Church held their regular meeting at the home of Miss Jean Thorndyke on Friday evening.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Miss Thorndyke served dainty refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed by the young ladies.

A CHANCE FOR YOUNGSTERS.

St. Catharines is experimenting with a plan to give the children of that city a chance to coast in safety and the method that has been adopted there is one that might be possible in Peterboro.

The Court street hill has been set apart as a playground for the youngsters, the street having been closed to all traffic.

As an additional precaution the bottom of the hill has been sanded thoroughly to prevent the children from coasting onto the cross street below.

The St. Catharines experiment sounds feasible, it should give the St. Kits' youngsters a chance to indulge in their favorite winter amusement under conditions that are perfectly safe, and only under such a plan can coasting be made possible.

There is too much danger of accidents, as a result of the motor traffic, to permit the streets to be used for this purpose, except under some such plan as St. Catharines had the enterprise to try out.

THE LESSON OF THE TRAGEDY.

The victims of Sunday's moving picture theatre fire in Montreal were all children, their ages ranging from five years up to the early teens.

There is a Quebec statute prohibiting children under sixteen years from entering a theatre unless in charge of an adult—yet practically every child whose life was sacrificed in this terrible catastrophe was unaccompanied by an older person.

The great loss of life can undoubtedly be explained by this fact rather than by the inadequacy of the facilities for escape.

The poor little victims, with no adults to steady them or to assist them, became panic-stricken, jammed on the stairway and the death of nearly four score followed.

The tragedy will lead to a stricter supervision everywhere as to the admittance of children into places of amusement

The snuffing out of nearly eighty lives in less than ten minutes carries its warning, not only to theatre managers, but to parents.

It should cause a demand that the law requiring children to be in charge of an adult shall be faithfully adhered to under all circumstances, and that every possible provision to ensure the speedy and safe emptying of theatres and public halls shall be taken.

THE CHAIRMANSHIPS.

The chairmen chosen by the Council at its meeting yesterday morning have for the most part had experience in the portfolios to which they have been assigned, and the civic machinery should operate, as a result, with commendable smoothness.

The finance minister is, of course, Ald. N. E. Phelan, who thus for the seventh year presides over this important department. Ald. Phelan has the city's financial condition at his finger tips and has given splendid service as chairman of the Finance Committee.

The Board of Works' portfolio has again been given to Ald. J. O. Fife, whose record as works' chairman has been marked by close attention to the duties of the responsible position.

Ald. Greene, who headed the Parks Committee last year, and Ald. Hancock who was chairman of the Property Committee, have had their work endorsed by re-election to their posts.

The other three portfolios are in new hands. Ald. Denne, who was chairman of the Legal and Reception Committee last year, succeeding Ald. Meyers as chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, Ald. R. G. Cotton taking the Fire, Water and Light Committee from ex-Ald. Turner, and Ald. Geo. A. MacDonald being appointed chairman of the Legal and Reception Committee in place of Ald. Denne.

The line up of chairmen is a strong one, and good work can be looked for from all the committees during the present year.

A VOICE FROM MOSCOW.

Isn't is exceedingly pleasant to have in our midst a representative Bolshevist to interpret for us, even to supplement and correct for us, cabled news of Moscow and the Soviet activities!

Last week, for example, Longin F. Gerus, Trade Representative in Canada of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, who has an office in Montreal ostensibly for trade purposes and without the slightest concern for opportunities of propaganda, is quoted at length in Canadian newspapers in an interview which for one thing at any rate emphasizes our tolerance of this voluble Bolshevik.

Mr. Gerus tells the Canadian people that the report from London implicating Soviet emissaries in the attack by Chinese coolies on British marines in Hankow last Monday was untrue, and was circulated "in a hostile section of the press by our ill-wishers." He charges Britain with insincerity toward the nationalist aspirations of the Chinese, and declares that the one idea of the Soviet Republics is to develop peaceful trade through its foreign agents.

The world knows from Moscow's repeated avowals that the universalization of Bolshevism, in other words of the spreading of political revolution, is closest to the heart of the headmen of the Bolsheviki. (Should it rather be headsmen?)

And wherever you find social turbulence today, political, religious, industrial, there you find energetic emissaries of Moscow. Mr. Gerus protests that there is no significance in this concurrence, that it is merely accidental in Mexico, China, British industry and in the nearer East.

At any rate, there is more serious embarrassment of Britain in China than there was in the domestic labor struggle last year, and Bolsheviki have been in both backgrounds. And if their meddling in the British coal strike last year finally failed, Moscow's agents now find themselves in the midst of insurgent fanatics in Hankow and Canton.

So we have Bolshevism's professed ambitions and objective on the one hand, and foreign conditions that correspond with that ambition on the other. Mr. Gerus will find it difficult to convince most of us that these things, these facts, are unrelated.

The principle effect of the Soviet Trade envoy's statement is to remind us of the difference between Moscow and Montreal, contrasting the rigid censorship of speech and news in Russia and the freedom here in Canada that permits effusions like that of Mr. Gerus. In this country, privately-owned newspapers listen to him and publish his opinions. In Russia, only Soviet sheets, rigidly and narrowly controlled, would be available to him.

If places and persons were reversed such a statement in Moscow would probably be swiftly followed by a police call and the gentle consequences which that connotes under Bolshevist notions of justice.

It is difficult to understand how this agent of the Soviets can content himself in this democracy of Canada which the Bolshevist abjure with propaganda, torture and death. Certainly no intelligent Canadian will pay the slightest attention to the Gerus defense of the Soviets and to the Gerus criticism of British policy in China.

LOCAL PATRIOTISM.

Frank Swinnerton, an English novelist and lecturer, has an article in Harper's for January, answering the question, "Are the English egoists?" On the whole the answer is negative, for he says, "No human being is more dissatisfied with the English than we are ourselves. We assure everybody that the English are stupid, unimaginative and inefficient." He avers that Englishmen have a great admiration for the Irish. Mr. Pett Ridge, in one of his novels, described a stout Cockney lady at a concert weeping as she listened to the song called "Killarney." "Anything about Ireland" she said, "always makes me cry. I come from Peckham." Nevertheless, he goes on to say, there are conceited people in England, and he quotes the saying of a Cockney in Canada, proud of Old London. Possibly the love of one's own country is stronger in the exile. A peculiar fact noted by Mr. Swinnerton is that the Englishman thinks rather of England than of the British Empire:

"If one who is not of England thinks of an Englishman, he supposes him to be possessor of half the world and conscious of his possessions. Nothing could be more false. The average Englishman's heart, whatever his address, resides in England. It is the English countryside, the English town, that he loves. He may fight for the Empire, but his patriotism is a small, intense thing, born of the love of a locality. . . . Imperialism in England is the obsession of a clique. It is not even a mob notion."

Scott's poem, "Breathes there a man with soul so dead," is the classic expression of patriotism. It displays a passionate affection not for the British Empire, not even for the United Kingdom, but for Scotland, "Land of brown heath and shaggy wood, land of the mountain and the flood." Nobody would deny to Scott the larger patriotism, and he wrote at a time when it was aroused to a high pitch by a mighty struggle. But when he sang of patriotism, his heart turned to his native land. So Browning wrote: "O, to be in England, now that April's there," and nobody blames him for ignoring Canada or Australia. Even a stream, a hill, or a bit of forest, seems to inspire the poet more than an Empire or a huge stretch of territory. If too much ground is covered, the work is too apt to resemble a page of a book on a geography, or an inventory of natural resources.

There is a point here for Canadians, some of whom are inclined to be afraid of being called "Little Canadians" if they show too much pride and affection in regard to their own country. Once, when the proposed name of a club was being discussed in Canada, an Englishman asked: "What is a Canadian?" The answer given was: "A Canadian is one who feels toward Canada as an Englishman feels toward England." And the Englishman showed by his vote that he was satisfied.

This national patriotism and pride does not necessarily mean blatant self-satisfaction, or what has more recently been called "Babbitry." Our neighbors to the south have been accused of that, but of late a spirit of self-criticism has appeared, as in Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" and "Babbit." It is significant that in the same number of Harper's there is an article entitled "Getting Off the 'Band Wagon'" by Oscar Lewis of San Francisco. His theme is the decline of "boosterism," long rampant in California. Inhabitants of that State are beginning to question the wisdom of continuing to strive after mere size. One hears the statement that "we don't want more population." With the growth of population conditions are said to be not more attractive but less so. "The result, exit the booster and the collapse of the 'Million by 1940' campaign."

The great area and rich resources of the United States, the rapid growth of population and wealth, the swift building up of huge fortunes, were natural causes of spread-eagleism. Now the bounds of what seemed to be infinity are seen. The shadow of old world troubles, such as over-population, falls upon the new world. Criticism modifies the old extravagant exultation. In Canada as in the United States the thought suggested is: "What use are we to make of our great advantages? What kind of civilization are we to build on this broad foundation? What kind of life is best worth living?" Locality is to be more and more considered rather than quantity.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peterboro's City Council has launched out into what should be a useful year's activities on behalf of the community.

Anyway the temperature of the water makes it certain that those Pacific coast long distance swimmers will at least have a coating of goose flesh.

The Chatsworth weather sage predicts January, February and March will be mild, so it looks as if we will have to see if we can conjure up another ton or two of coal.

Premier Ferguson has announced the names of the mover and seconder of the Speech from the Throne but he is still silent as to the identity of his "strong man."

MONTREAL GRAIN AND

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was of a very limited character and no business of importance was accomplished. The domestic and export demand for grain on spot was also quiet, but the tone of the market was steady.

The undertone to the spring wheat flour market was easy, but values showed no change. The local and export trade was very small A quiet trade was done in winter wheat grades and prices were unchanged.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and prices were firm. A moderate amount of business was transacted in standard grades of rolled oats and values were unchanged.

A weaker feeling developed in the local egg situation and prices for both fresh and storage grades scored a further decline of two cents per dozen. This was attributed to the steady increase in the offerings from the United States. The receipts were 607 cases.

A feature of the potato trade was the strong feeling that developed and prices scored an advance of ten cents per bag which was attributed to the light receipts for the season of the year and the good demand. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.85 to $1.90 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.50 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk.

Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a good demand. The receipts were 53 packages.

The cheese trade was quiet, but the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 155 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—Wheat tended upward yesterday, influenced by a bigger decrease of the United States visible supply than was looked for. Closing quotations on wheat were firm 1-8 cent to 1-2 cent net higher, corn 3-4 cent to 1 1-8 cent up, oats a shade to 1-8 a 1-4 cent off, and provisions at two cents to 75 cents advance. Corn met with active speculative buying largely from previous sellers who apparently had overreached themselves and were intent on stopping further losses. Oats holders were disappointed by 100,000 bushels increase of the oats visible supply.

A Thought For To-day

Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Matt. 6:21.

When a young man complains that a young lady has no heart, it is pretty certain that she has his.—G. D. Prentice.

Heart Palpitation Dizzy, Sinking Spells

Mrs. M. A. Gagnon, Donatville, Alta., writes:—"Some time ago I was very nervous, could not sleep at night, often had dizzy, sinking spells and palpitation of the heart, and was so run down I could not do my housework, but just leave everything and sit down.

I spent a lot of money using medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me any good.

At last a friend told me to use MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS and after using a couple of boxes I was not the same woman. I began to feel so much better, and after a few more boxes I was in perfect health. I always recommend them to all those I know who are suffering from heart trouble."

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

ORAL ENGLISH COMMANDMENTS

Edward W. Stitt, district superintendent of schools, New York City, recently formulated some "commandments" for teachers of oral English. The following are some of the ten "commandments:"

No teacher shall set up any other subject as a school god of greater importance than oral English.

Thou shalt not bow down to geography, history, arithmetic, drawing or nature study, as being greater in importance than oral English, but shouldst make all school subjects the evidence of the better English for which we should always strive.

Thou shalt not kill the budding interest of the young pupils by sarcasm, or by any form of ridicule, or by discouraging their youthful efforts.

Thou shalt not be led astray to love any other subject better than oral English.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Now we know, where Santa Claus spends his summers. The old fellold can be seen after the games, frolicking around under the grand stands in the big league parks.

DIETING FOR DIABETES

(Second Article.)

Owing to old dietetic standards, most people believe that it is necessary to use a certain amount of starches and sugars in order to remain in perfect health. This is most assuredly not true.

Proteids, such as beef, eggs, chicken, fish, fowl, etc., will furnish all of the material necessary for the building of normal cells, providing it is supplemented by plenty of leafy green vegetables, both in the cooked and raw state.

Milk is also an important article of food for the diabetic, but should not be used with meals. In place of taking milk with meals, an entire meal should be made of the milk, with the possible addition of one kind of fruit, such as the citrus fruit.

In no disease has the fasting cure been so widely used by the medical profession as in this disease of diabetes. Physicians of every school to-day place their diabetic patients first on a short fast, generally using some kind of fruit juice for a few days, and then putting them on a diet relatively free from the carbohydrates.

Patients who want more bread and potatoes usually complain, but if the physician is honest, and understands dietetics, he will insist upon the patient not using these foods, and the diabetic will soon learn to do very well without them.

My experience has shown me that the short fast of four or five days is usually not enough to bring about a real cure of this trouble. If a fast of ten or twenty days is taken, more changes will take place in the body favorable to the development of increased metabolism. And if after the fast, the right foods are used, the body seems to take on a new lease of life. Strength will be increased, excessive thirst disappears, and only normal hunger is manifested to take the place of the craving appetite when the body is throwing out the excess quantities of sugar.

One who has a tendency to diabetes must keep their weight down below normal, as the tendency in this disease is toward obesity. If the disease has continued for any length of time, the kidneys and liver have been overworked in getting rid of the excess sugar. Consequently, they should be given a rest for a long time, and a minimum amount of food necessary to good health should be used.

In spite of the seriousness of this disease, it is usually curable in the case of middle-aged patients. The younger the patient is, the more difficult the cure, because if metabolism is imperfect at an early age, it shows a radical functional impairment of the liver and pancreas; while, with those of more advanced age, a certain amount of lost resistance may be expected.

Remember this: There is no magic cure any more wonderful than the fasting and diet cure, and if you wish to live a long and happy life, you had better start dieting to-day.

With this disease, it is either die or diet.

YESTERDAY'S GOOD IS TODAY'S EVIL

Advancement is not a giant stride; it is a flight of stairs.

The way we make progress is not by jumps, but by steps; not by going from evil to good, but by going from evil to lesser evil.

So the evil of today may be the discarded good of yesterday.

Slavery is an evil not countenanced in any civilized land today. Yet at one time it was good. It was a distinct moral advance over the old practice of murdering in cold blood all captives taken in warfare.

Prize fighting is looked upon as an evil now and almost all of the states have laws aimed to prevent it.

But a century ago prize fighting was a distinct advance over the brutality of the sports of former times. Even such a fight as one in 1825 when two men fought for 75 rounds with naked fists and the loser had to be put to bed with 50 leeches on him was a step up from the spectacles such as throwing ferocious dogs into a lions' cage and watching them tear each other to pieces, which had delighted the people at a previous date.

Some of the superstitions which were connected with religion in the past are now evils and repel men of greater intelligence instead of frightening them into good conduct.

They are an evil now, but at one time for more primitive people whom they kept from doing wrong, they were good.

Duelling today is a crime. At one time it was a good because it was an advance over past customs. It gave both parties a fair chance instead of being a cowardly assassination. It substituted honor for ambuscade and so at the time was a step ahead.

Today we have laws against beating wives. Wife beaters are jailed and dealt with summarily. Yet a century ago in England wife beating was considered the right of a husband. A man might beat his wife within an inch of her life and go unpunished so long as she didn't die. But if she died he was treated as a murderer.

That condition of affairs is hard to under stand today. But it was an advance over the past when, in ancient Turkey, the husband had the power of life and death over the inmates of his harem.

It is as true that the good of today may be the evil of tomorrow as it is that the evil of today was the good of the past.

The test of the times is not whether there are evils or not, but whether those evils are less or greater than the ones in the past; whether they are a step up or down. (Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

METHODS OF RELIEVING SPINAL MENINGITIS.

A reader in Baltimore wants to know about spinal meningitis.

The coverings of the brain and spinal cord are called the meninges. These membranes are two in number. The outer one is dense, firm and fibrous. This is known as the dura mater. Inside this is a thin and delicate tissue, supplying blood vessels to nourish the parts. This is called the pia mater.

The pia mater is intimately related to the spinal cord. Indeed, the blood vessels run from the coverings into the substance of the cord. The cord is a mass of delicate fibres from which spring the important nerves of the body.

These coverings of the spinal cord are liable to inflammation just as are other parts of the body. This produces a condition called spinal meningitis.

You can see how important the disease is on account of the close contact and association of the meninges with the spinal cord. It is difficult to draw a line between meningitis and inflammation of the cord itself.

We recognize two forms of spinal meningitis—the acute and chronic.

The acute form starts in with stiffness of the body. All along the spine there is soreness and tenderness, if not severe pain. Pressure on this region is painful.

Pretty soon the muscles of the back become so stiff that movement is impossible. There are sometimes cramps in the legs and in the abdomen.

The head is drawn backward. Sometimes the head is retracted and the whole body may be arched so that it rests on the head and the heels.

There may be partial or complete paralysis of the parts of the body. Failure of nutrition and bed sores may follow.

In the chronic type of spinal meningitis the symptoms come on more slowly and are not so pronounced.

In all types there may be convulsions, paralysis of single muscles, and eye disturbance. Headache, loss of appetite and every evidence of illness are likely to be present. Grinding of the teeth and other evidences of nervousness are common symptoms.

Ice packs applied to the head and spine are helpful in relieving pain.

If the victim is a child the fever and convulsions may be controlled by hot baths and sponging.

Of course the medical treatment must be given by the doctor.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a dvorce; but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, lumber king with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman Abner maliciously causes Ranny a nasty fall, then continues to flirt with Joan as the game progresses. Just as Ranny is about to make the winning shot he glances toward his sedan.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

Upon Ranny's mind, as he galloped along, there was suddenly seared the terribly earnest picture—above all playing instincts—of the wife he loved held spellbound, not by her husband's playing, but by her lover's caressing smile.

His wife, Joan, of all that vast throng the one who should be the most interested in him at this glorious moment! Not even watching him! Not interested enough to look at him; to turn her eyes away from her lover's face for a single instant.

And Abner, who had fifty thousand dollars weighing in the balance of Ranny's next stroke, but who was so sure of his personal triumph with Ranny's wife that he was not the least bit concerned about the outcome of Ranny's playing!

The first goal Ranny had made that afternoon had been the result of his own prideful determination to prove his prowess in the interloper's teeth. To show off in front of his wife.

They had been watching him then. But now—they were utterly unconscious of him, or of the mad tension of the game.

A great hurt stabbe into Ranny's heart. Gone for him was the game—everything. Mechanically, instinctively, he swung his mallet; but his involuntary start of pain had thrown Judy off balance and checked her speed, despite her own plucky attempt to keep "on the ball."

In one upheaving moment, while an astonished crowd gasped in dismay, Ranny's mallet clove harmlessly through the air—completely missing the ball!

Another moment, and Ranny had hopelessly over-ridden the ball; so great was Judy's headlong speed. A pursuing Argentine player, with a shout of joy, swooped down and shot the ball towards his Captain, who had pulled up short in midfield—incredulous, hardly daring to believe the evidence of his eyes.

It was too good to be true!—from the Argentine standpoint, that is. But the Argentine Captain did not let the fact that he THOUGHT he must be dreaming slacken the alacrity with which he took advantage of a well-placed ball and a clear field.

The pursuit of Ranny had drawn all the players, except the Argentine Captain, off to one side. The American player whose part it was to cover the Argentine Captain had been so trustfully engrossed in Ranny's seemingly certain goal dash that he neglected what the manual of team play dictated.

It was the winning break.

Straight down the middle of the field, on the trail of a devastatingly long stroke, the Argentine Captain galloped towards the American goal.

No need for him to zig-zag—to dribble. He had things all to himself. Everyone, including the sick-at-heart Ranny, was outdistanced.

A few brief seconds later, amid a stunned silence, the ball sped dead true between the American posts, and the goal attendant's flags waved their victorious signal.

There was another minute left to play. The teams lined up in midfield. But for crowd and players this was ante-climax. The game was over.

As for Ranny, his drawn face was the target of gentlemanly yet quizzical inspection for the eyes of his bewildered teammates and his rivals. Each man felt that something untoward had happened, but did not know what it was.

Ordinarily, friend and foe alike would have condoled over such a misfortune—"Tough luck, Ranny!" or words to that effect. But something warned all that even this hearty, comradely sympathy would be out of place now.

Clay Varick, the referee, alone suspected the truth.

Ranny did not care so much about the loss of the game. He was surprised to realize that. It offered proof that he had been more emotionally upset than ever before in his life.

There was an inner nervousness, an urging fire, that prompted thoughts of vengeance—immediate, violent. His bloodshot eyes roved again from the ball, seeking the object of his hatred.

Away there on the sidelines he saw Joan and Abner. A group of friends had claimed their attentions from each other, and enticed them out of the sedan to an informal chat directly beside the playing field border.

Their new position gave Ranny a sudden idea. He remembered the threat he had voiced to Clay Varick ere this game had gotten underway—that he would drive a ball through Abner's head.

That promise had been embroidered by unmeant bombast. A mere vigorous figure of speech.

Yet—why not take that early threat seriously and make it good?

It would not be so difficult for a man of his superior marksmanship. He knew that he could aim with his mallet almost as closely as could a hunter with a rifle. Long, long hours of practice had developed his direction of stroke until he could verily hit the ball into a stable bucket at a hundred feet—and that while coursing at a mad gallop.

Of course there would be the necessity of hiding—from fellow players and from spectators alike—the malicious and criminal intent of his deed. He must take that chance. The possibility of cracking Abner's head was well worth the risk of detection.

He would have to be careful. There would be others near, Joan, for instance. And a slip—

But he would not miss! The righteous wrath of a deceived husband would lend accuracy to his aim, sureness to his arm.

Of course he would not hit the ball hard enough to kill Abner. He just wanted to knock the slinky wretch out. But he must be sure to bear in mind the necessity of "pulling" his stroke a little, for a blow from a ball smashed at full strength by an expert poloist would crush like an eggshell harder heads than Abner Gratman's, if heads, indeed, came any harder than his!

There—the ball was in play now.

All these vengeful thoughts had tumbled through Ranny's fevered and out of normal brain in the brief fraction of time that the two teams faced each other for the last scrimmage of that afternoon, awaiting the final toss-in.

Ranny knew that his whole plan would go awry unless he secured immediate possession of the ball and swept it toward the appropriate side of the field. He entertained no thought of attempting to score. Abner's head was the only goal he had objectively fixed in his mind.

However, the cautious Argentines, desperately resolved that this Yankee whirlwind must not snatch their one goal advantage away from them in the very last moments of play, concentrated on an effort to keep the ball out of the flailing orbit of his mallet.

Quite likely, if it had been an ordinary goal that Ranny fixed upon, they might have succeeded, but he got the ball, for there was no stopping the super-player, whose ability was added to by passion and multiplied by shame. The shame of a cuckold!

He had been disgraced as a player, degraded as a husband, and had been the cause of the loss of an enormous wager by Livingstone Stivner, the man with whom he had hoped to consummate a coveted deal.

To cover his real purpose was not hard for so expert a player. Witnesses would merely take it for granted that a ball, zealously over-stroked, had unfortunately flown across the board and collided with a spectator's head.

Foxily Ranny coached the ball into exactly the proper position. Then—whang!

ENGLISH PAPERS DISCUSS DISASTER

Point Out Stringency of Regulations There, But Warn Against Panic.

LONDON, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press Cable).—English newspapers continue to publish voluminous reports of the Montreal theatre disaster and the loss of 77 lives.

The Daily Mail editorially points out the stringency of safety regulations governing theatres in London and elsewhere, but adds: "We need not, however, be unduly complacent. The Canadian disaster admonishes us to overhaul our own house. It must always be remembered that the worst danger is from panic. It was not fire but panic that caused the death roll in Montreal."

THE CHINESE SITUATION

The Chinese situation is one of growing gravity. On the south (shaded) is the area controlled by the Canton Government and its ally, Marshal Feng. The latter controls Kansu and most of Shensi, and is moving towards the Honan border. The Canton forces control the rest of the shaded area. The dotted area represents the anti-Canton forces, which are made up as follows: Chang-Tso-lin, in the far north, controls Manchuria (made up of the provinces of Heilungkiank, Kirin and Fengtein) and Jehol. Chang Tsung-chung controls Chihli and Shangtung. Wu Pei-fu controls Honan. Sun Chuan-fang controls Kiansu Chekiang, and the northern part of Fukien. Areas at present neutral are those left white. They are Chahar, part of Suinguan, Shansi, and Anhwei, and, on the south, Kweichow and Yunnan.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE EAGLE OF THE SEA."

Two of the popular stars of the screen are on view this week at the Capitol Theatre, in the feature picture, "The Eagle of the Sea," starring Ricardo Cortez and Florence Vidor and both have very suitable roles as the leading figures in the romance of the pirate leader, Jean Lafitte and the gentle Mademoiselle Lestron. The tang of the salt and the romantic atmosphere of old New Orleans, gives an other-time flavor to this dramatic production, which centres about the dashing figure of Lafitte, the pirate chieftain. His pirate days are over, however, when he appears in this picture, but there is plenty of excitement in the hand-to-hand fighting which features the encounter between the two ships, the Seraphine" and the "Isabella," when Lafitte and his bully boys are chased by the Spanish frigate, and the latter burns to the water's edge after a bloody encounter on the decks of the "Seraphine."

Lafitte is approached by Colonel Lestron, an intriguing American with a project to take the fast-sailing "Seraphine" and rescue the exiled Napoleon from St. Helena. The project is designed to cause war between France and England, and allow Spain, in the meantime, to seize New Orleans. Lestron's niece, mistakenly fired by the idea of rescuing the great Corsican, pledges her fortune in support of the scheme, and Lafitte is selected as the logical leader for the enterprise. He refuses to embark on a disloyal venture ,however, and informs Louise Lestron of her uncle's nefarious schemes. The girl is then spirited away by the uncle and Lafitte follows the ship which hides her and runs foul of the pursuing "Isabella." There is romance a-plenty in the delineation of ball room scenes in New Orleans, where General Jackson looks down from a box on the gay assemblage, and there are thrills and exciting situations in the episodes aboard the pirate-manned ship and its pursuer. It is an interesting, colorful picture, and has a good musical support in the excellent programme provided by the Capitol Orchestra.

AT THE REGENT

CORRINE GRIFFITH SCORES AGAIN IN "SYNCOPATING SUE"

First National Gives Its Star a Fresh, Amusing Story, and Corrinne's Beauty and Talent Does the Rest—Tom Moore in the Lead

It's a treat for most film fans just to watch Corrine Griffith's blonde beauty move across the screen, follow her graceful movements, note the charm of her manner and the style of her clothes.

But when this actress whom "Liberty Weekly" has declared the most beautiful woman in the world, appears in a story as absorbing and yet humorously spun as "syncopating Sue" an evening of unrivaled entertainment is achieved.

The capacity audiences who saw the new First National release at the Regent last night declared it one of the season's best, funnier than "Classfied," more gripping than "Into Her Kingdom," and, all in all, finished a picture as the gorgeous Corinne has ever made.

Since the nationally known magazine crowned Corinne the world's most wonderful, her name alone has served to draw huge crowds to every picture. First National has more than kept faith, however, and the latest comedy vehicle supplied Miss Griffith is joyous entertainment in itself.

Working Girl Role

"Syncopating Sut" is the tale of a piano-playing song-plugger in New York's Tin Pan Alley, whose main interests in life are her dreams of a stage career and her romance with a cabaret trap-drummers, made a lovable screen character by the charming performance of Tom Moore, who has the lead opposite the star.

There is good drama, deft comedy and sentiment sprinkled appetizingly through "Syncopating Sue." Marjorie Rambeau, famous stage star, heads the able supporting cast, including Rockliffe Fellowes, Joyce Compton, Lee Moran and Sunshine Hart. Richard Wallace did an admirable job as director.

Put "Syncopating Sue" down on your engagement pad this week. She'll show you a happy time!

POPE DISTRESSED BY MEXICAN NEWS

Asks Prayers Of All Christians When He Hears of Clash.

ROME, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—Pope Pius was greatly distressed to-day on learning of the arrest in Mexico of Bishop Diaz of Tabaseo and five other bishops. The Pontiff, who is following with profound interest and intense devotion religious events in Mexico, urging Christians of the whole world to raise prayers for the restoration of religious liberty there, has asked Cardinal Gasparri to keep in close touch with events in Mexico and to inform him of developments.

"May the prayers of all good Christians of the world be granted by the Almighty, rewarding the Mexican faithful for their sufferings," said the Pope, raising his hands to the sky, when he received news of the reported Mexican revolution from the Cardinal.

Many were the ways in which the old year was ushered out on Friday evening. About forty young people attended the rink where they remained until the dawn of another year had broken; others preferred the home where they listened with pleasure to the chimes in New York peeling out a last farewell. Some there were, who were suddenly aroused from their slumbers by the loud shrill tannery whistle which resounded for a full five minutes, at first causing some anxiety, but soon the meaning was known.

A week of prayer is being held in the United Church, having commenced on Monday evening. These meetings have thus far been very interesting and helpful. Rev. E. W. Rowland delivered the short address on Monday evening and Mr. David Weir on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday evening, Mr. F. G. Sandy had charge and Mr. H. Lamb on Thursday evening. Special music is also an added attraction each night.

21 ARE KILLED DURING CLASH OVER RELIGION

Fight Occurs Between Authorities and Catholics at Cocula.

AGRARIANS. HELP.

Orders Sent Out For All Branches To Aid Government Forces.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press). — Special despatches from Guadalajara state that twenty-one persons have been killed and ten wounded in a clash between Roman Catholics and municipal authorities in the town of Cocula, in the State of Jalisco.

The Mayor of Cocula and Local Deputy Sostenes Castillo were among those killed. The despatches, which were lacking in details, reported that the municipal authorities offered opposition to a religious demonstration, whereupon the Catholics attacked the municipal officials, employees and policemen, a battle ensuing.

The Agrarians, it was announced today, have decided to support President Calles and Mexico City headquarters have instructed all Agrarian organizations throughout Mexico to co-operate with Federal troops in clearing out the rebels.

Clearing up reports that a Federal force, under General Enrique Leon, was defeated last Friday near Durango City, Torreon specials state that General Gonzalo Escobar, Military Commandant at Torreon, has reported that the situation is merely a revival of the problem presented by the warlike Mezquital Indians, who always revolt when an opportunity presents itself.

At present, the Commandant is quoted as saying, the Indians have taken up arms under the religious banner on orders from Damaso Barhasa, "a Knight of Columbus."

Commandant Escobar said that within fifteen days he would restore peace to the State of Durango.

Reports from Saltillo say that the Catholic priests, Isaac Perea and Roman Blanco, arrested at Laragoza and Monclova respectively, have been lodged in the penitentiary.

CATHOLIC W. L. HOLDS MEETING

Interesting Address Given on Newly Formed "Sisters of Service."

DOING GOOD WORK.

A well-attended meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the assembly hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, the president, Mrs. John Lynch, in the chair. About sixty of the members were present, and listened with interest to an address on "The Sisters of Service," given by Miss Helen Lynch of Belleville, national convenor of the organization. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, and an enjoyable musical programme was given, with an instrumental duett, "In the Club" played by the Misses Eleanor Grisdale and Helen Lynch, vocal solos by Miss Florence Murray, who sang "Smilin' Through" and "A Brown Bird Singing," with accompaniment by Mrs. Hodgson, and an instrumental duett, "Le Secret," by Mrs. Hodgson and Miss Margaret McCabe.

Miss Lynch, who has a pleasing delivery and well-modulated voice, gave an interesting description of the work of "The Sisters of Service," a community recently formed in Canada, with Mother House in Toronto, whose chief work is done in the Canadian West, in looking after the foreigners who come to this country without much knowledge of its ways and modes of life. On February 3rd, 1925, a Federal charter was granted to the organization, which has now thirty-nine sisters in the community, twenty-one of whom are professed, eight are novices and ten are postulants. Applications are coming in, in increasing numbers. After six months of postulancy, the uniform is received, and a year of novitiate entered upon, when instructions are given in pedagogy, liturgy, first aid, practical nursing and social service work, with special training in whatever branch the applicant wishes to enter upon, in teaching, nursing or social work. The vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience are renewed annually, until the time of final profession. The Sisters take charge of hospitals and schools and do social service work. In the West, they also take charge of hostels, and in the East, do a great deal of work in ocean ports. In Western Canada, they have charge already of several small hospitals and hostels, where immigrant girls are looked after, and also teach schools in isolated sections, where the children walk or ride on horseback for many miles, to reach the school. They have recently taken charge of the Loretto Community House in Montreal, formerly supervised by the Catholic Women's League, where immigrant girls are received and looked after.

Miss Lynch spoke of the assistance needed in the work, in the way of prayer, vocations and money, and of the amount of $3,500 pledged towards this work by the Catholic Women's League at its Ottawa convention last June, also referring to the effort of Rev. Father Daly to accumulate 500,000 dimes to help in paying off the mortgage on the Mother House in Toronto. Later, Miss Lynch spoke earnestly in support of membership in the Catholic Women's League, impressing on her audience the necessity of supporting its manifold efforts by belonging to the organization.

Rev. Father Costello, who was present, spoke briefly in support of Miss Lynch's appeal for support of the work of the Sisters of Service, speaking in enthusiastic terms of the good work done by the community.

A hearty vote of thanks to Miss Lynch was moved by the president, Mrs. John Lynch, and seconded by Mrs. F. J. McFadden.

Mr. Donald McKinnon attended the meeting as spokesman from the Knights of Columbus, asking the ladies to form an afternoon bowling league at the K. of C. alleys, and the following committee to consider the suggestion was appointed by the president: Mrs. J. Roach, Mrs. W. Whaley, Mrs. R. McGarrell, Mrs. H. Owens, Mrs. J. J. Doris and Mrs. G. White.

MISSIONARY GIVES INSTRUCTIVE TALK

Dr. J. L. Stewart Tells About Conditions in China.

One of the most outstanding and interesting addresses on present day conditions in China, was given by Dr. J. L. Stewart, vice-president of the China United University, West China, at the fourth regular meeting of the men of the George street United on Monday evening, Jan. 10th.

The meeting took the form of a luncheon and many guests from other churches of the city were present. Dr. J. E. Middleton, the chairman, when calling upon C. S. Thompson, editor of the Gas-Bag paper, for an instrumental, expressed the regrets of the organization to know that Mr. Thompson was leaving the city. Mr. Thompson, accompanied by Miss Laura MacFarland, rendered some old time melodies on the harmonica, which were enjoyed by all present.

Without delay the speaker of the evening, Dr. J. L. Stewart, was introduced. His pleasing and humorous introduction to his talk, made his listeners feel that he was just having an old time chat with them.

Dr. Stewart outlined the cause of the present day conditions in China, and the effect these conditions have nationally, and on the campaign for the Kingdom of God in China. He briefly outlined the history of China since 1644, and stated that the real power in China lay in her leaders who were scattered throughout the country, and the conditions of the country depend greatly on the area.

During times when great chaos prevailed foreign merchants and missionaries never had such prosperous times for then the people looked to them for help and protection.

The missionaries of China have been hampered in their work by waves of public opinion. The anti-foreign wave was caused by a republican party and spread rapidly throughout China. The anti-Christian wave began in communities in central China, where atheism was prevalent, and the anti-British wave was started by many who thought that Britain was gaining commercial advantages over China.

Dr. Stewart stated that there are three main causes of the present day agitation, namely, sovereign right, which means that foreign countries claim part of China, and the Chinese think their ancient empire is being taken from them; extra-territoriality, which means that the Chinese wish foreigners to abide by the laws existing in China; and custom autonomy, meaning that the Chinese want the right to fix their own custom duties. He also stated that foreign countries cannot find the proper bodies in China to negotiate with in order to remedy these conditions. We must build up the Chinese civilization or the Chinese will pull our civilization down. Our greatest safety is to preach the Gospel of Peace.

A vote of thanks was tnedered to the speaker of the evening by Dr. Mole and Mr. H. G. Walker. The meeting closed by the singing of the Doxology.

TEST OF JURORS REVEALS PLANS

Difference Between 'Apparent' and Actual Danger Among Questions.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 11. Canadian Press. — The line between "apparent' and "actual" danger, and what type of danger is sufficient to justify a man in taking the life of another, is to be drawn in the Norris murder trial, the examination of prospective jurors revealed here to-day.

Dr. J. Frank Norris is on trial for the killing of D. E. Chipps, of Fort Worth. The effect of the Norris church radio and his paper, the "Searchlight," on public opinion in the county, also is to be a factor in the selection of the jury.

Questions showed as the case moved forward rapidly after the defense counsel had decided not to ask for the continuance which yesterday they intimated would be their move.

Within half an hour after both sides announced themselves ready, one juror had been selected out of the first three men examined.

In Peterborough Churches

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN

The tremendous issues involved in taking a wrong or right course in life, even although these issues may not be apparent to the individual concerned or to the world around, were strikingly illustrated in the sermon delivered Sunday evening by Rev. Wm. Allan, in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. Preceding the service there was a fifteen minute organ recital by the organist, Mr. M. B. Chennall, a feature which is becoming increasingly popular in St. Paul's, and drawing larger and larger attendances. There are indications that the new organ in St. Paul's will have an important influence in creating an increasing interest in the city in high grade music and thus prove a distinct benefit to the community.

The sermon was based on the text found in Mathew 7:24, where Christ drew a contrast between two men, one of whom built his house upon a rock while the other built his upon the sand. The 7th chapter of Mathew, the speaker said, contained some of the most solemn teachings in the New Testamant. These are all the more solemn because it was Christ who gave utterance to them. Even enemies of Christ admitted that no man spake as He did. The words in question were not spoken idly. Christ knew exactly what was going on in human experience. He knew the secret acts and thoughts of those about Him, and was not mislead by their words or religious professions.

Interesting Comparisons

There was a certain similarity between the two men. First, they had both heard the same teacher, and the same sermon. The teacher was unique. There was none like him. He taught the truth in love. He spoke with authority and not as the Scribes. He did not hesitate to tell the truth about people, even calling leaders among the Jews "whited sepulchres." The Apostle John bore testimony of Him that He needed not that any man should tell Him about men, for He knew what was in them. Nathaniel was astounded hen he found that Christ was able to tell him what his secret thoughts had been.

The sermon tese two men heard was clear. There was no ambiguity about it. There were only two ways, a right and a wonrg, a broad and a narrow. Any man charged by God to preach the Gospel who fears to preach the way of Salvation to people of his congregation—because he may offend some member of the congregation with a large purse, or some other member of influence—is not fit to be in the ministry. Both the men in question were impressed by what they heard. They each selected a foundation for their house. Both felt it necessary to build a house. They both realized the need of a shelter. All men realize instinctively that death is not the end of this life. There is something beyond. People do not mind being asked about their health, but they are very apt to resent it when asked about the welfare of their soul.

Both men were tested in the same way. There is a test coming for us all. When God touches a soul and it is born again, that new born child of God is saved for all eternity. Those who refuse to pay heed to the message of salvation, on the other hand, after death must face the fires and storms of judgment. If you are unsaved what protection have you from that storm?

In the Scriptures we have a picture of the dead, small and great, standing before God. This group will include some men of wealth and influence, and possibly some poor washer-woman. When they stand before the judgment seat the Book of Life will be opened. What a dramatic exposure that will be of the frauds, fakers and fools who will there be judged.

Points of Difference

There were certain points of difference between the two men. One was wise and the other unwise. One chose a solid foundation, the other one of sand. All that part of the building above ground, which people see, was presumably somewhat similar. The weakness lay in the foundation. One man had his eyes on the future, and the other on the present. The difference was revealed by the storm. Rev. Mr. Allan closed with an urgent appeal to those present to enquire upon what sort of foundation their spiritual lives were resting. If they were trusting in church attendance, church membership, or their good deeds, their foundations were of sand. Only lives built on Christ as the perfect foundation would be able to stand in the Day of Judgment.

ST. PAUL'S MEN ENJOY MEETING

Madme Fletcher, Miss Senior and Miss Moore Present Outstanding Programme.

SUPPER GATHERING.

A splendid meeting of the men of St. Paul's was held last night, the banquet hall being comfortably filled. The musical programme was outstanding, with numbers contributed by Madame Fletcher, Miss Senior, and little Miss Moore, elocutionist; all receiving hearty applause from an audience that fully appreciated the talent displayed.

The business session was brief, the members of the organization deciding, on suggestion of Hurrell Dodds, to provide draught-proof shields for the windows of the church. Adam Sands was present to advocate the organization of a young people's society, and the gathering left the details to Rev. W. Allan and Mr. Sands to work out.

An address on the functions of the newspaper was given by John R. Heron, City Editor of The Examiner, introduced by E. F. Mason.

The meeting was presided over by William Lyburn, President of the Association, and J. L. Fair proposed the vote of thanks to the artists.

Omaha, Neb.: An astounding new invention now makes it possible for autos to run 120 miles on two gallons of gas. Besides the miraculous gasoline mileage this new discovery, called Quickstart, starts the coldest motor instantly in zero weather. RAILWAY UNIONS ASK RESTRICTION OF SENATE VETO

Would Have Bill Passed Third Time By House Become Law.

INTERVIEW PREMIER.

Ask For Changes in Criminal Code and Passage of Pension Bill.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—That the British North America Act should be amended so as to restrict the powers of the Senate to veto a bill passed by the House of Commons more than twice was urged upon the government today by representatives of the four international railway brotherhoods. Further restriction of Asiatic immigration, re-introduction of the old age pensions legislation defeated last year in the Senate, and amendments to the Criminal Code were among suggestions made.

Representatives of the railway brotherhoods met Premier King and members of the Cabinet shortly after noon today.

L. I. Peltier represented the Order of Railway Conductors; Byron Baker, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; E. J. Coughlin, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and W. L. Best, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. They presented a memorandum of proposed legislation for consideration of the Government.

Premier King promised every consideration to the suggestions in legislation placed before him and his cabinet by the representatives. He told the delegation that the old age pensions bill will be reintroduced this session. The bill passed the Commons last session but was turned down by the Senate.

The suggestion was made by the delegation that Provincial governments might be given a greater share of the cost of pensions and that part of the profit made by the government control of liquor sales might be used for that purpose.

Premier King did not commit himself on this point but remarked that it was "an interesting suggestion."

OBITUARY.

CHARLES OTIS NORTHEY.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 11.—The funeral took place on Friday afternoon from the residence of his father, Mr. W. J. Northey, Reid street, of Charles Otis Northey. The funeral service was in charge of Rev. Verson McNeilly, pastor of the Selwyn United church, assisted by Rev. S. Kemp and Rev. T. M. Wesley. Mr. McNeilly paid a tribute in his brief address to the exemplary qualities of the deceased, whom he had known for years and who was, in his home, in the church and in the community, a man who had a high standard to which he consistently lived up. The speaker closed by saying, "It behooves us all to so order our lives that there will be no moaning at the bar when we put out to sea." The Masonic service followed with W Bro. T. W. B. Marling acting as chaplain. There was a large attendance from Clementi Lodge and there was also present a large number of members of Lodge 358, I.O.O.F., of which the deceased had also been a member. The pallbearers were Bros. J. R. Hull, A. H. Clarke, W. J. Charlton, Theo. Crawford, W. G. Morrison and G. G. Connell.

Besides the Masonic brethren there were present scores of people, friends, relatives and neighbors who wished to pay a tribute to a young man, well known and well liked, whose life had been one of community service. Always ready to lend a helping hand he numbered his friends in village, city and country. For years he has held the position of assessor of the township of Smith to the satisfaction of all and his death leaves a gap in the community life which will be hard to fill.

The long procession of motors and cutters passed quietly down the hill and down Queen street en route to Lakefield cemetery, where about a year ago was laid the remains of Mrs Northey, mother of the deceased.

There were many floral tributes from friends who, with flowers, expressed the sympathy in their hearts for the family circle, bereft of a loved member.

ROBERT FAIR.

MADOC, Jan. 11.—In the passing of Robert Fair on Saturday in the Kingston General Hospital, Madoc lost one of her best citizens. As a young man, the late Mr. Fair had lived in Madoc and prepared for his business career in the hardware store operated by J. C. Dale and Sons. He then went to Bancroft to manage a store of his own, and lived in that town about thirty-five years. When he retired from active work, he returned to Madoc, where he has resided for the last eleven years. Mr. Fair was a public-spirited man, taking his part in the affairs of the town. He acted on the Madoc Village Council for a year and on the High School Board for three years. He was a great worker in the Methodist Church, being superintendent of the Sunday School for the past eight years, and also a member of the Trustee Board. Mr. Fair performed similar services in church and civic positions while living in Bancroft.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Elgin Street to the United Church on Monday at two o'clock, when Rev. A. H. Foster, pastor of the church, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Mr. Mellar of Picton, and Rev. Mr. Strother of St. John's Anglican Church. Rev. Mr. Marshall of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church was unable to be present owing to illness.

The Sunday School children attended in a body to pay their last respects to their well-loved superintendent. The hymn, "When He Cometh," was sung by the children, and as they passed by the casket each placed a small bow of white ribbon upon it. An anthem was sung by the choir.

Rev. Mr. Mellar, who read the Scripture lesson, also made a few remarks, touching upon his friendship with the late Mr. Fair, and referring to the great help Mr. Fair had been to him years ago, when he first went to Bancroft as a missionary. He spoke of Mr. Fair's love for children and the fact that he had been in active work in the church for forty years.

Rev. Mr. Foster preached the funeral sermon, speaking of the great loss the church had suffered in the passing of Mr. Fair and of the splendid assistance he had been to the church here during his years of residence in Madoc.

The late Mr. Fair was born near Campbellford sixty-nine years ago. An aged mother still survives him, and one brother of Lansing, Michigan; his wife and two daughters, Mrs. W. Ludbrook and Miss Norma, to all of whom the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

FARMER HELD FOR CAUSING DEATH OF WIFE

Charged With Setting Fire Which Destroyed Home Early Saturday.

NEAR BROCKVILLE.

Suspected Man and His Son Were Away From Home at Time.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 11.—Albert Debruge, farmer, aged 52, was arrested late yesterday afternoon, charged with setting fire to his farm residence and causing the death of his wife, formerly Jane Lameront, of Ottawa. The residence, four miles from Brockville, was completely destroyed by fire Saturday morning between three and five o'clock and that afternoon the woman's charred body was found in the ruins.

The information for the warrant to arrest Debruge was sworn out by Provincial Constable S. J. Elliott, following a visit to the farm yesterday.

A postmortem examination of the body will be made.

When arested Debruge had on his person victory bonds to the value of $7,100, also $81 in cash. He is on ticket of leave from Kingston Penitentiary having been sentenced in December, 1923, to serve seven years for the shooting and mutilation of horses owned by a neighbor.

Debruge is about fifty-four years of age while his wife was forty-two. They have two children, a son, George, aged nineteen, and a daughter, Lillian, thirteen. The house was burned to the ground early Saturday morning, the father and son having left home the previous night at eleven o'clock for Lyn where it was said they were to be engaged for fox hunting the next morning. The daughter Lillian, was with her father's mother, a few rods east of the burned dwelling in which the victim had been left alone.

THE WAITING.

A storm swept road—
The dark before the dawn—
The sleet and the snow
Driving—pelting on;
And there, as I stood,
Waiting for the car,
I saw an old man
Sadly under par.
Threadbare, his clothing,
Poorly shod, his feet—
Wind and storm together
Had covered him with sleet.
Body all a tremble,
Misery and woe—
Came his voice a calling—
"Mister, do ye know,
Is this here the place
Whar the street cars come?
I don't see no lights
An' I hear no hum;
An' the cold's so sharp
It sets my teeth a gratin'—
Seems sech a long time to wait
When yer just a waitin'"

A long time to wait
When there's naught but waiting
God give them measures
Of the finest rating.
Age at the station—
To all a glad farewell
Tired of just a waiting,
Welcoming the bell
The tolling, pealing bell.

HEART RENDING SCENES TO-DAY DUE TO TRAGEDY

Parents and Friends Crowd Montreal Morgue and Hospitals.

SEEK LITTLE ONES.

Even Morgue Officials, Accustomed To Death, Stricken With Horror.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10 (Canadian Press) — The citizens of Montreal this morning were sorrowfully surveying the havoc wrought yesterday afternoon when, within a few brief minutes, the lives of 77 children were snuffed out and 24 other persons were more or less seriously injured, as the result of the panic in the Laurier Palace moving picture theatre which followed an alarm of fire. The little victims, whose ages ranged from only five years of age to sixteen or seventeen were for the most part suffocated by smoke or trampled to death under the feet of the throng which jammed the exits in the wild rush to safety.

The tragedy is one of the most poignant that has ever occurred in this city, and is the greatest moving picture catastrophe that has happened in this country. In several cases more than one member of the family was killed. Constable Albert Boisseau, of the Retreaultville police station, lost his three children.

All yesterday afternoon and evening there was a heartrending procession of distracted parents to the city morgue, where the 70 little bodies were laid out, awaiting identification. The scenes within the building were unparalleled in their tragedy and pathos as heartbroken mothers, crazed with grief, came to seek, and in too many cases to claim, some pitiful little corpse. Stricken to the depths with the horror and the sorrow of it all, the officials guided the mourning parents among the bodies, themselves, grim and unemottional as a rule, breaking into tears at the sad and unprecedented spectacle. For hours an endless line of fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers passed before Coroner McMahon as the aged official, his head bowed in grief and his heart filled with sympathy, assisted them to fulfill the requirements of the law. Working ceaselessly and giving to each bereaved parent the same kindly attention throughout the night, the coroner issued death certificates after all identifications had been made and the cause of death determined.

WHISKERS OF TIGERS AUCTIONED

WUCHOW, China, Jan. 11.—The whiskers of a tiger are supposed to bring good luck. Also, cut into small bits, the whiskers are said to make a strong medicine, and the Chinese esteem them highly.

Accordingly, a few days ago in Wuchow, when a tiger, trapped nearby, was received by freight, a crowd gathered and an auction was held. The whiskers sold for about 20 cents each, the buyer reaching into the cage and yanking them out himself.

CHURCH SOCIETIES HOLD MEETINGS

Christ Church A.Y.P.A. and Guild and United Ladies' Aid.

OMEMEE, Jan. 10.—The regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. was held in Christ Church lecture room on Monday night. There was a very small attendance, only about twenty being present.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. F. Bent and Mrs. T. C. Stephenson for their work in connection with the play presented by the young people on New Year's night, also to Misses Helen Mackey and Jane Earle for their assistance in piano numbers, and to others who did so much to make the event a success.

The regular meeting of Christ Church Guild was held at the home of Mrs. David Deyell, on Wednesday, with seventeen members present. As this was the first meeting of the year, the reports of the secretary and treasurer were presented, showing excellent progress during the year.

The following officers were chosen for the coming year:— President, Miss Irene Clemett; Vice-President, Miss E. Curry; Secretary, Miss C. Cornwall; Treasurer, Mrs. F. Bent.

After some discussion on the work of the year, the meeting was brought to a close, after which afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Deyell.

The ladies of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. William Earle on Thursday afternoon, for their regular monthly meeting. There were twenty-eight ladies present. In the absence of the president, the chair was ably filled by Mrs. Harry Lamb, the 2nd vice-president. The Scripture reading was read by Mrs. R. Foast.

Reports were given by the secretary and treasurer, the latter report showing after all expenses had been deducted, the amount made at the bazaar to be $196.30.

Correspondence was read which included expressions of thanks from church members who had been remembered at Christmas time by the Society. From the Fred Victor Mission and the Deaconess' Home, Toronto, were letters of gratitude for cases of fruit recently sent them, also one from Miss Ruby Feir to the Society for the kindnesses shown the family in their recent sad bereavement.

Miss Rita Kennedy was made responsible for the missionary talk in Sunday School the first Sunday in February.

A synopsis of the third chapter of the Study Book will be given by Mrs. F. G. Sandy at the next meeting.

Other business included several committees, who would be responsible for the purchasing of material to commence work for the bazaar.

A vote of thanks was passed and will be extended to Mr. C. L. Morcombe, who disposed of the electric lamp, left after the bazaar, at a nice sum

The devotional leaflet entitled, "Faith in Our Fellowmen" was read by Mrs. Robert Wilson.

Mrs. J. Widdis gave a synopsis of the second chapter in the Study Book, which showed careful preparation; the title being, "In the Steps of the Great Physician."

A short item on "Medical Work in India" was read by Mrs. R. Bradley, after which prayers were offered by Mrs. R. Foast and Mrs. Bushnell, and the meeting closed with the benediction.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Harry Bradley, Mrs. J. Shields and Mrs. A. Rutherford.

Keep Baby's Skin Soft as Velvet

Prevent and Relieve Eczema

Mrs. Albert Bishop, 38 Laplanche St., Amherst, N.S., writes:—"In one week my baby was entirely relieved of eczema by the use of two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. He had sores all over his back."

EVERYWHERE Dr. Chase's Ointment is known and appreciated by mothers who have with gratitude witnessed the benefit it has brought to their suffering children.

Chafing and cracking of the skin is often the beginning of eczema. The trouble develops where two surfaces of skin rub together—as in the neck, armpits or between the legs of fleshy infants.

Dr. Chase's Ointment applied after the bath brings relief from this condition and prevents eczema.

Never Let a Cold Get a Start

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold but only one DIRECT way—with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like a "vapor lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

This double, direct action often checks the worst cold overnight.

PRESBYTERIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL

Annual Entertainment Held at Warsaw—Presentation Made.

U.F.O. MEETING.

WARSAW, Jan. 8.—The Presbyterian Sunday School held its annual entertainment on Saturday evening in the Town Hall. The Hall was well-filled. Every seat was taken, and several had to stand. There was a good program consisting of recitations, choruses, dialogues and selections by the orchestra, also two presentations to Dr. Munro. One was a Teacher's Bible and pencil. Dr. Munro has been Sunday School superintendent and Bible class teacher since the United Church was organized, and often the only Presbyterian service has been the Sunday school.

The Sunday School's Address was—

"Dear Dr. Munro:

"We, your friends and co-workers of the Presbyterian Sunday school, feel that we could not let this opportunity pass without showing in a small way our high appreciation of your work in the Sunday school and Bible class.

"Your personality, with its outstanding traits of kindness, geniality, and shrewdness, has endeared you to us all in many ways.

"We have found you ever ready to assist in any worthy cause.

"We ask you to accept this Teacher's Bible and pencil as a slight token of esteem toward you.

We trust that God's blessing may always be showered upon you and yours, and we sincerely hope that health, happiness, and prosperity, may accompany you through the years to come.

"At this particular season we wish you a Bright and Happy New Year. Signed on behalf of the Warsaw Sunday school and Bible class—

"Elsie Tucker,
"John Rose."

The other gift was a violin case and a metronome from his orchestra.

The address ran—

"Dear Dr. Munro:

"We, the members of your orchestra, thought that this, the beginning of what we hope to be a Bright and Happy New Year for you, would be an appropriate time to express our gratitude for your untiring efforts in trying to bring us up to a standard of efficiency.

"Your personality, with its outstanding traits of kindliness and geniality, has endeared you to us in many ways. we know that, at times, some of us must have sorely tried your patience, but we have yet to see you show some sign of displeasure. So you have proved that a man can be a scholar, a doctor, a violinist, and yet be a 'man for a' that.'

"As an expression of our appreciation of the services rendered, we ask you to accept these little gifts, not for their intrinsic worth, but for the spirit of the givers.

"If, in the years to come, perchance, some members who are here tonight, may be far away, we hope that when you look upon these little tokens, your thoughts will stray back to the many pleasant hours we have spent together, and you will cherish a happy memory for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne.

"Signed on behalf of the orchestra:
"Evelyn McMurray,
"Elsie Cooper,
"Reta Watley."

In his usual happy strain the doctor thanked the donors for their gifts.

Diplomas and seals for regular attendance were given. Jean Munro received the new alumni diploma for eight years regular attendance. Mary Rose and Gwendolyn McQuaig received gold seals for seven year regular attendance. John Rose received a silver seal for six years attendance. The purple seals for five years' attendance went to Willie Miles, Johnny Miles, Teddy Rose, Kathleen Dunford, and Ruth McQuaig.

Sudden draughts in a hot room cause stiffness

RELIEVES STIFFNESS CAUSED BY CHILL

Pressman tells how newspaper workers keep fit

The pressmen working in a newspaper office at Dorchester, Mass., used to have great trouble with rheumatic stiffness owing to frequent sudden draughts of cold air when the doors were opened to take in rolls of paper.

One of their number began using Sloan's Liniment and now they all chip in to keep Sloan's always on hand for the entire shop.

"After my day's work I rub a little Sloan's Liniment on my back and legs. It never fails."

Apply gently, without rubbing. Right away you feel the comfortable, glowing warmth as the new blood is brought to the sore spots, and soon the aching stops. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

MISSIONARY VISITS OMEMEE CHURCH

Rev. J. W. Craig Preaches in United Church on His Work.

OMEMEE, Jan. 11.—The congregation of Trinity United Church was most privileged in having as preacher on Sunday last the Rev. J. W. Craig, a returned missionary from Japan and one in whom the community feels a special interest, as he not only received his high school education in Omemee, but also was converted in the same church during his sojourn here in days gone by.

Mr. Craig was a most interesting speaker. At the morning service, he drew a graphic word picture of his situation in Japan, giving his hearers a wonderful insight into Japanese life and his work there. Mr. Craig lives in a modern house in Kobe, a city larger than Toronto, and from which one may travel by street car for forty minutes and then enter a city of two million inhabitants. Between these two cities, on the crest of a hill may be seen a group of buildings with their red-tiled roofs, showing through the foliage; said buildings being the mission schools, hospital, etc., of the United Church of Canada. Here Mr. Craig labors each day, teaching not only Bible Study, but commercial work. Each morning he addresses 1600 male Japanese students, ranging in age from 14 years to manhood.

At the evening service, Mr. Craig recalled many happenings of by-gone days, spent in Omemee before commencing his discourse which dealt with the three main problems, which the missionaries have to confront.

The first great problem is the "Industrialization of the Orient." Mr. Craig told of the people when he went there 11 years ago. They wore no shoes, only cloth and no hats, but now shoes are worn and the men wear christies and even Borsalinos. The reason for this, was the numerous industries springing up, thus giving more employment. Much is being exported to Canada and to other parts of the world, and can be brought in at less cost than Canadian-made goods.

The second great problem is the "Race Problem." He told of the attitude of the commercial world to the coored races and their resentment of this sense of inferiority.

The third problem is the "Awakening of the Japanese to their importance in the world." A startling statement to many was that at any time of necessity, the "Japs," could put three men in the trenches for every one white man.

Mr. Craig in summing up these three great problems applied the missionary effort by means of the Gospel and the Christian literature as a cure for all this trouble.

At the close of each service, Mr. Craig was warmly welcomed by many old friends and acquaintances, who were pleased to see him after an absence of 37 years.

Mr. Abraham Laidley is receiving congratulations on having celebrated another birthday on Sunday. Mr. Laidley, although well over his seventieth mile-stone in life is still hale and hearty and spent New Year's afternoon skating with the young folk of the village on the rink, and he enters into the sport so thoroughly that he is envied his keen enjoyment by plenty of people many years his junior.

WARKWORTH NEWS

WARKWORTH, Jan. 5.—Mr. J. F Goforth of Toronto, son of Jonathan Goforth, missionary in China, gave two interesting addresses on Sunday in the Presbyterian Church. In the evening the lesson was taken from the first part of the ninth chapter of Genesis and the text was taken from the same chapter, thirteenth verse. "I do set my bow in the cloud and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth."

Mr. Goforth told a story to the boys and girls and very emphatically impressed upon them the importance of high ideals and carrying them out and not selling them for things of the earth that do not amount to anything.

The subject of the sermon was a message of the rainbow and the message is for everyone. A message of hope, encouragement and comfort. In every aspect of life there is a time for trials such as anxiety, sorrow, sin and death, and when these things seem hardest, there is always the rainbow as God's message.

Would we ever appreciate the perfect peace if we had no tribulations.

Crucifixion, the symbol of disgrace has become today the symbol of eternal life. God times our trials according to our endurance. God is not a hard task master. The message of the rainbow is above all a compensation. Our lives are compensated. Those who find this life hard know that in the life to come they will receive their reward. Mr. Goforth advised as we go along this coming year to give a helping hand, a smile or a word of comfort to help others to receive God's promise, the message of the rainbow.

Mr. J. H. Mowat has returned to Toronto after spending the holidays at the parental home.

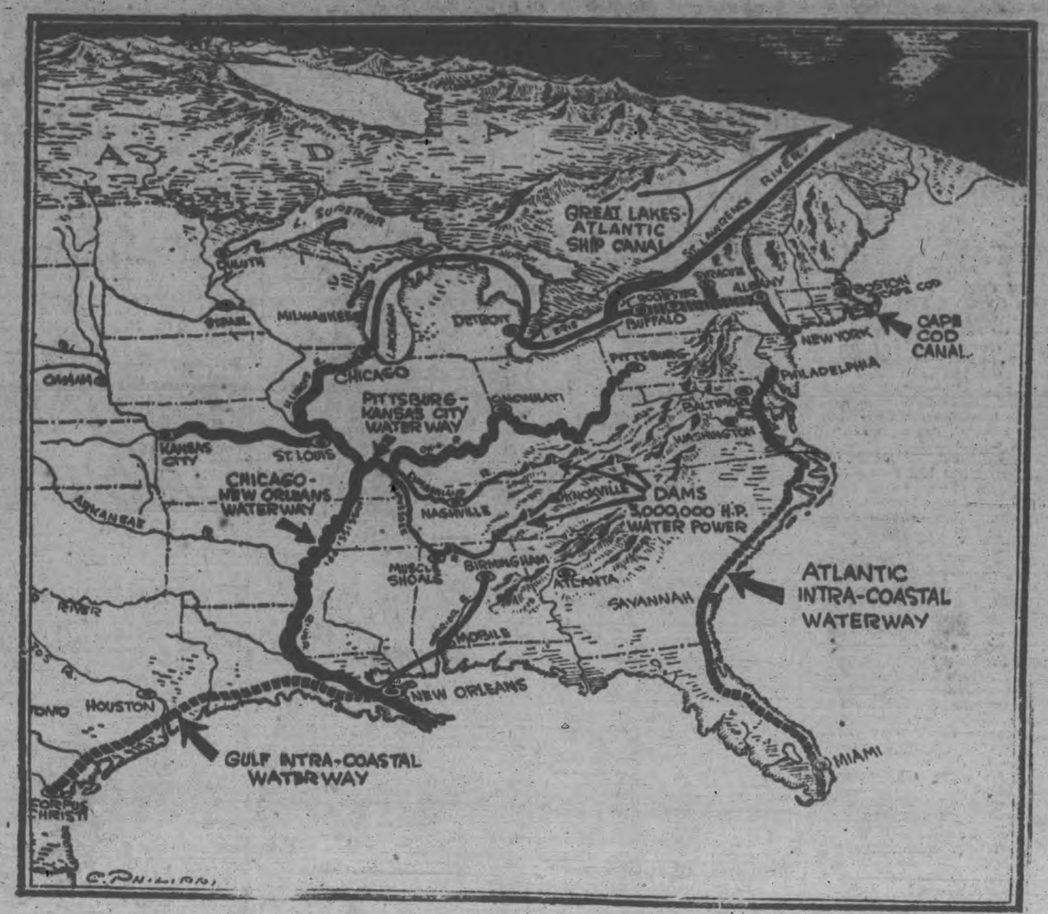
BLAZING AIR TRAIL

Sir Samuel Hoare, British air minister, and Lady Hoare, who together are winging their way on an 18,000 mile air journey.



Great interest has been aroused in the United States by Secretary Hoover's ambitious program for canal construction which, with associated power developments, would add to the nation's income, it is said, one billion dollars per year. Mr. Hoover favors the deep St. Lawrence waterway to the sea, if terms can be arranged with Canada; otherwise he might favor the all-American canal across New York state from Buffalo to Albany. The routes for both projects are indicated on the map. Mr. Hoover also favors the construction of a nine foot barge canal along the Atlantic coast, linked up with a waterway running from Pittsburg to Kansas, a distance of 1500 miles. The location of these waterways is also shown on the map. Hoover would have the federal government take over the Cape Cod canal, modernizing it and making it toll free, and he would construct a 14-foot barge canal along the Atlantic Coast from the Delaware river to the end of Florida. He proposes another coastal canal, 9 feet deep, along the Gulf, from the mouth of the Mississippi to the Rio Grande river. He says that three million h.p. of electric energy can be generated on the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers that will check floods of the Mississippi river and provide a 6-foot navigation canal. The St. Lawrence scheme is dependent on Canada's approval, which will not be given until agreement has been reached as to whether one or two huge dams will be built across the river.

The Prince of Wales, wearing a polka dot bow tie, is seen cutting the cake at a party which was held in Buckingham Palace by the "not-forgotten" association.

The map above shows the St. Lawrence waterway route which has been strongly endorsed by the United States commission, headed by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce. The numbers marked on the map indicate: (1) Location of "Soo" locks, lift 21 feet handling over eighty millions tons of commerce in 1925. (2) St. Clair and Detroit rivers, connecting Lakes Huron and Erie. Traffic ninety million tons. (3) Welland Canal (to be completed in 1930). Lift 325 1-2 feet. Seven locks each 820 feet long, 80 feet wide, and 30 feet deep. Ship time from Erie to Ontario eight hours. (4) St. Lawrence river, Ogdensburg to Montreal. Present canals, 14 feet deep, carried six million two hundred thousand tons in 1925. (5) Montreal, second greatest city of North America in overseas commerce. (6) Sea route, Montreal-Europe. (7) New York substitute ship canal route from Lake Ontario to Hudson river.

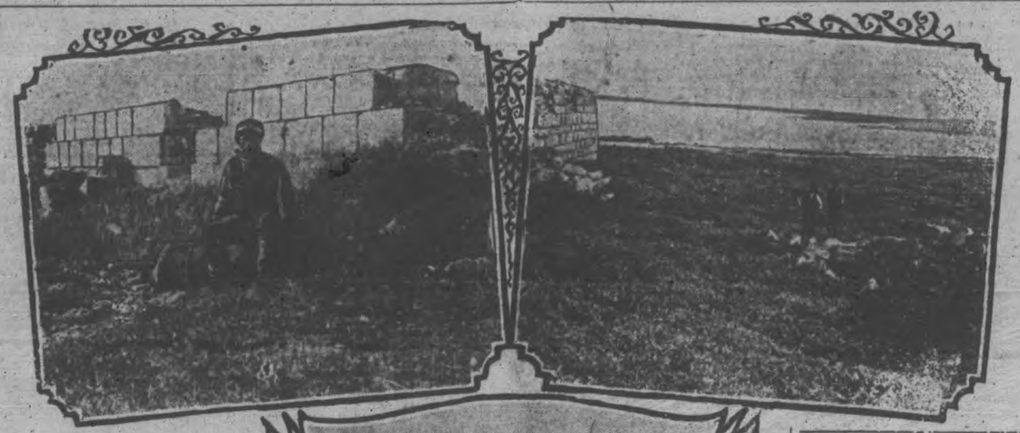
WOULD RETIRE JUDGES.

Dr. Peter McGibbon, Conservative M.P. for Muskoka, at the present session of parliament, will urge that all Canadian judges retire from the bench at the age of 75.



Above at TOP LEFT are shown the ruined battlements of Fort Prince of Wales, overlooking Hudson Bay, once a mighty fortress. The Chippewa Indian is sitting on a dismantled gun. TOP RIGHT shows the view across Churchill harbor from Fort Prince of Wales. The LOWER picture shows the general scene of desolation at Port Nelson after years of neglect of the terminal for proposed western grain route.

John Daily, seen ABOVE, is seventeen and Madele Boyle, beside him, is only 14 but when they wanted to be married in Syracuse, N.Y., the other day they gave their ages as twenty-one and eighteen. John is now to serve a sentence in reformatory for perjury and his bride, faced with the alternative of returning to her parents or going a girls' home, has chosen the latter.

Mussolini is so busy that he takes only three minutes for the principal meal of the day which he glorifies by calling it dinner. The conception of the artist in showing the modern Caesar employing a weirdly automatic feeder in order that his hands may be otherwise employed is not entirely a humorous idea, because Mussolini does not permit his work to stop while he is eating. He keeps one or more secretaries in attendance at the table.

Lady Louis Mountbatten, wife of the Prince of Wales' cousin, who underwent a serious operation in London recently. Lady Louis Mountbatten was the former Edwina Ashley, the richest heiress in Great Britain. She and Lord Louis were married in 1922.

Sir Hugh Trenchard, who has been appointed British air marshal, a post corresponding to that of admiral of the fleet.

John Pullen, for many years president of the Canadian Express Company, whose death occurred in Montreal recently at the age of 63, after three years' illness, following his retirement after the Canadian National amalgamation in 1923. Mr. Pullen was a native of England and came to Canada while still boy.

Three widely-known personages, representing as many nations, figured in a hunting spill in the Melton Mowbray district of England. Capt. Alfred Lowenstein, Belgian multi-milionaire, was thrown from his horse. His royal highness, the Prince of Wales, pursued and caught the runaway steed, while Mrs. Reid G. Fenwick, formerly Peggy Marsh, the stage star, joined in the chase. Lowenstein is shown at the UPPER LEFT; "Peggy" in an athletic pose, in the CENTRE; His Royal Highness at the RIGHT, and "Peggy" BELOW. Capt Lowenstein is reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in the world, and one of the powers behind European politics. He may visit Canada and the United States next year, it is rumored.

Was Nearly Crazy With Boils All Over His Body

Mr. S. L. Burke, Barronsfield, N.S., writes:—"For some time I was nearly crazy with boils all over my body. I tried everything I could think of to get rid of them, but to no avail, for as soon as one was healed up another would appear to take its place.

I was advised to take

and after I had used two bottles the boils had all disappeared and I have not been troubled with them since."

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Dad," Faith followed her father to the front porch the next morning, as he was leaving for his work, "Are you and—Bob Hathaway getting along all right?"

Jim Lane's near-sighted brown eyes peered at her with intent, searching kindliness. "About as usual," he answered slowly, "He's gettin' pretty restless about the job—them bungalows I'm buildin' for him. That spell of rain we had last week played hob with the cement work, like I told you, and the roof of the finished house spring three bad leaks. But he's a mighty white chap—none whiter. Ain't seen him around here much lately. Must be two-three weeks now, hasn't it? You haven't had a quarrel, have you, daughter?"

Faith swallowed the lump in her throat and kissed him on the cheek. "Not exactly, Dad. But I suppose he's got lots of other friends who take up his time. Junior said he had Selma Pruitt with him yesterday, looking at his bungalows."

"Yes, so he did," Jim Lane answered with careful casualness. "Nice girl, Selma. But she can't hold a candle to you honey, and I'll bet Bob Hathaway's smart enough to know it."

"You—you really think he's trustworthy, honorable?" she persisted, in spite of her desire to hide her wounds from her father's loving eyes.

"None straighter," Jim Lane answered emphatically. "Well, I got to hurry, honey. Don't let that mahogany-headed female work you too hard today," he concluded, referring to "Madame Denise," who was just then parking her smart coupe before the Lane house.

Faith watched her father's stooped figure move slowly and rheumatically down the walk, and waited for "Madame Denise" to join her on the porch.

"I'm sorry," she began, after greetings, "that I won't be able to help you and Mrs. Hogan this morning. I have business in town. I was wondering if Mrs. Hogan could put the finishing touches on that black satin coat of mine, while I'm doing the housework. I'd like to wear it if she could."

"I'll see that she does." "Madame Denise" looked at her with sudden interest. "You didn't sleep much last night and you're as nervous as a cat this morning. Say, dearie, bring me in that black satin hat you were showing me, and I'll give it a twist and a stitch and a new feather fancy, and make it as slick as new."

At eleven o'clock Faith was ready to set out on her call to Bob Hathaway's offices. Cherry had departed at ten on another shopping orgy, and knew nothing of Faith's plans.

"Well, dearie," Nora Dennis gave a tuck to Faith's hat and stood off to survey the girl with fond, critical eyes. "If it's a man you're going to see—Lordy, how the child can blush! I'd say you ought to knock his eye out. That black satin coat with the monkey fur is the last word in chic, and that little close-fitting black satin cloche is just what you need to make you look like a Paris manequin. Why, you're stunning!"

Perhaps it was the psychological effect of knowing that she had never looked better in her life that gave Faith the courage to open the outer door of Bob Hathaway's suite of offices in the Masonic Building, when she arrived at half past eleven.

There was no one in the reception room, and the door marked "Mr. Robert Hathaway, private" was closed. Faith stood uncertainly for a moment in the middle of the small but well furnished room, guessing from the condition of the stenographer's desk in the corner that the girl had just left the room to renew her make-up. A sheet of paper half-filled with typing, was in the typewriter, and an open notebook with a pencil across it lay on the drawn-out leaf of the desk.

Hardly of her own volition, Faith moved toward the desk, her cheeks burning at the thought that she was turning spy—and that the person to be spied upon was the man she loved.

Fearing detection every moment, she bent and swiftly opened first the top and then the second drawer of the desk, noting as she did so that the machine was an Underwood. Score one for Cherry's deductions! In the second drawer she found what she was lookin for—blank white envelopes and white typewriting paper, commercial letter size, the sort of paper which had borne the blackmailing letters which Cherry had received. Her fingers trembled violently as she opened her large black patent leather hand bag and inserted a hastily folded sheet of the paper and an envelope. The purple edge of a piece of carbon paper showed between two sheets of the white paper, and without definite purpose she drew it out and studied it.

All the color drained out of her cheeks as she saw that it contained the final bit of evidence necessary to prove that the letters had been written in Bob Hathaway's office. Only two letters had been written with that particular piece of carbon—one evidently a business letter, the other, farther down the sheet and blocked in the center of the sheet, a letter which contained the words "Chris Wiley" and "Cherry." The words, inverted as they were, were still plainly readable on the glossy purple surface of the carbon paper. She did not dare take time to read the tell-tale message, preserved on the face of the carbon, with the aid of her hand-bag mirror, but folded it and stuffed it into her handbag, feeling like a criminal, and as if the world had turned upside down.

She was seated and waiting, with apparent composure, when the stenographer came singing into the room.

"Oh, Valencia, in my dreams, it always seems'—oh, hello! I didn't know anyone was here. Did you want to see Mr. Hathaway?" She ran a highly manicured hand over the sleek cap of her mannishly bobbed hair and looked at Faith with shoe-black, Oriental eyes, heavily beaded with mascara.

"Yes," Faith answered. "Is he in? I'm Miss Lane—Miss Faith Lane."

The girl's eyes opened wide in startled surprise, almost terror, then narrowed to mere slits as she answered."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR WEDNESDAY JANUARY 12 1927.

Benefic aspects dominate in this day's planetary government, according to astrology. There is one adverse influence.

The morning is the time to write letters or to sign contracts and the mental vision should be very clear until mid noon.

Advertising should be exceedingly profitable while this sway prevails and all forms of publicity should be effective.

This is read as an auspicious day for dealing with government officials or dignitaries of the church.

Politicians are subject to the best possible influences along the line of rewards for past services, the seers declare.

The evening is held to be most favorable to meetings or receptions at which a celebrity is to be honored.

Much dining and handshaking will take place in large cities in the next few weeks when distinguished foreign visitors will be entertained.

Feasting, which has become a general custom, is to be carried to absurd lengths in America, if the stars are wisely interpreted and reformers will rise to protest against luncheons and banquets that steal time and insure dyspepsia.

Neptune is in an aspect read as menacing to those who sail the seas. There is also a warning sign affecting oil interests.

Neptune also gives hints of strange development in foreign governments where tremendous upheavals are to take place.

One of Europe's leading men is to end his career in a tragedy it is again prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the promise of much happiness and success. Business that brings profit is forecast.

Children born on this day probably will have initiative and ability to win success. Many architects are born under this rule.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Leather and fur are combined to make this coat warm and practical. The fur is natural toned wolf and the lining is of checked woolen material.

• • •

A certain French dressmaker who has won a reputation for making very good leather coats has sold a great number of these wraps this winter in colors to match the wearers' cars. There are neat little hats to go with them and they are made in as many different colors as are the new cars, and that is a great many.

If you have a conservatively colored car of dark gray then you wear a leather coat and hat of deep rich gray. The Parma violet car calls for a lovely purple leather coat and hat. There are even yellow leathers to match the yellow cars chosen by women with a flair for the spectacular. It seems like a frivolous sort of fad—but there is nothing at all frivolous about a leather coat. On the contrary, it is a most practical, serviceable sort of wrap, and it is just as serviceable and practical when it is purple or red as when it is of the more conventional tan.

These new leather coats are made so that they are not affected by rain or moisture, and many women like to wear them instead of fur coats during bad weather. They are fairly light in weight but are very warm, especially when lined with kasha. The leather coat, too, is an extremely suitable wrap for travel, either by air or by water. The knowing sea traveler does not run the risk of staining her fur coat with the salt spray of the ocean, but chooses leather instead.

The leather coat, nhowever, is not by any stretch of the imagination suitable for formal afternoon, much less evening wear. For that reason it is hardly a well chosen wrap for the woman who must make one coat do service for many occasions.

Some of the new leather coats are lined with fur. A red leather coat may be lined with gray pony, with collar and cuffs of the same fur. A black leather coat has a lining of gazelle. Some of the new fur coats of the sports sort have leather linings. A leopard coat has lining, belt, collar, cuffs and hem of beige leather, a gray astrakhan coat has lining of red kid which also is used for belt, collar, cuffs and hat.

PEPS IT UP.

A particularly pleasing sparkle may be added to mild punch by adding ginger ale. A few sprigs of mint are also a helpful addition.

RIPE ALL OVER.

When buying peaches select those that are uniformly colored, not red on one side and hard and green on the other.

LACE HOSE NOVELTY.

Lace stockings have returned to favor, in flesh and nude shades, thin as a cobweb, and perishable as a dream.

YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD SPLENDID BANQUET

Enjoyable Programme of Toasts and Music at St. James' Church.

A very enjoyable banquet was held last evening by the young people of St. James' Church. At seven o'clock about seventy-five young people sat down to the banquet which had been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Darcy Foster, assisted by Mrs. George Rowe and members of the King's Own Class.

The programme was in charge of Mr. William McLaren. After singing of the National Anthem, toasts were proposed as follows:

To the Church—Proposed by Miss Edith Wright; responded to by Rev. J. D. Richardson.

To the Sunday School—Proposed by Cliff Rusaw; responded to by William McLaren.

To the Young People's Union—Proposed by Mr. Elmer Frost; responded to by William E. Prest.

Elmer McLaren and Sherman Rowe gave a piano duet, which was heartily encored. A reading given by Miss Jean Hamilton was also heartily encored.

Games and contests followed, which were heartily entered into by all present.

Altogether it proved to be a most enjoyable evening for the young people.

THE SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON

Misfortunes of the Season

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BOPPY'S NOSE

(Copyright, 1927, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

(By Howard R. Garis.)

Uncle Wiggily hopped out of his warm bed one cold winter morning and looked across his snow garden toward the fence. What the old rabbit gentleman saw made him open his eyes very wide.

"Why, the very idea!" he exclaimed.

Uncle Wiggily wasn't surprised at snow growing in his garden. No, indeed! Snow grew there every winter after the cabbages, carrots, turnips and parsnips had been gathered into the cellar. Of course, Uncle Wiggily didn't pick the snow from his garden. He left it there until spring when it melted away.

"What's the matter, my dear," asked Uncle Wiggily's wife, who was downstairs helping Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy get breakfast for the forty 'leven little bunny children who were going to school.

"Do you see what's over by the garden fence?" asked the rabbit gentleman as he slid down the banister rail, this being the quickest way to get to the first floor. "Look, a little house! Somebody has built a bungalow next to mine. I wonder whose it is?"

"That isn't a bungalow," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, who was tying a pink ribbon on the maple syrup jug so it would look pretty on the breakfast table when it met the hot pancakes. "That isn't a bungalow."

"What is it, then," the bunny uncle wanted to know.

"It's a bungleump," answered the muskrat lady housekeeper. "A cute little wooden man, with no arms or legs, rolled over to the back kitchen door early this morning and asked if I thought you would care if he moved his bungleump near your garden. He said you knew him and were a friend of his."

"Why that must be little Boppy!" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "Little wooden Boppy! I remember now. He made himself a house out of part of a stump and part of a bungalow so he took part of both names and called it a bungleump."

"That's it," squeaked Nurse Jane. "He said he and his wife Um and the little wooden Wogglejig children would be over to see you soon."

"I shall be glad to see Boppy," spoke Uncle Wiggily, as he remembered the little wooden chap.

"Here he comes now!" exclaimed Baby Bunty. That little rabbit girl was pouring maple syrup on one of her pancakes, but she ran to open the door for Boppy who had rolled over from his bungleump.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" cried Boppy, as he rolled over the door sill. "Such trouble as I'm in! Oh, dear!"

"What kind of trouble?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Nose trouble," said the little wooden man. "The Fuzzy Fox is over at my bungleump. I guess he thought it was your bungalow. And when he found it wasn't, and that you weren't in it, that Fox was so angry that he said he was going to bite off my nose. So I rolled away as fast as I could and came over here to ask you to help me. Save my nose!"

"I will!" said Uncle Wiggily bravely. "How can the Fox bite your nose off, Boppy?" asked Baby Bunty. "Your nose is only painted on your face, if you will excuse me saying so. Your nose doesn't stick out like mine or Daddieum's." And this was true enough, for Boppy was made of wood, and he had a wooden head with a face painted on it, and, of course, his nose was only painted.

"I don't know how the Fox is going to get my nose, but that's what he said he'd do!" sighed poor Boppy. "Oh dear!"

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" cried Boppy.

"Don't be afraid!" said Uncle Wiggily.

"Well, he'd better be afraid, and so had you, too!" suddenly snarled an angry voice, and there in the door, left open for Boppy to roll in, stood the Fuzzy Fox. "If I can't bite Boppy's nose off I can rub it off with my rough otngue!" snapped the Fox. "I'll lick his nose off with my tongue. His nose is made of red paint and that's my favorite color."

Then, all of a sudden, the Fox leaped forward to lick off Boppy's nose. But the bad chap had no sooner taken one taste of the little wooden man's painted nose than the Fox let out such a howl that the pancakes turned somersaults. And out of the door the Fox ran howling:

"Oh, my tongue! My tongue! How it burns! Wowzie gow!"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I guess I saved Boppy's nose!"

"How did you?" asked Baby Bunty.

"I put some red hot pepper on it from the pepper caster when the Fox wasn't looking," said Mr. Longears. "And the Fox licked off the red pepper instead of Boppy's nose! Ha! Ha!" So the little wooden man was happy as he rolled back to his bungleump, the red pepper not having harmed him at all, except to make him sneeze.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

A CALORIE LIST

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs
Food Specialist.

Just as one hears that it is useless to spend time telling people about calories, along comes an interesting letter from a reader asking for a calorie list.

My correspondent says, "I should like a calorie list for a moderately active person of forty. I have looked for such a list of foods, but so far have not found it."

On the theory that a moderately active person of forty is fairly representative of normal interests and normal requirements, it seems reasonable to suppose that others beside this correspondent might be glad to have such a list as she describes.

Since our correspondent asks for a list for a moderately active person, I take it that she would like to know first of all how many calories she requires. With what information she has given I should say she needs about 2,100 calories per day. Her diet should be what is known as a mixed diet and should be composed of simply cooked foods. So-called fancy cooking, that is, elaborately made dishes, are not especially desirable for any one.

Now for the calorie list. Perhaps the best short cut to such a list would be to say that other things being equal, the average size of a portion in which food is served represents one hundred calories. A scant cup of milk, a moderate serving of most cereals, puddings and the like, a moderate serving of meat, a small square of cheese, an ordinary pat of butter, a small roll—these are illustrations. In fact, unless one is to study dietetics very seriously just such approximate measurements are the best for ordinary home use. No busy housekeeper has time to go about weighing and measuring foods. What she does seek is a simple method whereby she may make simple calculations and know that she is giving herself and her family a diet that is approximately what is required. With this understanding that an average serving of food represents one hundred calories, it is easy to make out a diet and calculate whether it has come up to the required standard. On the other hand, a detailed calorie list is an excellent thing for reference and should be in the kitchen. Such a list may be found in many books. Perhaps one of the most practical forms in which it appears is in the book entitled, "Feeding the Family" by Mary Swartz Rose. This book is published by the MacMillan Company, and the latter part is devoted to a discussion of the caloric content of foods. If my readers will consult this book at the public library, they will find invaluable information too detailed to compress into such short articles as these.

TROUSERS AND SKIRTS

THE HEIRESS

Christina was the girl who had stayed at home. Her father had died when the oldest boy was 20 and Christina quite small. But her mother was quite capable of running the ranch.

Mother was a woman of character, with strong views on religion and morals, essentially a good woman. But she did dominate the family very effectually.

Later on, when the two boys and the other two girls married and left the ranch, it seemed quite reasonable and proper that Christina should remain mother's devoted daughter. Mother had always kept the ranch and the money strictly in her own name, and apportioned each child what she considered was good for them. The married ones got their portions—but Christina still had to plan and explain and show extraordinary good reasons for getting herself any new clothes.

As mother grew older and more crotchety, more and more responsibility fell upon Christina, who was growing older all the time, too. Mother could not bear to have Christina out of her sight. If people did not come to the ranch to see Christina, she never saw any friends. If she was invited to parties, mother never felt quite well enough for her to go. Besides, there was always the irrigating, or the fumigating, or the pruning, or the chickens and rabbits, or the lawns and flowers, or the picking and packing demanding supervision and attention.

So, for those last ten years, when mother was growing old and feeble, but not losing one ounce of her dominating character, Christina was pretty well chained down. Because she did all the housework and laundry, besides really managing the ranch.

Even towards the end, when mother had to have a trained nurse, it was Christina she always wanted. She would lie there and fret about ranch affairs. Had Christina attended to this? Had Christina arranged for that? That illness extended over long months. But Christina was forty-four before the end came.

Christina has just finished reading the obituary article in the local newspaper. Mother was a remarkable woman, mother had a beautiful funeral—and at the end there was an interesting little paragraph which points out that Christina is the heiress.

Christina has discovered that she is worth nearly $100,000. She smiles a little to think what a time she had when she paid $35 for a coat a year ago, when mother felt a suitable one could have been obtained for $25. Christina has pretty feet, but mother felt that $5 shoes and lisle stockings were good enough for anyone—and certainly for Christina.

"You ought to stand yourself a handsome wardrobe and take a trip round the world," we told her. "You have earned it."

"I wouldn't know how to wear clothes now," she sighed, "and I have forgotten how to make friends. I might take a trip around the world and not have a soul talk to me all the way. Besides, I ought to stay and manage the ranch. I have a queer feeling that mother wants me just to stay on the ranch.

"It seems so odd, I feel wicked when I want to buy expensive things. It is quite eerie being able to sign the checks myself, and to have to make the decisions without consulting mother. I don't believe I am going to know how to be an heiress," she smiles wistfully.

Christina is worth $100,000—but there are so few things she can buy with it.

Healed His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of recovery was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely healed my rupture. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may have a complete recovery without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen Carpenter, 599 N Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

Although Swiss cheese is obviously a product for which we must give Switzerland credit, the Swiss cheese sandwich appears to be an American tid-bit. In Europe the saying is that Swiss cheese is preferred here to other European cheeses because Americans use cheese to make sandwiches "and the holes sell just as well as the cheese."

These holes about which so many jokes have been cracked are to start with bubbles. In the process of fermentation these bubbles of carbonic acid are formed in the milk. The carbonic acid evaporates, but the holes remain.

A more aristocratic name for Swiss cheese is Gruyere or Emmenthaler cheese. Really there is no reason why we should use it only as the filling for sandwiches. Coarse bread and cheese makes an excellent luncheon dish. This, with fresh fruit makes an excellent midday meal for an adult.

In Europe cheese is conventionally served at the end of luncheon or dinner, and frequently several kinds of cheese are passed. Special cheese dishes are to be had—so that there is one partition for the hard crackers or biscuits, one for balls of butter and one for the cheese—for butter is frequently served with the cheese. The pieces of cheese are put in a small folded napkin and there is a knife so that one may take whatever sort of cheese is preferred.

Rich whole grains of sun-ripened wheat woven into a crisp, golden ribbon and rolled into appetizing shape—that's Muffets. Healthful. Delectably flavored. Fit any menu as a cereal, hot or cold, or hollowed and filled with fruit, meat or salad.

See the box for the many ways they can be served.

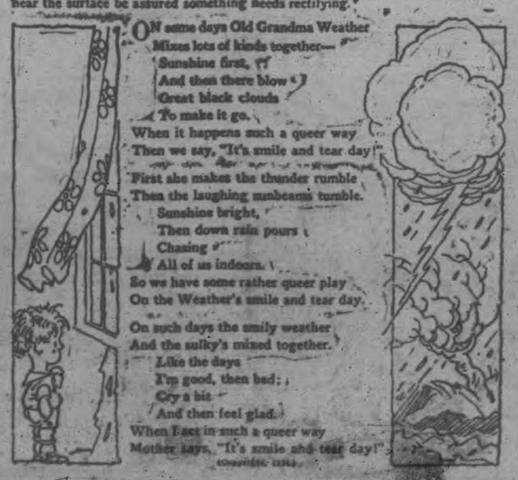
Smile and Tear Days

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE are days when the smiles and the tears come alternately and with very little provocation. We're apt to say the child is cranky. Now so-called crankiness is merely the outward sign of some inward disturbance or irritation and should be treated with as much concern as any apparent physical illness. There's no use scolding or punishing. Rather look for the cause and treat it. Perhaps the child isn't sufficiently rested. Maybe he is undernourished. Is school too great a nerve stimulus? Or has he some physical irritation such as eye strain or improper clothing which irritates him? Whenever the tears stay near the surface be assured something needs rectifying.



On some days Old Grandma Weather
Mixes lots of kinds together—
Sunshine first,
And then there blow
Great black clouds
To make it go.
When it happens such a queer way
Then we say, "It's smile and tear day!"

First she makes the thunder rumble
Then the laughing sunbeams tumble.
Sunshine bright,
Then down rain pours
Chasing
All of us indoors.
So we have some rather queer play
On the Weather's smile and tear day.

On such days the smily weather
And the sulky's mixed together.
Like the days
I'm good, then bad;
Cry a bit
And then feel glad.
When I act in such a queer way
Mother says, "It's smile and tear day!"

SHORT STORY

Mrs. Henderson looked sternly at her granddaughter. "You can do as you please, Roberta, about having your hair cut off in that absurd way like a boy—but I shall adopt my own attitude of protest against it!"

"Oh, Granny, don't be so hard; it is only being modern—"

"Nonsense, Roberta, another way of being tomboyish and rowdyish." Her cane tapped on the bricked path as she went back to the house.

"Of course," observed Roberta, regretfully, "if Granny takes that attitude, there's just one thing to do—to have it shingled anyway!" Later that morning she went off in her own car, and visited a metropolitan barber, who transformed into a mischievous boy the girl who before had been a dainty, garden-sort of person.

"Grandmother was right," thought Roberta, as she drove the car in the back way and turned it over to Ben, the garage man. He gave her a furtive glance as she went off toward the house. Then he went to the telephone.

"That you, Cook? The poor little gal's had her head shaved clean as a platter, and the madam's got a young preacher to dinner. Head off the poor lamb, that's a good soul." He grinned as he went back to his car cleaning. In all questions between Mrs. Henderson and her orphan granddaughter, now eighteen, the household staff were for Roberta to the last man or woman, though they all admired and respected their employer. So it was Betty, the cook, who waylaid Roberta in a back entry and sent her off to her own room.

"Your grandma do be havin' a young praste to dinner, and she'd be thot mad, Miss Roberta, if she saw the mess you've made of your pretty curls—" She shook her head dismally.

"Does it look so dreadful, Betty?" asked the culprit.

"Ye look like a hoodlum, Miss, if you'll excuse it," said the cook, rushing back to the kitchen.

"I am so glad to know," murmured Roberta. "That counts one on opinion—grandmother will make two nays, and how about the young 'praste'—I cannot imagine a curate approving of this, bu I feel so free—" She reached her own room, got into a pair of tweed knickers that grandmother had vaguely approved of for hiking and sports, and stepped from her bedroom window into the boughs of the great oak tree that spread before the house.

Roberta was sitting there, reading, in her favorite seat in the tree, when the excited barking of a dog brought her out of the world of fiction to reality.

"How tiresome of Larry to trail me here," she groaned, and leaning over to catch the collie's attention and send him away, Roberta, queen of tree climbers in the past, suddenly lost her balance and fell, snatching at limbs and branches as she went. At last she grasped a limb and clung to it, swinging breathlessly before she looked down and saw the green grass just a few feet below, with Larry jumping frantically about.

A pair of strong arms reached up and strong hands lifted her down to safety.

"There, my lad," said a hearty voice. "You just escaped a nasty fall, eh?"

"Yes, thank you, sir," said Roberta in a low, shamed tone. Then she flung up her head and met her grandmother's stern, blank gaze.

"Oh, Mr. Delaine, allow me to present my nephew, Robert Henderson." Roberta's ears burned as she gave an awkward little nod.

Mr. Delaine shook hands, but there was a queer look in his nice gray eyes that Roberta did not understand.

"That's odd. I thought you had a granddaughter."

"Robert is a grand nephew," said Mrs. Henderson, removing the relationship a little further away.

"I see—perhaps you will come over to the rectory some afternoon, Roberta, and have some tennis, eh? I am a bachelor."

"I'm sure that must be very nice," said Roberta, in her gentlest voice.

"Have you had your dinner, Roberta?" she sked over her shoulder.

"No, Granny," said the girl.

"Tell Betty to send a tray to your room—I will see you in the morning."

* * * * * *

The next morning Mrs. Henderson came down to breakfast to find Roberta fresh and girlish in a blue linen, with a broad band of blue ribbon tied around her soft dark curls, a huge bow in back.

"Good morning, Granny," she said, demurely.

"Roberta—last night—your hair? Where is it?" inquired the distracted old lady as she sat down behind the coffee jot. "Where is your hair, Roberta?"

"On my head, where it belongs, Granny—the barber loaned me a wig to wear just to see if I like the effect, but I do not, and so I am still your granddaughter, aren't I?"

"Yes, darling, and I always will be—"

"Even if I married the curate?"

"Mr. Delaine? How absurd! Is that the next thing?"

"I hope so! You see, he was in the hairdresser's and must have overheard my conversation about the wig—but he is rather a dear, Granny. May I go and play tennis with him?" Her eyes shone like stars. So this was to be Roberta's fate—a curate's wife. Well, Mrs. Henderson shrugged resignedly. There was plenty of money all around.

"Of course you cannot go to the rectory, but he is coming for tea and tennis this afternoon."

"Who asked him?" Roberta was expectant.

"He asked himself," said Granny with a grimace. "He too seems to be modern."

Chuck Weaver Makes Request to Landis For Reinstatement

RISBERG'S "PAL" MAKES PLEA TO LANDIS FOR REINSTATEMENT

Chuck Weaver Denies Knowledge Whatever of 1917 Scandal.

STIRRING APPEAL.

Says That He Refused To Contribute Towards "Sox" Pool.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 11 (Canadian Press) — While Commissioner Landis pondered whether to keep the 45 players in the "Risberg series" on the major league baseball roster,or scratch them off, he was presented yesterday with a request from one of the "Black Sox" of 1919, for reinstatement.

Buck Weaver, former White Sox third baseman, pal of Swede Risberg and Chick Gandil, and banished from baseball with them because of the crooked 1919 world series, concluded his denial of any knowledge of the plot to buy a series from Detroit in 1917, with a stirring appeal to Landis for reinstatement.

Yesterday he sent the commissioner a formal reminder of the appeal.

"I hereby request that my application for reinstatement be considered," Weaver's letter to the commissioner said. While Risberg was making his affidavit, he told Landis he did not care for reinstatement. Gandil also said he did not care for it, but wanted to know why he had been "blacklisted."

"That's a newspaper expression," Landis said. "You are on the ineligible list as far as baseball is concerned, because you have just admitted 'sloughing' two ball games."

Weaver not only denied knowing of the "fixed" labor day series between Detroit and Chicago in 1917, but he declared, and others substantiated him, that he had refused to contribute to the Sox pool of $850 for Detroit pitchers.

T. C. C. BEATS MARLBOROS

Close Game Played Last Night, Resulting in 4-3 Score.

PARKDALE LOSES.

TORONTO, Jan. 11. — Toronto Canoe Club uncorked the biggest upset of the season when they defeated Marlboros 4 to 3 in the Senior O.H.A. game at the Arena last night.

It was a torrid affair.

It was more than that.

The third period was the wildest scramble the old Garden has been the scene of in many years.

With the Red Ringers desperately striving to hold their lead, and the Dukes madly trying to steam-roller their way through for the two goals that would put them on even terms, the last ten minutes of play will long be remembered by those hockey enthusiasts fortunate enough to be there.

Over 1,000 wildly cheering fans stood on their feet as the rivals battled up and down the ice. First one team appeared to be in a position to score, then the other side would have a turn, while the fans held their breath as the goal-keepers pulled off a wonderful save or the puck missed the posts by inches.

Preston 8, Parkdale 3

PRESTON, Jan. 11.—In a Senior O.H.A. fixture that assayed as high a percentage of real honest-to-goodness hockey as can be seen in an amateur contest anywhere in these days of pro. scouts, the Riversides smothered the Parkdale Paddlers under a 8 to 3 count. Although the Riversides undoubtedly had quite a margin on the evenings play, it was by no means eight goals worth., as "Eagle Eye' Schmalz, if it were possible, built up a more enviable reputation than ever as a net guardian. He was in tip-top form, and outside of the first counter, which went in between his skates, was turning in a gilt-edge performance. He had plenty of shots to deal with—hard ones, none of the ping-pong kind.

Harry Watson, ex - Granites' Olympic star, was the shining light in the Parkdale aggregation. He played the highest brand of hockey from start to finish and certainly won many friends among the fans.

OSHAWA BEATS BOWMANVILLE; PORT HOPE WINS

Leaders of Local Intermediate Group Continue Unbeaten

COME FROM BEHIND.

Bowmanville and Picton Hold Good Leads Early in Games.

OSHAWA, Jan. 11 — Walter Lett's Oshawa intermediates opened their home series in Group No. 4 yesterday evening with a win over Ginger Edgar's Bowmanville sextet by 8 to 5, and Oshawa had to come from behind to win out, as the score at the end of the first period was 3 to 0 for the pesky Edgarites.

Bowmanville started right after the bell rang to show Oshawa, who were last year's semi-finalists, that they needed something more than numbers on their sweaters and past reputations to win this year's group honors, and with the Lettites overconfident the Edgarites hung up a big three on the score board before they retired to the dressing room for the first rest, I. Piper, Moyse, and Densen being the sharpshooters.

The reading of the Riot Act between periods by Manager Lett had the desired effect, for at the start of the second 20 minutes Oshawa displayed the brand of hockey they are capable of and soon ran in two counters, Lott getting the first and Houck the second. Osborne made Bowmanville's total four, then Rowden and Lott each bulged the twine for Oshawa, and the second period ended Bowmanville 4, Oshawa 4.

With the score a tie, the locals started to rush at the beginning of the third period ,and missed two chances to score through being over-anxious, but on a nice pass, Houck to Avery, the latter put Oshawa in the lead. Crossery again evened it up for Bowmanville, and with three in a row, the first by Avery, second by Lott, and third by Rowden, the game was put away in the Oshawa kitbag by a total score of Oshawa 8, Bowmanville 5. The game was minus any penalties. The teams were:

Bowmanville—Goal, Colwell; defence, Dehsen and Hooper; centre, Luxton; wings, Moyse and C. Piper subs., Conlin and Avery; subs., Crossery and Osborne.

Oshawa—Goal, Smith; defence, Johnston and Lowe; centre, Lott; wings, Rowden and Houck; subs., Conlin and Avery; sub. goalie, Fletcher.

Referee—D. A. Lowry, Toronto.

PORT HOPE, Jan. 11. — Outlucked for the first two periods, and finally breaking the jinx in the third period to overcome a 3 to 1 score and tie it up, Finnegan Hills' Ontarios here last night defeated Picton, 5 to 3, in ten minutes' overtime. The game was one of the most exciting seen here for some time.

In the first two periods the locals broke through time after time with an open net before them, only to either shoot wide or be blocked on a remarkable save by Croft, in the Picton goal, who for the two periods played a stellar game.

The Ontarios appeared a different team in the third frame, and from the moment that Crossett raced from end to end to make the score 3 to 2, the fans were hopeful. The period was just about gone when Finnegan Hills grabbed a pass from his brother and sliped in the tying goal.

The fans went wild, and in the first five minutes of overtime Finnegan covered himself with glory when he won the game with a waist-high shot after taking a pass from his brother. In the last five minutes old Finnegan changed the verdict when he checked up his third goal on K. Ware's pass.

The Ontarios backchecked like demons, especially in the third period, and Hutchings and Crossett, on the defence, both rushed well, the former having poor luck around the nets. Micks, in the local net, had a fine night, and knocked down many a difficult, drive. Myatt Young, Shensel, and Shoniker were the pick of the visitors. Teams:

Picton — Goal, Croft; defence, Bedborough and Church; wings, Shensel and Young; centre, Shoniker; subs, Stafford and Myatt.

Port Hope—Goal, Micks; defence, Hutchings and Crossett; centre, Ware; wings, A. Hills and Stephenson; subs, W. Hills and Dawley.

Referee—Steve Vair, Toronto.

PROVES WORTH AS TIME SAVER

Information on Team Enables Coach to Know the Defence.

TOO MUCH NOISE.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. Jan. 10 (Associated Press) — Foot ball scouting is defended as a time-saving device and a sound business expedient by Harvard's chief scout, James L. Knox.

Both players and coaches are gainers by it, according to Knox, whose views are given in the current issue of the Harvard Athletic Association News.

Harvard has declined to enter into non-scouting agreements with opponents and an editorial in the News, which is the official organ of the association, puts the approval of that body on the practice.

"Those who criticize foot ball scouting seem to overlook its real place in the season's work," Knox writes "If a team is to play a schedule of eight games and no information is at hand in regard to the methods of the various opponents, it is obvious that several defenses and various types of offense must be taught in order that a given team may meet its opponent on a basis which will permit it to show the full scope of its foot ball knowledge.

"Careful analysis will show it (scouting) is a simple and sound business expedient and, in reality, is a side issue which does not merit all the hue and cry raised about it.

Takes Little Time

"The players do not spend a fifth of the time on the result of the scout's work that they do in the rubbing room or shower baths. But I have never heard of anyone calling for abolition of those two factors of a season."

Princeton and Yale abolished scouting of each other before Princeton broke with Harvard in the past foot ball season. Princeton and Yale spokesmen have expressed willingness to extend the non-scouting agreement to others.

PORT HOPE LEADS LAKESHORE GROUP

Oshawa in Second Place—Neither Has Lost a Game.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER FIVE

I was making $3.50 a week then as a cooper. I told the folks at home I was making $2.50 and changed the pay envelope every Saturday night because it was a rule of the house that all us boys turn over our pay and take what cash was left after expenses were paid.

Well, with what I'd saved, which wasn't very much, I decided to have a fling on the Bowery one night. It was Saturday, July 11, 1884. My older brother, Con, accompanied me.

We drifted into Frank White's saloon near Houston street and sneaked into the boxing hall in the back before the bouncer at the bar could kick us out.

It was crowded and Jack Taggert, the announcer, suddenly raised his hand and in his circus bawler voice said:

"Will anybody in the house meet Mr. Bob Mace?"

Mace was the house fighter and considered pretty good. I did not know it and in the excitement of the chance to break into the game said:

"I will!"

Everyone in the room jumped up and gathered around me, and I know now they wanted to persuade me to get into the ring immediately before I backed out. I handed my brother Con my money so no one could frisk my clothes. Taggert grabbed me and pulled me into the dressing room.

He gave me some instructions but I did not know what they were all about, I was so excited.

Taggert blew a whistle and introduced me as "Mr. Johnny McAuliffe of Williamsburg." I glanced at my brother, Con. He looked as if I was going to be murdered. Somehow at the moment I forgot to be frightened.

I won the first round easily. I copied Dempsey's style I had seen so often and jabbed away with my left and occasionally crossed over my right. I was more confident in the second round and began hammering Mace harder and harder. In the third I nailed him!

The crowd was in a surprised uproar. Everyone crowded around me and began pouring drinks down me—the first I had ever had.

Just before midnight Con and I decided to go home. I felt safe as I was not marked a bit. Con appointed himself my manager.

"How much did you get?" he asked.

"Twenty dollars."

"Gimme it," he said, and I handed it all over.

That was my real start.

NOTE: In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how Jack Dempsey took him under his wing and guided him through his first fight tournaments in the Bowery.

TONIGHT'S GAME LIKELY TO BE HARD STRUGGLE

Petes Out To Pile Up Lead For Return Match in Lindsay.

VISITORS HEAVIER.

Have Reputation For Playing Better on Larger Ice Surface.

At Brock Street Rink tonight the fast Lindsay Junior O.H.A. team will be seen in action against the local boys. Lindsay will have an advantage in weight, but they will have to show a little more team-play than they did in their own home town to be able to be a match for the locals tonight.

The Petes knotted the count last week in Lindsay and they are out to pile up a big lead back of them tonight for the game on Friday night in Lindsay. A real battle is assured the fans, for the Lindsay teams have always liked the larger ice surface.

There is likely to be little change on either line up from a week ago tonight in Lindsay In the Petes' goal will be Mein, who made a fine showing in Lindsay, and on the defence will be LeBarr and Allan. Peterborough fans will certainly hear more of these two young hockey players in years to come. On the forward line will be White, Calladine, and Kenneally. Subs are Jones, Chambers, and Gillespie.

Lindsay will likely have in their goal Golden, who is well known in this city and who kept goal for the Raybestos team last year in the City Hockey League. Fever and Rich will be on defence. These are two big players and if they put team play into effect, they ought to worry any goalie. On the forward line will be Forbert, Spratt and Reeves, with Woods and Gerster subbing.

Norman Albert of Toronto will handle the bell.

APPEAL MADE FOR CLEAN PLAY

Campbellford Hockey Executive Urges Players To Forego Rough Tactics.

SUSPENSION RULE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 10.—At a meeting of the Town League executive held at the home of the president, Mr. J. H. Bell, Saturday night, the principal topic of discussion was the alleged rough-house tactics of some of the players. On motion of Mr. Daniel and Mr. Bell, the executive appeals to the better sportsmanship of the players to keep the game clean and urges them to condnct themselves in such a manner as would prevent grounds for possible criticism.

A further addition to the rules, sponsored by Beatty and Labrosh, was that a player receiving three five-minute penalties be automatically suspended for one game.

The managers of the Midget teams were asked to instill the spirit of clean play and true sportsmanship in the players under their direction.

ANNIVERSARY OF NATIONS LEAGUE

Much Good Accomplished During Seventh Year of Existence.

TWO WITHDRAWALS.

GENEVA, Jan. 10 (United News) —On its seventh anniversary, Monday, the League of Nations, which spends 24,512,341 gold francs (approximately $980,493) annually to promote the cause of world peace and understanding, will point to the following achievements it has on record for 1926: Progress made toward disarmament and economic conferences; measures taken to prevent aggression such an arrangements for rapid communications between protecting nations in the event of such aggression against a small country; settlement of the Mosul dispute and steps toward preventing the recurrence of Greco-Bulgarian disputes. The chief regret of the League has been over the withdrawal from its councils of Spain and Brazil.

CURLING

Mrs. A. W. Turner 10, Miss Morrow 7; Mrs. W. H. Hill 5, Miss Davidson 11.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 11.—The results of the inter-rink competition for the Allen Cup in last week's play were:

Monday, January 3—J. E. Allen, 8 vs H. B. Allen, 9; Ross Edmunds, 13 vs L. C. Russel, 11.

Wednesday, January 5—J. E. Allen, 9 vs Ross Edmunds, 6; G. W. Sayles, 12 vs W. E. Ball, 10; J. Steele, 8 vs J. N. McGill, 7.

On Friday evening play for the W. J. E. Gillott trophy began, the competition in this case being on a 13 point basis. So far results are:

W. E. Ball, 13 vs J. E. Allen, 12 (20 ends played).

L. C. Russell, 13 vs Ross Edmunds, 10 (16 ends played).

H. B. Allen, 14 vs J. N. McGill, 5.

W. T. Wood defaulted to R. H. Edmunds, and A. A. Smith defaulted to George Hetherington.

J. Steele, 13 vs G. W. Sayles, 11.

J. Lancashire, 14 vs W. G. Hetherington, 11.

This is the first year there has been any trophy other than the Allen Cup for local competition. On the occasion of the annual banquet of the curling club last spring, Mr. Gillott generously presented the treasurer, H. J. Grassett, with a cheque for $25.00, and the decision to invest this amount in a cup for competition on a 13 point basis is adding considerably to the interest and enjoyment of the play this season.

FAMOUS TRIO OF OLD PRO HOCKEY DAYS

With the enlargement of the National hockey circuit, several players of note who starred in the old pro. league many years ago, returned to the fold, but none more famous than the trio shown above. They are well known to Canadian fans, all three having helped bring a world's championship to Toronto. Left to right, Huffman had 617 for high three, with LeSurf a close second with 615. High singles: Morton 215, Bowness 231, Metherel 256, Huffman 260, Chambers 212, Taylor 215, Cuff 231, Thornton 226, Condon 222, Grant 239, LeSurf 238 and 254, and Jackson 231. MUCH TRADING IN THE LEAGUE

Several Ball Players Change Clubs in Recent Trading Spree.

FOUR CLUBS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—In a four cornered baseball trade between the Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn Clubs of the National League and Buffalo of the International, Catcher Walter Henline and outfielder George Harper were traded by the Phillies to the Giants for Lafayette Thompson and Jack Scott, and Henline was immediately traded by the Giants to Brooklyn for Pitcher Burleigh Grimes.

Pitcher Raymond Pierce and infielder Bill Huber of the Phillies were also involved in the deal, going to Buffalo in exchange for Pitcher Alex. Ferguson, formerly with the Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees and Washington Senators.

The transaction carried an agreement that the Giants will send Buffalo a pitcher and outfielder under optional agreement after the spring training season. Brooklyn will contribute a pitcher to the Bisons on the same basis.

These transfers will compensate the Buffalo club for Thompson, an infielder who formerly was with Pittsburgh.

Wheat Prices Advance After Weakness At Start

CHICAGO, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Wheat advanced today after a wavering start that was associated with the decline at Liverpool. On the downturn commission houses here were good buyers of wheat, and word was at hand that all offers of rye to Europe overnight had been accepted. Opening unchanged to 3-8 cent off, wheat soon scored gains. Corn, oats and provisions developed firmness, corn starting unchanged to 3-8c. up and continuing to ascend.

Opening prices were:

Wheat—May 138 1-4; July 129 3-4. Corn, May 81, July 84 3-8. Oats, May 49 1-4, July 47 1-4.

Quebec Mines Feature Standard Market To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Business was again brisk on the Standard Mining Exchange today, with 852,295 shares changing hands. Area Mines, in common with most issues, showed a decline, this stock being down 8 cents to 162 today. Corona declined 1 at 30, while Duprat, heavily dealt in, gained 1 at 32 1-2. Laval Quebec, a third member of the Quebec Mining issues, gained six at 48. Teck Hughes was 15 cents higher at 625, while on the unlisted side Amulet was up three at 255.

Market Fluctuates In New York To-day

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—Alternate periods of weakness and strength characterized today's stock market. The call money rate was lowered from 4½ to four per cent.

A brisk demand for the Eastern Railroad shares featured the early afternoon dealings and checked the selling movement which started in the motor shares. Mack Truck, however, showed independent strength.

Erratic fluctuations took place in Commercial Solvents 'B,' which sold down over five points to 243 in the early trading and then snapped back to 253, a record high for all time. Allied Chemical and Dupont sold down two points, and heaviness also developed in United States Steel Common, Baldwin, General Motors, and other recent leaders.

An unusually brisk demand developed for several of the oil shares, in which special developments are believed to be pending. Barnsdall 'A' was again taken in large blocks at advancing prices.

Market Leaders Decline In Price and Activity

TORONTO, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press)—The market leaders, International Nickel and Hiram Walker's both declined fractionalyl on the stock exchange here today, the former being down 1-2 at 42 3-4 and the latter down 1-2 at 31 5-8. Neither issue was traded in so heavily today, 2,665 shares of Nickel changing hands and less than two thousand of Walker being dealt in. Brazilian Traction was down 1-2 at 107, and Canadian Canners preferred gained 1-4 at 79 1-4, while City Dairy, which has been gaining steadily in the past few days, went to 87 1-2, up 1 3-4, to-day. Massey Harris common was up one at 71. Distilleries, on the unlisted side of the market, gained 1-8 at 4 7-8, while Seagrams declined 1-8 at 16 3-8. While business was fairly brisk, price changes were not large and the market was featureless.

OBITUARY.

MRS. DANIEL McISAAC.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Daniel McIsaac took place this morning from the Sacred Heart church, where services were conducted at nine o'clock by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, to St. Peter's cemetery, Rev. C. Moloney officiating at the grave. Pallbearers were Messrs. W. E. Dorrington, W. Geary, Robert Hickson, H. Legrow, T. J. Brooks and Thos. McIntee. The large number of beautiful floral and spiritual tributes received were testimonials to the esteem in which the deceased lady was held by many friends.

WILLIAM STALKER.

The death occurred this morning of William Stalker of Smith township. He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, five sons, Roy of Flint, Michigan, Alfred of Detroit, Garnet of Smith, John and Gordon at home, also two daughters, Daisy and Viola, at home.

The funeral will be private, owing to sickness in the home, on Thursday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock, from the family residence, Smith township, to Little Lake Cemetery, with Rev. Dr. Blagrave officiating. Huntsville papers please copy.

MRS. JOHN McCABE.

The death occurred very suddenly, at her late residence at 470 Gilmour street, of Mr. John McCabe. The deceased, who was under the doctor's care for the past two weeks, but appeared to be fairly well last evening, was stricken suddenly at seven o'clock this morning, and passed away within a few minutes.

Mrs. McCabe was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Begley. She was born in Belleville and spent much of her early life in Bowmanville and Oshawa, receiving her education at St. Joseph's Convent in Oshawa and at the former Loretto Convent, now St. Joseph's Academy, in Lindsay. As Lily Begley, she was well known as a musician and vocalist of outstanding ability, being much in demand on the concert stage throughout the province. Prior to her marriage, thirty-six years ago, she was organist and choir leader at St. Paul's church, Norwood, and at St. Mary's church, Grafton, acting also as organist for a time at St. Peter's Catheral in this city.

The whole of her married life was passed in this city and she was a fine example of the devoted wife and mother. Her main interest at all times lay in her home, husband and children, the latter being trained by her in the best precepts of the church of which she was a devout member. She was a woman of very high principle and extreme charity of tongue and will be greatly missed by her husband, who survives her, and seven children: Eileen at home, Sister Kathleen of the Sisterhod of St. Joseph, in North Bay, Vincent M., John P., Leo and Robt. P., all of Peterborough, and Thos. J. of North Pines, Ontario. One sister also survives, Mrs. Frank McFadden, of Lindsay, and three brothers, Robert of Oshawa, Joseph of Peterborough and Thomas J., Editor of the Lindsay Post.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning from her late residence, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where services will be held at nine o'clock, thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

Investigation Reveals No Clue To Cause Of Montreal Blaze

SAY SPECTATORS WERE STANDING IN AISLES NEAR REAR OF BALCONY WHEN ALARM WAS FIRST GIVEN

Testimony Given By Two Witnesses Before Fire Commissioner Investigating Cause of Montreal Theatre Horror—Proprietor Had Been Fined For Breaking Laws.

HAD SEVERAL FIRES ON OWN PROPERTY.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—When Sunday's performance in the Laurier Palace Moving Picture Theatre here was in progress—a performance that ended with the sacrifice of 77 lives when a stampede resulting from a panic cry of fire caused a rush to the exits with the consequent smothering of that number of children—spectators were standing in the rear aisles in the balcony. This was the testimony of two lads and one man given yesterday before Fire Commissioner Quinn, who was investigating the disaster.

Three hours were consumed in the Fire Commissioner's Court, and this was the salient fact brought out during the probe. Little light was cast upon the cause of the blaze, beyond that it had started in the balcony.

Overshadowing this was the examination of Ameen Lawand, proprietor of the theatre, who was keenly interrogated by crown counsel, insurance company counsel, and lawyers representing families of children who had lost their lives in the catastrophe. The questions directed to him ranged from a bombardment, demanding particulars of his schooldays in Syria, of which country he is a native, to his management of various enterprises in Montreal.

So wide was the interrogation that the representative of one insurance company felt impelled to remind the court that the coroner's inquest was not in progress, and that ascertaining the origin of the blaze was the "raison d'etre" of the fire court enquiry. Questions were poured out in torrents. A number of admissions followed; some of the lawyers became impatient with Mr. Lawand, but he replied that he was doing his best to answer.

Under the protection of the court, he said, he was the proprietor of the Laurier Palace Theatre and the Maisonneuve Theatre, on Ontario Street East, and was interested in a Mount Royal Avenue bowling alley and billiard room. There had been fires at both theatres, at the bowling alley, and at a factory adjoining his home, the latter blaze affecting his home premises. As to condemnation for infringement of the city by-laws, he said, there had been convictions at both theatres for admitting children under sixteen years of age and at the Laurier Palace Theatre for showing unapproved posters, for having people standing in the aisles and for neglecting to charge the amusement tax.

Mr. Lawand is still under cross-examination. The enquiry was adjourned until Thursday afternoon, when he will be the first witness.

Giving his age as 31, and his address as 992 Sherbrooke Street East, Mr. Lawand asked the protection of the court, and Commissioner Quinn told him: "This is only an inquiry. You are protected in everything you say."

The witness said that he is the proprietor of the St. Catherine Street house, though later he amended that to include his brother, Majeed Lawand, as part owner of the building. On Sunday afternoon last, he continued, he was at the Maisonneuve Theatre, 2677 Ontario Street East, also his property, when one of his men telephoned him that the Laurier Palace was on fire, and that a lot of people had been hurt. He called his brother on the telephone. "Then," the witness went on, "I went to my house. I thought I could do more at my house, as I knew that the firemen and the policemen were at the theatre. I went to the house. I called up my lawyer, Mr. Couture." He had not been at the Laurier Palace at all on Sunday. "I went to my uncle's house, and around four o'clock I got all my employees there and I heard their evidence."

"What did they tell you?" the Commissioner asked.

"They told me that the fire had started in the front of the balcony."

"Were they able to tell you the cause?"

"No."

The Commissioner referred to a fire at the Maisonneuve Theatre in 1924, at which, it appeared from the questions, the cause might have been rejected carbons from the moving picture machine that had gone through the floor of the operator's box and had rolled to the forepart of the balcony. That could not be the cause of the fire at Laurier Palace, Mr. Lawand thought, since the box floor was in concrete and had been brought up to the standard required by the city regulations.

"Did you ever see any smoking in the balcony of the Laurier Palace?" was the Commissioner's next question.

"I did not see any."

A rumor that the first fifty children to enter the theatre on the day of the disaster were to be given free admission was denied by the witness.

Cross-examined, the witness said

PLAYERS ARE ALL CLEARED

Commissioner Landis Exonerates Baseball Stars Of All Charges.

FUND LEGITIMATE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—All baseball players involved in the alleged scandal between the White Sox and Detroit Tigers in 1917 were exonerated by Commissioner Landis in his decision to-day.

The Commissioner ruled that the fund raised by the White Sox was not collected or paid to the Detroit players for sloughing the series in Chicago but was paid because of the Tigers' achievement in defeating Boston.

The decision in part said:

"In addition to the charge of sloughing the September 2 and 3, 1917, series, Risberg alleges that Chicago sloughed to Detroit two of the three game series at the close of the 1919 season. His only specific allegations are that he played out of position, and that he believed that Gandil (and two other players out of baseball since 1920) also played out of position (first saying, 'I think it was two out of three ball games' and later saying, 'I probably played out of position in all these games'), that he noticed Risberg played out of position, so he figured he would do it also, without even a word between him and Risberg or any Chicago or Detroit players about it. Of course this testimony by Gandil and Risberg is evidence to that extent against them, but there is no evidence whatever supporting a charge involving any other Chicago player."

SPECIAL MEETING CHILDREN'S AID

Decided to Have Usual Tag Day in Aid of Children.

At the special meeting of the Children's Aid Society held yesterday afternoon in the Council Chambers it was decided to have a tag day the same as usual this year. Some of the members suggested raising the money by subscriptions and other means, but the majority wished to have a tag day, and the date will likely be some time during Exhibition week if the City Council allows them to have it at this time of year.

It is the intention of the society to establish auxiliaries in the surrounding villages in this county so as the work of the society will be carried on better and needy cases can be reported to the agent. The agent is to organize these when he is visiting the wards of the society during this coming season.

An office is going to be set aside by the city officials for the agent of the Shelter, and in the future it will be there instead of at his home that people come to see him. This new office brought up considerable discussion, as some of the members thought the agent, Mr. Edgar, could not be in any office and still do the duties required of him as agent for the Society, but as he holds the office of secretary it was thought by the majority of the members of the Society that the proper place for an office was in the City Buildings.

EMPIRE NEEDS NAVAL DEFENCE

Says Premier of Australia, and Dominions Should Bear Share.

VISITS CANADA.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—On arrival here this morning, Premier J. G. Coates, of New Zealand, again endorsed the belief expounded in this country by Premier Bruce of Australia, that the British Dominions should bear their full share of the cost of Imperial Defence. Premier Coates made his first entry into Canada today. Like Premier Bruce, he will cross the Continent on his return from the Imperial Conference, and will stop off in various Canadian cities.

Mr. Coates believed national inferiority in Empire would be corrolary to dependence on the Mother Country in the matter of defence. He made it clear that he was referring to naval matters.

King is Silent

OTTAWA, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—Premier Mackenzie King had no comment to make on the statement of Premier Coates of New Zealand, to the effect that the Dominions must assume their full share of Imperial defence or accept a position of national inferiority.

The Premier also refused to comment on the statement of Premier Bruce of Australia at Vancouver, that Canada must buy more Australian goods if the present trade treaty is to be continued.

Man Falls 9 Stories; Walks To Ambulance

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(A.P.)—William M. Graham, 40 years old, member of a newspaper clipping service firm, fell 8 feet from the ninth floor of an office building here and was able to walk to the ambulance. Doctors say he will recover.

Seized with a dizzy spell, Graham said he went to a window for air, and while leaning out, lost his balance. He fell on a wire screening over a skylight atop a bank occupying the lower floor of the building.

WORK OF RED CROSS SOCIETY REVIEWED AT ANNUAL MEETING

President Discusses Need of Organization During Time of Peace.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Reports of Year's Activities Given By Various Officers.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Red Cross Society was held in the board room of the Public Library yesterday afternoon, when the following members were present: Mrs. Robert Harstone, presiding, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Mrs. G. Boucher, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. Reg. H. Turner, Mrs. B. Law, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Miss E. Morrow, and Miss Laura Davidson. The financial statement for the year was presented by the treasurer, Miss E. Morrow, the recording secretary's report was given by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, and the correspondence was read by the corresponding secretary, Miss Davidson. The report of the nominating committee, composed of Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. R. H. Turner and Miss E. Munro, was presented by Mrs. Turner.

The president, Mrs. Robert Harstone, gave a comprehensive outline of the peace-time policy of the Red Cross Society, both in senior and junior branches. She spoke of the work being done by the organization in hospitals where disabled soldiers are cared for, and of the health campaign of the society, in acting as a voluntary auxiliary to the official authorities, Dominion, Provincial and Municipal. "No movement deserves more of the hearty and enthusiastic support of the people than does this movement," said the president, referring to the discoveries made in war time as to the general unfitness of a large majority of the male population of the nation, and also going on to allude to the splendid health work done by the local Well Babies' Clinic, in forming a foundation of good health in the infant.

With regard to the work of the Junior Red Cross, Mrs. Harstone quoted Dr. Robertson, who delivered a paper on health activities of the Red Cross, at the recent Pan-American Conference in Washington, as saying: "Unquestionably the physical vigor of this nation could be re-made in two generations if by iteration and reiteration, precept, example and experience we could so train our children that they would voluntarily and by force of habit keep their mouths clean, drink milk, eat wholesome cereals, consume fresh vegetables and fresh fruit, drink plenty of water, play in the open air, sleep twelve hours when seven years old, ten hours when fourteen, and follow all the other laws of health that are at the back of the activities of the Junior Red Cross."

Mrs. Harstone referred to the loss by the society in the past year of two faithful members, in the late Mrs. A. W. Cressman and the late Mr. H. Rush, speaking also of the sympathy extended by the society to a member, Mrs. E. C. S. Huycke, who has been ill for so long.

The correspondence, read by Miss Laura Davidson, included a letter from the Red Cross Headquarters in Toronto, outlining what had already been done by them in the outfitting of the Outpost Hospital to be maintained by the Society at Apsley. In commenting on the assistance to be given this hospital

AUSTRALIA WILL EXTEND TERMS OF PREFERENCE

Premier Bruce Says Australians Prefer To Trade in Empire.

FAVORS TREATY.

Believes Trade Commissioner in Canada Would Be Helpful.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 12 (Special to The Examiner).—Our Government is prepared to consider the extension of preference on any Canadian product entering Australia in return for equivalent advantages on Australian produce entering Canada, announced the Right Hon. Stanley Melbourne Bruce, Premier of Australia, on his arrival here yesterday from Banff. "It is not a matter of sentiment," continued the Premier, "but of business. Our object is a reciprocal trade benefit between the various Dominions, and we in Australia would much rather buy from within the Empire than from an outside source, and I am only too anxious that the trade treaty between Canada and Australia will prove a success. Personally I think that it will do so. We had opposition in Australia in putting the treaty through, as Canada sold us a very much greater supply of goods than we sold her. However, it is up to our Australian industries to enlarge their markets in Canada, and I am sanguine as to the result."

At this stage Premier Bruce stressed the point that he considered that the appointment of an Australian Trade Commission to Canada would be a move in the right direction in this connection.

Premier Bruce left on the Canadian Pacific steamer, the Princess Adelaide for Victoria, from which point he will embark today on the S.S. Niagara for home.

HON. W. D. ROSS IS SWORN IN

Succeeds Cockshutt, Who Has Been Lieutenant-Governor Since 1921.

QUIET FUNCTION.

TORONTO, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—In the presence of a few personal friends, judges, representatives of the Toronto City Council, and wives of Ontario Cabinet Ministers, His Honor W. D. Ross was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario in the Legislative Council Chambers at Parliament Buildings today. The oath was given by D. J. Lemaire, Clerk of the Executive Council, who arrived this morning from Ottawa.

Mr. Ross succeeds His Honor Henry Cockshutt, Lieutenant-Governor since 1921.

Before the oath of office was administered by Mr. Lemaire, Col. A. Fraser, A.D.C. to the Lieutenant-Governor, read the commission of appointment to the office. Signing of the register was witnessed by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock and Premier G. H. Ferguson.

Following the ceremony there was an informal reception at which the members of the Provincial Cabinet were presented to His Honor.

Representatives of the church, and prominent Ontario citizens were among those witnessing the proceedings.

This map shows the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes shipway, construction of which jointly by the United States and Canada is recommended in a report by Secretary Hoover's commission. The heavy line shows the route chosen, down the St. Lawrence from Lake Ontario to the sea. The commission says that water power developments on this route would pay a large part of the cost. The dotted lines across New York state shows the "All-American route" which was rejected as too expensive. Passage from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario would be by way of the existing Welland canal, now being reconstructed, the commission turning down a suggestion that a new canal around Niagara Falls be dug on American soil. Secretary Hoover asserts the waterway will be a great boon to the mid-west, and estimates the period of construction at 10 years.

Outcome of Accident That Occurred on Keene Road June 25.

REFUSES TO PLEAD

Accused Remains in Stolid Silence While Charge Being Read.

Thomas Leslie Diamond of Campbellford, was committed for trial yesterday on a charge of having injured persons by furious driving.

The case was heard at the Court House before His Worship Magistrate O. A. Langley, and was the outcome of an accident that occurred on the Keene road, about four miles from Peterborough, on June 25th last.

On that occasion Mr. Diamond, who was the owner and driver of the car, was accompanied by Mrs. Diamond, his wife, Mr. and Mrs. William I. Stillman, and Miss Mary McGregor. The entire party had left Campbellford with the intention of visiting the circus, which was in Peterborough that day.

On nearing Peterborough the car at one bad turn in the road, took to the ditch, crashing into tree, with the result Mrs. Stillman was killed outright, and the other members of the party more or less seriously injured.

The accused wss represented by Charles V. Payne of Belleville. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K. C., appeared for the Crown.

The accused, through his lawyer, refused to plead or elect, standing mute when the charge was read to him.

At the conclusion of the evidence, His Worship stated that he was satisfied that the evidence he had heard warrranted the accused it being committed for trial.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch stated that on June 25 last he received a telephone call to an accident about four miles out of the city on the Keene road. When he arrived at the scene of the accident he saw a woman sitting down. She told him to attend to another woman, Mrs. Stillman, whom, upon examination, he pronounced dead. On the other side of the car he found Mr. Stillman who was suffering from a broken leg and a broken arm. Mr. and Mrs. Diamond had also sustained injuries.

Mr. Stillman, he said, was confined to the hospital for three months, Mr. Diamond for a week and Mrs. Diamond for three weeks.

"Did you have any conversation with Mr. Diamond?" asked Mr. Watson.

Mr. Payne objected to the question but His Worship overruled the objection and admitted the question.

"I refrained as much as possible from discussing the case," declared Dr. McCulloch.

Did Diamond tell you he was driving the car?

Yes.

Did you notice the condition of the road at the scene of the accident?

I did not make a special survey.

W. I. Stillman.

W. I. Stillman, whose wife was killed in the crash, stated that he, his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Diamond, left Campbellford for Peterborough on June 25th about five minutes to twelve. The route they followed was from Campbellford to Hastings and from Hastings to Keene, then from Keene to the spot where the accident occurred.

Do you know the distance between Campbellford and Hastings?

It is supposed to be ten miles.

From Hastings to Keene.

I don't know.

From Keene to the scene of the accident?

I don't know.

Did you follow the regular road?

We had to detour once.

Did it shorten or lengthen the distance?

It lengthened the distance about three miles.

What was the condition of the detour?

It was very bad.

Tell us what you know about the accident?

We were travelling very fast and the car left the road—that's all I know about it.

Was the speed reduced on the hill?

Not to my knowledge.

Where were you sitting in the car?

In front seat beside the driver.

Who was sitting in the back seat?

Miss McGregor was sitting in the east corner, Mrs. Diamond in the middle; Mrs. Stillman in the other corner.

Did you notice at what speed the car was travelling?

I looked the speedometer several times and it showed 40 and 45 miles and sometimes 50.

Did you say anything to Diamond

Whiskers Coming Back Women Can't Copy Them

LONDON, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press). — Whiskers and moustaches are coming back. Barbers say imitation of men's styles and habits by women is given as the direct cause by those now engaged in raising hair adornments.

With women copying masculine fashions in hair cuts, dress, and smoking, proponents of the beard say it stands out more ever as a badge of masculinity and the vogue of the clean-shaven man is on the decline.

SINGAPORE BASE VITAL DEFENSE SAYS PREMIER

Rt. Hon. J. G. Coates, of New Zealand, Arrives at New York.

EMPIRE UNCHANGED.

Decisions of Conference Have Cleared Up Many Misunderstandings.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 12 (United News). — Returning from the Imperial Conference at London the Prime Minister of New Zealand, Joseph G. Coates, arrived aboard the Aquitania last night and left immediately for Ottawa where he will confer with Premier King. He was accompanied by Mrs. Coates.

"The decisions reached at the Imperial Conference," he said, "While they make no changes in the Empire have cleared up a great many misunderstandings."

He spoke of the Singapore naval base as a vital part of British defense in the Pacific and said he thought work on it should continue.

"In New Zealand we leave the question of prohibition to our constituents. The government makes no attempt to influence them in any way," he said.

Compulsory registration in New Zealand brings out 70 per cent of the voters, the Premier said.

WOULD CONSIDER CANCEL CHARTER OF RATIONALISTS

Society in Teaching Against Deity Exceeded Rights Opines Solicitor.

SELL LITERATURE.

Many Objects Named in Petition For Incorporation of Society.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—According to Col. W. W. Denison, solicitor to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, the Rationalist Society of Canada, one of whose members was arrested on Monday in Toronto for alleged blasphemous libel, first sought incorporation as the Agnostic Society. This application was turned down by Col. Denison, who stated that no such organization would be authorized by the Ontario Government.

Later the solicitor of the organization returned with a new set of aims and objects, and a new name, the present one. As nothing objectionable appeared in the text of the amended application, it was granted, although it was known that the parties were agnostics or atheists.

Will Ask Cancellation.

Col. Denison stated that he would ask Provincial Secretary Hon. L. Goldie to cancel the charter of the company upon conviction. "In cases of other clubs and societies we insert in their charters that they must not gamble. When they are convicted of gambling we automatically cancel the charter. I think we can follow the same course in this instance."

After reading the aims and objects, as set forth, to Col. Denison, he was asked, "Haven't the society exceeded the powers granted them by propagating atheism?"

"Yes," he replied, "and if they are convicted I will ask the Minister to take up with the Attorney-General the matter of cancelling the charter. The aims and objects as found in the application for a charter are quite laudable."

Incorporated Last May.

The Rationalist Society of Canada obtained incorporation as a company without share capital from the Companies Branch of the Ontario Government under date of May 11, 1926. There was nothing set forth in the correspondence with the Department to indicate that the society was organized for the purpost of propagating atheistical doctrine.

Incorporation of the society was obtained upon the application of S. E. Leavens, cabinetmaker; W. H. Styles, rigger; Elizabeth Hunting, married woman; Harry Stiver, salesman; E. V. Sterry, laborer. The Department was advised to correspond with E. Lionel Cross, barrister, 131½ Queen Street West.

Aims and Objects.

In the petition for incorporation, the objects of the Society were defined as follows: "To promote the study of science and philosophy as laid down by the great masters; to find our place in and our duty to the great body social; to promote among our fellows true morality as based on natural law; to produce unity and concord along sane and logical lines, and to produce happiness and prosperity in Canada; to broadcast, to lecture and to publish, circulate, sell and dispose of literature; and for the better carrying out of its aims and objects to receive and accept gifts and property of whatever nature, and to dispose of them for the purposes and benefit of the society."

OLD MASTERS

It was the winter wild
While the heaven born child
All meanly wrapt in the rude manger lies;
Nature in awe to him
Had doff'd her gaudy trim,
With her great Master so to sympathize:
It was no season then for her
To wanton with the sun, her lusty paramour.

No war or battle's sound
Was heard the world around:
The idle spear and shield were high uphung;
The hooked chariot stood
Unstain'd with hostile blood;
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng;
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they surely knew their sovran Lord was by.

The Oracles are dumb;
No voice or hideous hum
Runs through the arched roofs in words deceiving.
Apollo from his shrine
Can no more divine,
With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving:
No nightly trance or breathed spell
Inspires the pale eyed priest from prophetic cell.

But see! the Virgin blest
Hath laid her Babe to rest;
Time is, our tedious song should here have ending:
Heaven's youngest teemed star
Hath fix'd her polish'd car,
Her sleeping Lord with handmaid lamp attending:
And all about the courtly stable
Bright harness'd angels sit in order serviceable.

—J. Milton: Selected from "Ode on the Morning of Christ's Nativity."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

SYMPATHY

Feeble the words we find for grief,
And poor the things we say;
There's little then that our belief
Can give, or take away.
But we can give as much as this:
A brother's hand, a sister's kiss,
A friendly clasp, a gentle nod—
Prove with our love the love of God.

We need not emphasize their loss
Nor talk too much of gain;
They know the weight of their own cross,
The depth of their own pain.
But it is something, after all,
When the sad tears of sorrow fall,
To know that there is someone near,
For, if men hear, then God will hear.

And this is all that friends can do,
And yet that all is much:
To give to sorrow, groping through
Its night, a hand to touch.
But mortal when the day is fine,
In days of grief we are divine,
For they who come with kindness then
Are angels that appear to men.

Minnesota Swallower Confounds His Texas Opponents By Downing 85 Cups of Coffee To Set World's Record

FERGUS FALLS, Minn., Jan. 12 (UP)—Confounding his imitators with the beautiful precision in which one swallow followed another, Gust Comstock of Fergus Falls, yesterday set a world's all-time record for coffee drinking.

At 2.10 p.m., the barber shop porter, who doubles as a guzzling champion, had downed a grand total of 85 cups.

Comstock was interviewed as the 85th cup was drained.

"All I can say at this time," he said, over the rim of the cup, "is that I'll show those guys in Texas what us guys in Minnesota can do."

After a one-hour respite, between noon and one p.m., when he submitted himself to the questions of admirers, the world champion attacked the drinking process with new vigor, and in one short hour drank 21 cups. He paused ten minutes before emptying the 85th.

Comstock's Texas reference concerned H. A. Streety, of Dallas, and Perry Wilson, of Amarillo, who have 71 and 70 cups respectively, to their credit.

ELECT SOCIALIST DEPUTY LEADER

Won on Third Ballot Over Former Minister M. Maginot.

1927 SESSION.

PARIS, Jan. 12. — (Canadian Press.)— The French Chamber of Deputies began its regular session of 1927 yesterday by electing a socialist, Fernand Bouisson, as its president. He won on the third ballot, by a vote of 284 to 186 over M. Maginot, former minister of war.

Little political significance is attached to the action of the chamber in establishing a new precedent by electing a Socialist for M. Bouisson is looked upon as one of the most moderate leaders of the party. He is considered an expert presiding officer, having established a good record in the chamber as vice-president for several years.

His election, however, marked a remoulding of the left groups of radicals and socialists, and in some quarters is interpreted as a possible menace to the Poincare cabinet.

The Chamber is faced with a programme of important foreign and domestic questions, prominent among them a plan for placing the franc on a sound basis. Premier Poincare has not yet disclosed the details.

It is known, however, that M. Poincare deems France's domestic affairs more important for the moment than the foreigen, and for that reason it is not expected that ratification of the debt agreement with the United States can be considered until late in the session.

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 12.—A most interesting meeting was held by the members of the South Monaghan U. F.Y.P.O. in their hall at Centreville on Friday evening, in the form of a musical entertainment.

The president, W. Waterman, presided, and at the conclusion of the business end of the meeting, the social side included solos by F. Dawson; a debate, "Resolved, that oratory is better form of enterlainment than music," F. Barnard and Miss M. Earl taking the affirmative, while Miss M. Thorn and R. Rutherford debated the negative. The judges, who wer Mis- Wallace, K. Huggins and C. Hall, gave the decision in favor of the affirmative. A splendid paper on musical composers was ably given by Miss V. White, and during the programme some lively group singing was indulged in.

Three amusing musical contests were enjoyed.

Miss T. Bonneycastle and W. Hall won the prize in the first contest, while in the second and third Miss E. Tate and H. Campbell guessed the greatest number of answers correctly.

The young people's organization are planning a membership drive, and a special prize is to be awarded the member securing the greatest number of members.

The next regular meeting will be held on Friday, January 21st.

New England States Hit By the Worst Storm Since 1898.

WIRES DOWN.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Jan. 12. — (Canadian Press.)— A storm, described as the worst since the blizzard of 1898, in which the steamer Portland was lost off Cape Cod, last night threatened to isolate the ancient captial of the Massachusetts colony.

Under the lash of a 50 mile norther that had raged since early morning, street car and electric light services were out of commission last night and many highways were blocked by tangles of fallen wires. Waves from 15 to 20 feet high were breaking over main roads skirting the sea front, and high ice walls had been formed as the water froze along the banks.

The first cruel winter spent by the pilgrims here was recalled when citizens took to candles to light their houses after the electric current had failed.

WORK OF RED CROSS

by the local branch, it was decided to confer with Rev. Mr. Spence of Apsley, in an effort to determine just what brand of assistance would be most acceptable. A letter from the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, asking for the usual assistance from the Red Cross Society in the work of the members, was responded to with the decision to give this Society a certain amount of supplies remaining to the Red Cross Society, also the sum of $50.

The report of the Nominating Committee, which was adopted as read, was as follows:

President: Mrs. Robert Harstone; vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, of Toronto; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. W. H. Hill; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer; corresponding secretary, Miss L. Davidson; recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner; treasurer, Miss E. Morrow; executive, Mrs. G. Boucher, Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle, Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. G. N. Gordon, Mrs. E. C. S. Huycke, Mrs. B. Law, Mrs. G. A. Macdonald, Mrs. Reg. H. Turner, Miss M. Rush and Miss E. Munro.

The financial statement, submitted by Miss E. Morrow, treasurer is as follows: For year ending Dec. 31, 1926: Receipts: Balance on hand, Dec. 31, 1925, $3797.24; membership fees, $20; Home nursing Classes, $63.25; interest on bank balance, $151.92. Total: $4032.41.

Expenditures: Salary Instructor Home Nursing Classes, $375; supplies, Home Nursing Classes, $8.15; Ontario Division Red Cross Society Manuals, $39.39; donation, Well Babies' Clinic, $100; Christmas donations, returned soldiers, $233.02; printing, $8.95; balance on hand, Dec 31, 1926, $3267.79.

The report submitted by the recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, was as follows:

"Madam President, and members of the Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society: I beg to present the following report of the work of the year 1926: While heartily endorsing the Peace Time policy of the Cross, viz., the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world, and while gladly adopting the Red Cross Peace Time motto of "Health for All and All for Health," the activities of the local branch, along these health lines have been peculiarly limited, due solely to unavoidable local conditions. This society, however, has been able to make monetary contributions to the support of the splendid work of the Well Babies' Clinic, and grants of material to the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. to aid them in their laudable undertakings.

"During the past year Home Nursing Classes were again organized and maintained by this society, and a goodly number took advantage of the instruction given by Miss McNaughton, the nurse engaged for this purpose.

"As in past years, the society was once more privileged at Christmas time to send Christmas cheer to the families of ex-service men, settled in the remote districts of Ontario. To three families, boxes well filled with good, new warm clothing for each member, staple articles of food, as well as some Christmas treats, and much desired reading matter, were despatched. From two of these families already heartfelt letters of thanks have been received, testifying to the relief and satisfaction these boxes had brought.

"t interest to all will be the announcement that Outpost Hospitals are being established at Apsley and Bancroft, points regarded as being more or less within our own community, and within the scope of our immediate responsibility. The hospital at Apsley is at the request of headquarters to be, so to speak, "Mothered" by this local branch, and plans are under way for this society to furnish completely the nurse's bedroom. What such a hospital will mean for the health, the comfort and the well being of that northern portion of our county, cannot as yet be adequately estimated, but its influence cannot be too highly appraised, nor can the co-operation and support of all be too earnestly solicited.

"Since our last annual meeting this local branch has suffered the loss of two very sympathetic and loyal friends and workers: Mrs. A. W. Cressman, one of the beloved members of this executive, and Mr. H. Rush, a long standing, honored and wise member of the Advisory Board. May we at this time, while recording our realization of this society's loss and our sincere symphy with the members of these two families in their recent bereavement, determine to try and emulate the examples set us in these two lives of unselfish service and to take to ourselves the exhortation of the American poet to—

"So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasdreams."

BARTY HANGED FOR MURDER

Execution, Once Postponed, Takes Place This Morning in Hamilton,

BRUTAL CRIME.

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—Twelve minutes after he dropped through the trap on the scaffold here this morning, John Barty was dead, having paid the full penalty of the law for murdering Mrs. Nancy Cook last June while attempting to rob the cash register in the grocery store where she was employed.

Barty went calmly to the scaffold and died with a prayer on his lips. He awoke about 5.30, dressed, and partook of a hearty breakfast, eating and drinking all the food and coffee that was placed before him. Following breakfast he spent some time with his spiritual adviser, Envoy McDougall of the Salvation Army while jurors, officials, and press representatives gathered in a room adjoining his cell.

About 7 o'clock Hangman Arthur Ellis entered his cell to prepare him for execution. Barty submitted readily to Ellis' attentions and shortly after commenced the short procession to the death chamber handcuffed and guarded by two turnkeys and followed by Mr. McDougall, Deputy Sheriff Zealand, Governor Lalond and Ellis. He mounted the scaffold with a firm step and took his place on the trap. Ellis quickly pinioned his arms and legs, adjusted the noose, and slipped the black cap over his head while the condemned man's lips moved silently in prayer.

Stepping back Ellis turned to Mr. McDougall, and said: "Chaplain, please say The Lord's Prayer"

"Our Father, which art——"

Ellis broke through the prayer as he pullad the lever and Barty dropped through the trap at 7.22. At 7.34 he was pronounced dead.

WINNIPEG OFFICIALS INSPECT THEATRES

Are Guarding Against Disaster Similar To That At Montreal.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)— City officials charged with the responsibility of looking to safeguards in Winnipeg against such a tragedy as occurred in the Laurier Palace Theatre, Montreal, yesterday were conducting a survey of several places of amusement, including picture and vaudeville houses. Safety conditions in local theatres, however, are declared to be reasonably good.

Commenting on the Montreal disaster, Chief of Police C. M. Newton to-day advocated periodic inspections, daily, if possible, of all theatres in Winnipeg, to see that exits are in good working order, and also urged that the Provincial Fire Commissioner's Department continue with the work of holding fire drills in the theatres.

Bigamist Hid Identity In War-Front Burial; German Soldier Discovered With First Family

BERLIN, Jan. 12 — In July, 1918, Private Karl Schuz of the Ninety-third Prussian Grenadiers, was buried with full military honors at Nesle, on the French front, where he had fallen a victim to American shellfire. The certificate of his death, together with his iron cross and other belongings were sent to his widow. Six years later she remarried.

A few days ago the state Insurance authorities asked the widow what she knew about one Karl Schulz, ho had sought to obtain illness insurance, but was recorded as dead.

The inquiry caused her to visit an apartment where her erstwhite husband, supposedly dead for eight years, was living contentedly with a wife and family whom he had acquired some time before he contracted a bigamous marriage with the official Frau Schulz.

The mistake about his death was due to his having exchanged identity papers with a stain comrade and deserted from the army. Quite a lot of trouble now confronts the bigamist.

HANGED TODAY

HAMILTON, Jan. 12. — John Barty, condemned to hang for the murder of Mrs. Nancy Cook last August, and granted a reprieve three weeks ago, paid the supreme penalty for his crime this morning. An appeal was made to the Minister of Justice to grant a new trial because of alleged mis-direction of the jury, but the Minister sent word yesterday that he saw no reason to interfere with the sentence. Hangman Ellis came here yesterday and the execution was performed early this morning.

SAY SPECTATORS WERE STANDING

he had no advice that one of the insurance companies insuring the building had announced cancellation of the policy next month; neither had he heard of any cancellation at all. The theatre had twice been closed—once during the influenza epidemic, and also during the police strike. The Federal or the Provincial authorities had never closed it.

The early part of the afternoon was taken up with the testimony of a Fire Department Lieutenant, and of people who were in the theatre.

Sixteen-year-old Henri Paul Lavigne, of 1809 Notre Dame Street swore that spectators were standing at the rear of the balcony when the fire broke out in the front of the gallery Charlemagne Pelletier, 18 years old, of 2072 Adam Street, also saw standees at the rear. Neither had noticed any smoking among the audience upstairs.

A particularly poignant tale of efforts at rescue was given by Georges Lavigne, father of a boy who was in the gallery. The father was on the ground floor. "I kept an eye on upstairs," he said, "because I could see some were standing, and I thought my boy would be with them." When the cry of "fire" came from the balcony, he had jumped on his seat downstairs, with the idea of holding back the ground floor audience, which was not in danger, so that the stream would not block the doors leading to the lobby from the balcony. He saw the children pile up on the western stairs, got caught in the jam as he went to the balcony from the lobby in an effort to save some of the young ones, fought his way through the black smoke to the balcony and got to the level again by a ladder. He tried to pull some of the children out of the jam but could not do so; in addition, he came near to losing consciousness on the smoke-filled stairway.

Exercising To Reduce Is a Fine Way To Gain

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(A.P.) Exercising to reduce weight will only add to the fat, Prof. Arthur H. Steinhaus, head of the department of biological science of the Y.M.C.A. college here, announced to-day after three years of experiments conducted with dogs.

He built a treadmill in which five mongrel dogs ran a mile a day each for six months, and at the same time placed the hard working canines on a reduced diet. All gained weight while "Spud," a sixth mongrel, on the same diet and with no exercise whatever, maintained a constant weight.

"The only value of exercise," Professor Steinhaus concluded, "is to keep you in good health. Over-exercise should not be used as machinery for reducing weight."

RAILWAY COSTS BEFORE BOARD

Examine Witnesses Before Commission in Freight Rate Revision Case.

GIVES ESTIMATES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—A. Chard, Alberta freight expert, was on the witness stand all day before the Railway Commission in the general freight rate revision case. In the morning S. S. Woods, Alberta counsel, examined the witness on railway costs. In the afternoon the witness was examined by E. P. Flintoft, Canadian Pacific Railway counsel regarding the basis of his estimates of costs. The witness testified that in his calculations he had taken the cost per mile on the C.P.R., at 3.9861 mills. Similar cost on the National Railway was 5.07936 mills. He agreed that he had applied the percentage of total cost allocated to freight, or 70 per cent., to rates both east and west. He admitted that passenger traffic was heaviest in the east.

"I suppose it would be fair to make allowance for intensity of passenger service in the east," he said, maintaining, however, that the difference made by such would not be great.

Mr. Flintoft declared Mr. Chard's basis to be "a pure guess—purely theoretical. As a rate making proposition it is nothing less than fantastic."

Late in the afternoon the counsel and the commission became deeply involved in the statistics being analyzed when Deputy Chief Commissioner Vien interrupted to say that "we've spent three weeks listening to the examination of some witnsses, often wondering if it was worth while. We have listened patiently for counsel to show us where their calculations were valuable."

H. P. Ducherin, representing Nova Scotia, criticized the "irrelevancy and waste of time" of day's examiantion. "Some of us hope to know where all this is going to land us before spending another week on it."

Acting Chief Commissioner McLean replying said that he under stood M. Chard's statistical statements to be "part of a critical attack on Transcontinental rates."

INVESTIGATING BEAM SYSTEM

'Phone Service Between Canada and Great Britain Still Indefinite.

ARE EXPERIMENTING.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—No definite date can yet be fixed when it will be commercially possible to inaugurate direct telephone communication between London and Montreal, via the beam system, according to information reaching British United Press yesterday.

At present the service is only in an experimental stage and the attention of officials is being devoted towards seeing how trans-Atlantic conversations may be carried on in secrecy, but it is expected that if present tests are successful the post office will lose no time in deciding to open a regular service between here and the Canadian metropolis, similar to that between London and New York.

BODY FOUND

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—The body of Louis Philippe Tremblay, aged 13, who has been missing since the Laurier Palace theatre fire on Sunday, in which seventy-seven children lost their lives, was found late yesterday in a local undertaking parlor, where it had been taken by mistake. The body was removed to the family home from where the funeral will take place to-day.

ENGLISH CHURCH DISPUTE QUICKLY COMING TO HEAD

Bishops of Church in Conference To-day at Lambeth Place.

SEEKING COMPROMISE.

Anglo-Catholics and Evangelicals Divided Over Prayer Book Changes.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—What is described as the greatest crisis in the history of the Church of England will be faced to-day, when bishops assemble at Lambeth Palace to complete their consideration of the proposed changes in the Prayer Book, concerning which Evangelicals and Anglo-Catholics are hopelessly divided.

The Anglo-Catholics are said to be desirous of retaining many forms of the Prayer Book which the Protestants declare were ejected at time of the Reformation and to have threatened that if these forms are abolished they will secede.

The Bishops of Birmingham, Durham, Norwich, Worcester and Ripon are on the side of the Evangelicals, the Bishops of Truro, London, St. Albans, Chester and Southwell are on the side of the Anglo-Catholics, while the Bishops of Manchester and Winchester will, it is said, vote for a reservation rubric.

Seeks Compromise.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is striving to the utmost to secure a compromise, but his efforts in this direction are not regarded optimistically as much bitterness has already manifested itself in heated debate whenever this question is discussed.

Throughout the entire church there is the greatest anxiety over the outcome of this conference, which will continue until January 22.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

A Meeting of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild Held on Wednesday.

MARMORA, Jan. 12.—At a meeting of the ladies of St. Paul's Guild held in the home of Mrs. H. R. Pearce on Wednesday afternoon, all the officers were re-elected for the ensuing year.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vestry meeting of St. Paul's church is to be held on Monday, Jan. 17, and that of Holy Trinity church the following Wednesday.

Rev. C. J. Beekley was the week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wells.

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin McCoy returned from Niagara Falls on Saturday after visiting the former's sister, Mrs. Frank Fox.

Mrs. Charles Jones is visiting relatives in Havelock.

A large number of friends attended the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. William Smith at their home on Friday evening and report a pleasant time being spent.

MOUNT JULIAN

MOUNT JULIAN, Jan. 12.—The United Church at Mount Julian had a successful social at Christmas at which $44.00 was made.

Rev. Mr. Ogden, the minister, with his family, has been spending his vacation at Montreal.

Miss Bell and Miss Ballard, who have been teaching in the schools at Mount Julian and Burleigh Falls, held a pretty Christmas tree on which each child was remembered at the closing of the schools. A nice lunch was served and three hearty cheers given for the teachers.

Frank Church is home on a visit after being absent nine years in the West. He and his sister, Miss Tillie Church, went down to Belleville Hospital to see Miss Dollie, who is training for a nurse, and has been ill. She will return home for a while to recuperate.

Mr. and Mrs. Loeb and Fleda of Norwood spent Christmas with their aunt, Mrs. Walsh.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The City Council's grant of $400 to the Trent Waterway Development Association will appeal to the majority of citizens as a good investment.

The association has done a great deal through its exhibit at the New York Motor Boat Show and its other publicity devices to attract a larger volume of tourist traffic to this district, and Peterboro naturally derives a large share of the financial returns represented by this influx of visitors.

The city that expects to secure a worth-while proportion of tourist business must keep itself before the people of the northern part of the United States, and Peterboro could not hope to accomplish that result with such a modest expenditure as $400 in any other way than through the efficient efforts of the Trent Waterway Association.

Every cruiser that passes up or down the Trent Canal means more money put into circulation in Peterboro, for this city is a logical shopping point for visitors and regarded as headquarters for supplies.

The association's publicity work has been successful in bringing many motor boat parties to this district, and once the waterway is completed the number will, of course, be very materially increased.

PROTECTING THE CHILDREN.

Hon. W. H. Price, Ontario's Attorney-General, and other officials are of the opinion that Ontario's regulations in regard to children attending moving picture theatres are effective in protecting the little patrons, and that there is not much likelihood of a repetition of the Montreal disaster in this Province.

That opinion is, however, open to question.

The rules in Ontario are to the effect that children under 15 years of age are not to be admitted unless accompanied by an adult, but the exception is made that on Saturdays and on public holidays, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 6 p.m., when a matron is on duty, children may be allowed to attend.

How the efforts of one matron could prevent a panic among several hundred children in the event of an alarm of fire is something that is not made clear.

The Montreal tragedy was due to the fact that with no older persons with them to take hold of the situation the children became mad with fear.

Under the present regulations in Ontario, which on the very days when children are most likely to attend in greatest numbers remove the necessity of adults accompanying them, the only safeguard provided by the law is the presence of a woman attendant.

Is that enough protection?

Could a matron control a mob of children if an emergency arose?

A DRIVE FOR ACTION.

Premier J. E. Brownlee of Alberta and Premier Ferguson have been in consultation, and the result is a decision to have the two Provinces unite in an effort to push forward the marketing of Alberta coal in Ontario.

The first step will be to urge a speedy inquiry by the Railway Board into the question of haulage costs.

The whole problem hinges upon that point.

Alberta has the coal, an abundance of it; Ontario has the market, and the Western fuel has given satisfaction when tried out here.

The success of the scheme depends upon the cost of haulage, and until that has been determined by the Railway Board there is little that can be done.

In the interests of the people of the two Provinces and of the Dominion generally, the Board should grant an inquiry as early as possible.

If this is done and it is found feasible to set a satisfactory rate, the movement of coal eastward could be commenced with the opening up of spring, and by next winter Ontario would be receiving a large share of its fuel supply from within the Dominion, keeping large sums of money in the country that are at present being sent out for the benefit of United States operators and coal miners.

With the two Provinces uniting in a drive for action the Railway Board will surely be impressed with the desirability of dealing promptly with this very important matter.

THE WELCOME ON THE MAT.

The action of Mayor Holloway in inviting the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Ontario to hold their next annual meeting in Peterboro has been confirmed by the City Council, although the question of whether or not the expenditure involved would be worth while was raised by some of the Aldermen.

It is difficult, of course, to estimate in dollars and cents the benefit to a municipality in entertaining a convention of this kind, but as a general principle it is safe to conclude that the bringing to the city of representative citizens of the Province is good business.

Conventions, as a rule, result in expenditures on the part of the delegates that more than equal the cost of entertaining them, and at the same time there is a publicity value about such affairs that cannot be ignored.

A city that gets to be known as a desirable locale for gatherings of this nature is usually regarded as a decidedly worth-while sort of a place, and a reputation along that line does not hurt any centre that is ambitious to attract new industries and increase its population.

By all means bring the Associated Boards here for their annual meeting, and if there are other bodies looking for the logical site for their 1927 convention, let it be known that the welcome on Peterboro's mat is there for keeps.

"THE CURSE OF AMERICA."

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo, of New York City, whose knowledge of the subject will not be doubted by anyone, declared in an address at Philadelphia before the American Association for the Advancement of Science that the revolver is "the curse of America" and should be suppressed. Mr. McAdoo corroborates what has been said on this page: that the revolver has no lawful place in modern life and serves no useful purpose, but does, on the other hand, encourage crime and criminals and make for lawlessness and disorder.

It is interesting to read what the Chief Magistrate has to say on the subject:

"I know of one man in New York, who in three years made $400,000 through the sale of revolvers and pistols through the mails.

"Whatever State or national legislation we have tried to get through is counteracted by one of the most efficient and cleverly managed lobbies connected with any business enterprise. The pistol lobby is now vigorously opposing the bill pending in the Senate, which already has gone through the House, forbidding the transportation of pistols through the mails.

"The householder who attempts to combat a burglar with a revolver or the citizen who reaches for his hip at the time of a hold-up stands a fine chance of being shot down and no chance of doing anything to protect himself. Even bank messengers are more in danger because of the fact that they carry revolvers.

"The United States is the greatest market for firearms in the world. Pistols are almost as plentiful as pencils. There are more people shot to death, or wounded by pistol-fire, in the United States in a year than in all the rest of the world. The pistol and the automobile are the greatest temptations we put in the way of young outlaws—ranging from 16 to 26 years—who are looking for easy money.

"We lead the world also in the production of this young criminal class.

"Nobody knows how many crimes are committed in which revolvers play a part. The police records tell only of those in which arrests are made. The remainder go unreported."

Indulgence in doleful lamentations over their perpetual "crime wave" is almost a habit among the Americans. Unfortunately they do nothing more practical about it, perhaps because crime and the machinery of crime constitute a powerful factor in business and, sometimes, in politics. There is no mystery about the matter of keeping crime within the limits which seem inevitable. The elimination of the revolver, the simplification of the criminal law and procedure, and the stern enforcement of justice will regain in the United States the respect for law which never has been lost in Canada. — Ottawa Journal.

A CHANGE IN ITALY.

Premier Mussolini has issued a very pointed order to those charged with enforcement of law in Italy. It is, in brief, that prefects will be severely punished if they permit repetitions of incidents which followed the last attempts on the dictator's life. These incidents took the form of attacks on several Catholic institutions and some foreign consulates, and brought protests from the Vatican and elsewhere. Another sample of Fascisti violence was reported in a dispatch the other day which told of a priest being beaten to death by a Fascisti mob because he had defied an order calling for the disbanding of a Boy Scout troop of which he was the head.

Mr. Mussolini says this sort of thing must not go on. All lawlessness, especially if directed against the representatives of foreign powers in Italy, must be repressed with an iron hand, the Premier declares, adding, "The relations between peoples are too delicate, and may lead to such developments that it is absolutely intolerable that they be at the mercy of irresponsible agitations. Whatever may happen to me personally, the period of reprisals, devastations and violence is now over."

The Premier's statement indicates two things. One is that he recognizes the bad impression created outside by the violence of Fascisti methods. Secondly, he is continually expecting another attack on his life, one that might be fatal and that, perhaps, would lead to acts of violence far in excess of anything staged to date. He is endeavoring, so far as possible, to prepare the people for the worst that might happen and to control their actions accordingly.

The trend of future events in Italy is uncertain. Even if Mr. Mussolini continues to escape assassins, the form of government which he heads is not, in the very nature of things, built on a lasting foundation. It is an emergency administration, assembled on short notice, to meet a great national crisis. Its methods are hard and though willingly accepted by most of the people now, must sooner or later prove irksome, particularly as they apply to control of individual action in nothing more important than hours in which dancing may be enjoyed. People will submit to restrictions of this kind when national stress demands them or when some persons convince them that it does. But they cannot continue indefinitely.

Mr. Mussolini has done big things for Italy. Even his critics admit that. Practically every Canadian who has visited the country since the dictator seized the reins of power will testify as to the greatness of the present Premier's work. So, whether he remains in power long, or goes out within the next year or so, Mussolini has carved an imperishable place for himself in the hall of earthly fame and done enough to rank him with Italy's greatest for all time. —Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A pickpocket-proof pocket has been invented in New York. The article is expected to be in keen demand among married men.

The ballot-plugger in Windsor who is credited with marking 100 ballots, evidently took that "Vote as you like" slogan too literally.

All moving picture houses of Ontario, says The Globe, should be thoroughly inspected, in view of the Montreal disaster, to see that ample provision is provided for speedy exit.

Fuss and feathers marked the inaugural meeting of the Toronto City Council. And doubtless there will be plenty of feathers flying at future meetings as well.

It will soon be possible to see over the radio. It will be interesting to note whether some of those soprano soloists look as bad as they sound.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 11 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again inactive, there being practically no demand from any source.

The trading in cash grain in the domestic market was also quiet, but prices were unchanged.

The demand for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour was extremely dull, but values ruled firm.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under an active demand. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady with a moderate amount of trade passing.

There was no further actual change in prices for fresh and storage eggs yesterday, but the market was still in an unsettled state owing to the liberal supplies available and indications are that values will go still lower. The demand yesterday was fair. The receipts were 1,519 cases.

A fair trade was done in potatoes and prices were firm. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.85 to $1.90 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec bite stock sold at $1.50 per bag of 90 pounds, in bulk.

Only a small trade in butter was done, but the undertone to the market was steady. The receipts were 490 packages.

There was some demand for cheese from English importers and a small volume of business was done. The local trade was dull. The receipts were 55 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—With the world's available supply showing 9,369,000 bushels increase and with Canadian railroad embargoes announced, wheat turned downward yesterday at the last.

Closing quotations on wheat were weak, 1-4 to 3-4 net lower, corn unchanged to 3-8 off; oats unchanged to 1-8 down and provisions showing 12 to 25 cents advance.

Corn turned weak on account of extensive profit taking. The reaction, however, was not until after an advance based largely on knowledge that yesterday's receipts here were but 113 cars, a total considerably under the estimation. Oats followed corn.

"PATHOS" and "BATHOS"

A correspondent writes:

"I saw the word 'bathos' used the other day, and believed it was an error or misprint for 'pathos.' On looking it up, I was greatly surprised to learn that they are two distinct words. I think your readers would be interested in learning the difference."

As is asserted in the foregoing letter, there is a wide difference in meaning between the word "pathos" and the word "bathos." The former, which is used much more frequently than the latter, means, according to Webster:

"That quality of human or animal experience or of its representation in art which awakens feelings of pity, sympathy and tender sorrow."

"Bathos," on the other hand, has the following meaning:

"A ludicrous descent from the elevated to the commonplace, in writing or speech; anti climax".

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

MOUTH DIGESTION

Many of you have practiced chewing your food at least thirty times before swallowing it. Health teachers all over the world have been teaching people to masticate more thoroughly. Horace Fletcher taught the layman through various books the necessity for masticating food well, and his name has gone down in History as the foremost exponent of theart of chewing. The word "Fletcherize" is now in all standard dictionaries.

The chemical action taking place in the mouth is this: The digestive fluid of the mouth contains a ferment or enzyme called ptyalin which has the chemical power to change starch into sugar or maltose. Only 5% of the entire starch digestion takes place in the mouth, but this is the most important part of the digestion, and is equal in many ways to the other 95% which takes place in the small intestines. If the starch is properly mixed with the saliva it is changed just enough, so that when the starch passes through the stomach it is not harmed by the gastric juice.

Starch must be digested by an alkaline ferment, and the acid of the stomach only interferes with this digestion, consequently if the starch is somewhat changed before it reaches the stomach, the stomach acid will not have so pronounced an effect upon it.

There is no doubt but what if food is enjoyed it will digest more readily, and be assimilated more completely. When food is chewed properly a finer flavor will be noted, as the starch in the food is changed to maltose, and consequently that food will taste more enjoyable.

One of the greatest objections to cooked foods is that they encourage hasty swallowing, whereas, with the raw food it is necessary to masticate them thoroughly or they cannt be swallowed with comfort.

If you completely masticate your food you will find that you will eat much less. Many digestive troubles will be overcome by this simple practice of mastication, which will cut down the quantity of food.

Mastication should be practiced diligently if only to give the teeth exercise; as the blood will not circulate in the teeth well unless they are properly used. The organic salts, and vitamines will likewise be extracted from the food more readily and furnish material for the building of good teeth.

Be sure and chew melons and fruit as well as you do any other kind of food, because these foods contain a good deal of sugar and require mixture with the saliva.

Milk must also be well masticated, and each swallow of milk should be churned about in the mouth before it is swallowed, then let it just trickle down the throat and do not let more than a few drops go down at a time; or if you do you will find that air is swallowed along with the milk.

To play safe take plenty of, time to eat a small amount of food at each meal. It is folly to hurry through a meal in five minutes, and then spend hours complaining about the indigestion produced.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

LET HIM STUB HIS OWN TOES

By Dr. Frank Crane.

One of the unpopular elements about being highly moral and good is that we try to make other people be good.

Nobody objects to a man's being as righteous as he would like to be; they object when that man tries to make others righteous.

There is one thing dearer to the human soul than doing right; it is doing as it pleases.

Regulating people and telling them not to do things may gratify our own vanity and secure immediate obedience, but it is a poor way to improve people.

If you bring up little Willie according to all the rules of child breeding you, keep him always carefully removed from temptation and preserve him, as it were, in syrup until he is twenty-one and then turn him loose, he will probably fall before some goo-goo-eyed charmer before he has gone around the block.

He has everything except the one thing needful, and that, as a California instructor phrases it, is visceral stamina, if you get what I mean.

The surest way to learn and to grow in this world is to make your own mistakes and suffer the penalty of them. Only when we have erred and suffered for it do we learn thoroughly not to err.

If you tell people how to go straight, some spirit of independence in them will lead them to violate your instructions. But if you leave people alone they will learn for themselves.

This is what we mean when we say that experience is the best teacher. It is the best teacher, but sometimes of course it is very expensive.

One of the things man finds out as he grows older is that the wisdom and caution for which he has paid so great a price in suffering and otherwise cannot be handed on to his son. People have to learn things for themselves in the bitter school of experience.

The trouble with correcting people is that it is liable to destroy more than it builds up.

The constant habit of criticizing and fault finding is fatal to love. If, therefore, you value the affection of any one it is always best to treat him with appreciation not criticism.

The only sure road to righteous conduct is to grow a force within ourselves that shall make us righteous. A force superimposed upon us by someone else is only temporarily effective.

This is why democracy is better for a people than any autocracy. They stumble forward making their own mistakes. These are mistakes, perhaps, they would not have made if an autocrat ruled them, but they learn better from them than they learn from the errors committed by an autocrat.

Let people stub their own toes, burn their own fingers, and burrp their own noses. More is lost than is gained by too much regulation.

The Story of 1926

The results achieved by The Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada in 1926 as indicated by the figures given below will be very gratifying to policyholders and others interested in the Company's progress:

	1916	1921	1926
Assurances in force	$55,084,130	$128,968,720	$218,230,511
Assurances Issued	10,380,840	23,136,261	37,110,654
Total Assets	12,974,417	22,079,986	40,124,052
Premium & Interest Income	2,659,418	5,488,584	10,041,402

Payments to Policyholders	650,110	1,605,610	3,236,637

The millions of dollars of Reserves held by The Imperial Life are calculated on so strong a basis that interest earnings of only 3% are sufficient to maintain them. The difference between this 3% rate and the 6.21% actually earned gives an exceptionally wide margin for policyholders' profits and security.

SCENES OF GREAT BEAUTY TAKEN FOR FOX' "THE COUNTRY BEYOND"

James Oliver Curwood's Novel Has Splendid Settings in Canadian Jasper National Park Great Cast Includes Olive Borden in Stellar Role.

"The Country Beyond," Fox Films adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's widely-read novel, is announced as the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre, beginning tomorrow.

Olive Borden, noted Virginia beauty and Fox Film star, heads the specially selected cast which was directed by Irving Cummings with remarkable artistry.

The personnel includes J. Farrell MacDonald, who is pleasantly remembered as Casey in "The Iron Horse"; Evelyn Selbie, noted character actress who was the original "Broncho Billy girl" of the films; Lawford Davidson, star of the continental stage and screen; Fred Kohler, peerless villain of the motion pictures; Alfred Fisher, veteran actor of international stage and screen fame; Ralph Graves, popular leading man; and Gertrude Astor, well-known feminine "menace" of many film successes. The exteriors for "The Country Beyond" were made in Jasper National Park, Alberta, mostly on the shore of Lake Maligne and Mount Edith Cavelle. In order to shoot the scenes at the first named location it was necessary for the company to travel two full days on horseback over the hazardous trails of the Canadian Rockies. And to Fox Films goes the unique honor of having filmed the first motion picture scenes in that wonderfully picturesque region.

In fact, according to advance reports on the picture, it would seem that it is amply suited to qualify as a "scenic" of inspiring beauty. A. Fried, chief cinematographer, is said to have won new laurels for his already generous wreath of successful and positively brilliant photography, as evidenced in numerous Fox Films productions in the past.

AT THE REGENT

CORINNE CAPTIVATES IN "SYNCOPATING SUE."

First National Beauty Wins Unstinted Praise From Regent Audiences.

Corinne Griffith is annexing a lot of titles these days. "Liberty" recently acclaimed her the most beautiful woman in the world. Broadway critics have long classed her as one of the screen's best actresses and last night the huge audience at the Regent who saw her latest release, "Syncopating Sue," voted her one of the daintiest comediennes on the silver sheet.

Corinne Griffith, in the role of a song-plugger who wants to move from her piano in Tin Pan Alley to the footlights of Broadway, gives one of the most deft and entertaining performances of her screen career. We had always thought of the gorgeous Griffith as at her best in "Classified." Last night she went herself one better.

Tom Moore, handsome as ever and even more charming and natural in the part of an ambitious young trap-drummer in one of the "Roaring Forties" cabarets greatly enhanced the capable supporting cast.

The whole town will be talking about "Syncopating Sue." You'd better go see her so you can join in the chorus of praise.

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce; but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman. Stivner, lumber King with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman! Abner maliciously causes Ranny a nasty fall, then contigues to flirt with Joan as the game progresses. This so unnerves Ranny that he virtually loses the game for the Americans. Vengeful, he drives the ball over the sidelines at Abner's head.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

To all intents and purposes it looked liked an accident—a carom shot misjudged.

Taken unawares, Joan and her group never screamed, never budged, but stood rooted to the turf in sheer fright.

Some instinct warned Abner that he was the particular object of the ball's aim, and he remained transfixed, like the fascinated prey of a cobra, his eyes wide with a strange dread as they watched the spheroid oncoming toward his head.

But in that fleeting split second, when the fate of an interloper's skull trembled in the balance and horrified watchers caught and held their breaths with audible gasps, something went wrong.

Some lack of power in the hit. Some petty miscalculation that reduced its parabola of flight and caused the ball to descend, flick the edge of the playing field border plant, deflect at an unexpected angle, ricochet on the grass, bounce o ff the fender of a car and thud plumb into the ample stomach of Livingstone Stivner, Esquire!

CHAPTER V.

Fat men, it is parabled, do not stand high in the general love of the world. Perhaps it is true that nobody loves them. But they have compensations. They must surely rank well in the especial esteem of Divine Providence, for the very inelegance and over-emphasis of outline which renders unclassic and unlovely the contour of their physical profile also serves to act as a buffer and safety cushion against the beating vicissitudes of the accidents of life.

It was fortunate for Stivner that the willow root polo ball plopped into the yielding depths of his abdomen.

Moreover, it was fortunate for Ranny Forbes' liberty that the varying course of its uncertain and coy flight had operated to materially reduce the momentum of the ball.

Due to this conspiracy of good fortune, Stivner actually suffered nothing more serious than the loss of a little dignity, a lot of breath and one suspender button.

The surprised "Oof!" that erupted from Stivner's lips in that moment mingled most inharmoniously with the dulcet tinkling of the timer's bell, which signified that the game was over.

Over, indeed, for the crowd and seven of the players. But for Ranny Forbes its consequences were just beginning.

He had watched, while his heart dissolved and ran down into his boot heels, the vagaries of the ball's flight and the wholly unintended and inappriate expanse of billionaire belt line that it had finally selected for a landing field.

With the celerity of a greased rubber man he yanked the thundering Judy to a halt, slid off her back and rushed to Stivner's aid, his first blurts of apology overlapping the last spurts of Stivner's distorted breathing.

Ranny had no need of unusually sagacious perception to read in Stivner's eupurpled face that the magnate's estimation of the polo player and would-be lumber capitalist had suddenly become very low. Furthermore, Ranny had no need for double vision magnifying glasses to read in that man's indignant eyes the receding to a far, far horizon of a coveted business and an influential friendship.

After all, it was too much to expect a demonstration of affection and love from the most dignified and the wealthiest lumber king in the world when one had presumed upon the first occasion of their meeting to mistake his waist line for a goal line.

Meanwhile the politely curious portion of the adjacent crowd, which had quickly foreclosed to investigate the result of Ranny's devastating wild shot, dispersed again as quickly, after enjoying a laugh. A quiet, polite, well bred laugh, of course, but a laugh nevertheless, which, as such, improved neither the peace of mind of Ranny Forbes nor the dignity of Livingstone Stivner nor the chagrin and embarrassment of Joan Forbes nor the concern of Clay Varick for his chum's pickle. A laugh, however, which did add a good deal to the secret mental relish and spiritual exaltation of Abner Gratman.

The little group was isolated in its interest by now, while the crowd in general turned to the field and with hand clapping and cheers acclaimed the glittering victory of the saffron jerseyed Argentines, who were riding off to the paddock. It was a well merited tribute, one that would have been paid anyway to their brilliant pluck, if not to their victory, had not Ranny Forbes' greatest play gone so amazingly to pieces.

Ranny's team mates, cantering leisurely and rather glumly after the victors, did not pass off without receiving a generous and admiring share of encouragement too.

Ranny himself was finding precious little encouragement in anything, either in the austere aggravation reflected upon Joan's queenly face or in the annoyance plainly visible in Stivner's manner.

Stivner had no cause to get into a better humor, for no sooner had he recovered his breath than he had to part with a check for $50,000.

Of course Stivner was enough of a thoroughbred to hide his emotions. But there are certain things that, unlike real estate, do not have to be seen to be appreciated. Such a thing was the magnate's inner conviction that it is extremely distasteful to have to lose a sporting proposition, not because of misplaced judgment in laying the wager, but because of an inexcusable bungle and blunder by the party upon whom the wager had been placed.

Abner, grinning like an ape in his mealy way as he pocketed the check, condoled Stivner, instinctively rubbing his words into the rankling spot:

"Tough one to lose, Livingstone. I surely never expected that Fate was going to be so kind as to present me with a win after Forbes, here, appeared to have the game on ice."

Ranny fidgeted in torment.

Darn the fellow! Why couldn't he take the check and keep his mouth shut, as any decent man would? No, he had to gloat! Look here, he was actually addressing Ranny now in a most supercilious and irritating manner:

"What in creation happened to your last try for goal, Ranny? It was the most amazing reversal I ever saw on a polo field—"

Ranny squirmed and, ignoring Abner, turned to Stivner:

"Stivner, if you'd like to wait a bit until I run into the clubhouse for a shower and a change I'd be awfully glad if you'd drive back to town with Mrs. Forbes and Varick and myself."

"Thanks," said Stivner rather curtly, "but I have other plans."

A few other formal commonplaces and then the magnate departed, the huffy swing of his shoulders belying the forced pleasantness of his leave-taking.

Once again Ranny squirmed, this time under the lashing displeasure in Joan's eyes. If anything was needed to complete his misery it was just that look.

"Won't you come down, dear, and sit on the clubhouse veranda while you're waiting for me?" he fended humbly.

"Thanks I'll stay here," she said in a non-committal, baffling tone.

Abner could not repress a triumphant grin at that. Ranny, who could not fail to note the grin, flinched—and walked quickly away with Clay. Otherwise he would have done to Abner's face with his fist what he had failed to do with the polo ball.

Later, when Ranny and Clay emerged from the clubhouse they found the sedan empty. Joan was gone. And, with a sudden sense of shock, Ranny noted that so was Abner Gratman and his sport roadster!

WINTER GOLF SPOILED GAME

Collett Attributes Failure to Win Championship to Too Much Golf.

TOO STRENUOUS

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Glenna Collett, America's most famous woman golfer, attributes her failure to win the 1926 championship to too much golf.

"I have decided that continuous golf over a period of 12 months is entirely too much for the woman player. I learned too late that I had gone stale when the big events came along.

"In order to be at my best next summer I have decided to abandon my winter trip to Florida, which for many years has been an annual custom.

"I intend to make my home in New York during the remainder of the winter, with the exception of playing in the Nassau tournamet, which I had entered prior to my decision not to play winter golf."

Promoters in Florida and at Pinehurst, N.C., have so far been unable to make Miss Collett reconsider her decision.

JACOBITE RECITAL.

(By Jeanette)

An interested audience in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening heard Madame Shirley Jackson of Hamilton, and her daughter, Miss Betty Shirley Jackson, with their accompanist, Mrs. Pottier, in an open evening, held under the auspices of the Women's Music Club, which took the form of a Jacobite Recital, when Scotch folk songs of the days of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" were sung, in a programme of seldom-heard numbers of the Scotch type. A surprising attribute of the recital was its astonishing briefness, the whole performance extending only about one hour and a quarter in time. The stage setting was especially attractive, black curtain concealing the walls at the rear, and the stage itself being arranged with Jacobean furniture, and a simulated grate fire, and being illuminated only by numbers of candles placed in tall brass candlesticks, to give the effect of the interiors of Jacobite days.

Madame Jackson, who has a truly delightful speaking voice gave in entertaining style the story of the days of "Bonnie Prince Charlie,' illustrating the review with songs of olden-time Scotch flavor, composed at the time to commemorate the early victories and later defeats of the "Young Chevalier," who added such a romantic page to the annals of Scottish history. Over her shoulder, adding a brilliant touch to her dark gown, Madame Jackson wore a long carf of the bright red Fife tartan.

The possessor of a charming voice of mezzo-soprano calibra, used with pleasing finesse and with a rich, luscious quality to the lovely lower register, Madame Jackson sang with effective ease some of the favorites Jacobite days, in "When the King Comes O'er the Water," "The Wee German Laddie," "Awa, Whigs, Awa," and "Flora Macdonald's Lament," the latter song, with its dramatic fervor, bringing out all the clear, vibrant vigor of the legato measures.

In this group, Miss Betty Shirley Jackson, who has a youthful, interesting voice of mezzo-contralto timbre, sang "Charley is My Darling," and later, in the more modern Jacobite songs, gave "Sound the Pibroch" in charming voice. Madame Jackson sang "The Piper of Dundee" and "Cam Ye by Atholl," the latter demonstrating again the attractive fullness of the low, rich tones. Together, as a final number, Madame Jackson and her daughter, sang "Auld Lang Syne."

The President of the Women's Music Club, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, in introducing the singers of the evening, expressed her appreciation of the kindness of those who had loaned accessories for the stage setting. Comstock Brothers furnishing the Jacobean furniture and the Cressman Company the draperies at the rear of the stage.

VET TWIRLER WILL HELP NEW MANAGER

Allan Sothorn to Help Lead Cardinals Next Season.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 12.—Bob O'Farrell, recently appointed manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, has named Allan Sothoron his first lieutenant as a member of the board of strategy. Sothoron was a member of last year's pitching staff.

When Rogers Hornsby, who was manager and second sacker of the Cardinals, won a pennant and world series for St. Louis, was traded to New York, his two assistants, Bill Killifer and Otto Williams, also got the gate.

Last season it was Sothoron who pitched the Cardinals into the lead by working a three-hit game against Pittsburgh, which he won by the score of 2-1. It was the first game he had started in four months.

Believing that he was about through as a big league pitcher, Sothoron applied to O'Farrell for the coaching job and received the new manager's O.K.

The newspapers are printing pictures of Jack Dempsey punching the bag, jumping the rope and doing other odd jobs of light training. . . . These pictures are very nauseating to the fight experts—including the writer of these lines.

THOMAS DIAMOND TO BE TRIED, ETC.

about the speed?
I don't think I did.
How far was that speed kept up?
All the way, except on the detour.
You and your wife and Mr. and Mrs. Diamond were friends?
Yes.
Did you pay Diamond anything?
I paid $4 to Diamond that morning before we left Campbellford.
Did any cars pass you on the way?
No cars passed to my knowledge.
Cross-examination by Mr. Payne:
You are the plaintiff in a civil action against the accused, claiming $25,000 damages?
Yes.
You know him well?
Yes.
Your wife was a relative of his?
Not to my knowledge.
Was he a fast or slow driver?
Fairly fast.
What do you mean by fairly fast?
Above the ordinary.
How long have you known this?
Not very long.
How long?
I couldn't say.
Knowing that he was a fast driver you came to Peterboro with him?
Yes.
Did you think you were taking a risk or didn't you?
I did not give it a thought.
Travelling from Campbellford to Peterborough you were enjoying the ride?
Yes.
You were conversing with the ladies in the back seat?
Yes at times.
Just before the accident did you make a remark to Mary McGregor?
No.
At the inquest did you give correct evidence?
Yes; to the best of my knowledge.
Didn't you have any conversation with Diamond about the speed?
No.
Why didn't you complain?
I consider a driver knows his own car.
13huvse m½Setaoincse mth cse mht
Did you consider it dangerous to travel at a high rate of speed?
More or less.
Do you remember the bend in the road?
I don't remember.
What were you actually doing when the car reached the top of the hill?
I don't remember.
What is the last distinct recollection you have?
The car leaving the road.
Were you in Peterborough with Diamond on June 7?
Yes.
At whose request?
My own. I wanted to pay him but he wouldn't take it.
How many times have you been in Diamond's car?
I don't know.
Several?
Yes.
You have no knowledge of the speed of the car just before the accident?
No—just that it was going very fast.
Re-examination by Mr. Hatton:
You had $4 that you received?
Yes, but not now.
How did you get it?
Mr. Diamond's daughter came into my room in the hospital and closed the doors and said, "Here's the $4."
Did you give Diamond the $4 to bring you to Peterborough?
Yes.
Why?
While in Peterborough on June 7 we saw posters advertising the circus and decided that we would come up. I told Diamond if he would furnish the car I would pay expenses.

Harry Redmond.

Harry Redmond stated that he lived about one mile north of the scene of the accident. On that day he was coming from Peterborough. He noticed the car come over the hill and saw it strike the tree. At that time the car was about 125 feet away from him. He rushed over to the car and got Mr. Diamond, Mrs. Diamond and a little girl out of the car. Another man came along, and between them they got Stillman [illegible] ou see the car?
Yes.
[illegible]t condition was it in?
It was badly broken up.
How far was the tree from the road?
About 33 feet from the centre.
Do you know how far the car travelled along the wire fence before striking the tree?
It would be 30 feet anyway.
Can you describe the road bed?
It was a steep downgrade with a turn at the bottom of the hill.
I mean what kind of road it was?
It was an ordinary gravel road with the gravel worked up just at the corner.
What time did the accident happen?
Shortly after 1 o'clock.
How long?
It would be about 15 minutes after that. When I was at Downer's Corners about two miles away I heard the whistle blow.
In your opinion what was the speed of the car?
I couldn't say, but he was coming fast.
Have you seen Diamond since?
Yes. Twice.
When?
On the day of the inquest and then he called at my home.
What was said?
He said he had come to pay a social call.
Was anything said about the accident?
There was very little said.
Did you pull off the road?
Yes.
What was your reason?
When I see a car coming fast I always get off the road.
What was said at your house about the accident?
Very little.
Cross-examination by Mr. Payne.
When Diamond was at your house there was nothing said about evidence or anything like that?
No.
You said you got off the road?
I always do. I've been struck once or twice and take no chances.
You are over cautious?
Well, I give them a pretty wide berth.
This whistle that you heard—Do you recollect hearing another one?
I don't recollect hearing another.
You were driving a horse and buggy?
No. I was driving a democrat with a load of lumber.
You wouldn't care to hazard an opinion as to the speed of the car?
I never drove a car, but the ordinary speed of a car on a country road is usually from 20 to 25 miles and he was doing better than that.
Would you say it was between 20 and 25 miles?
If I said anything I would say it was faster than that.

John C. Birmingham.

John C. Birmingham stated that he was a resident of Campbellford. On the day of the accident Diamond passed him on the road just before they reached Mather's Corners.
How far is that from the scene of the accident?
About 6 miles.
You later came on the scene?
Yes.
Was he going much faster than you?
He was, but I don't know how much as I have no speedometer on my car.
What time did you leave Campbellford?
About 11.30 a.m.
You came straight through?
Yes. We had a puncture which delayed us about 10 minutes.
What time did you reach the spot where the accident occurred?
Around 1 o'clock.
Have you seen Diamond since the accident?
Yes.
Where?
In my store.
Did you discuss the accident?
He just asked me if I had any more evidence.

Dr. Andrew Haig.

Dr. Haig stated that he was a resident of Campbellford.
You have treated Diamond prior to and subsequently to this accident?
I have.
You have treated him for spells and weaknesses?
At this juncture Mr. Payne rose and cried, "I object. This charge is criminal negligence. What bearing has spells in this matter?"
His Worship: Mr. Hatton, I think the question is very leading.
Mr. Hatton: I was trying not to lead, Your Worship.
Mr. Hatton then put the question, "Did you treat him for anything that would affect his properly driving a car?"
I have not.
Neither before nor after the accident?
No.

Wilfred J. Armour.

Wilfred J. Armour stated that he lived in Percy Township, about four miles from Campbellford. On the day of the accident he saw Diamond pass his place about noon.
Could you estimate the speed of the car?
It was going pretty fast.

Gerald Labrash.

Gerald Labrash stated that he worked in Campbellford.
On the day of the accident did you drive a car over the detour at Cuff's Corners?
Yes.
What was the condition of the detour?
It was rough, hilly and the ruts were bad.
How long was it?
About 4 miles.
Cross-examination by Mr. Payne.
Who told you the length of the detour?
Nobody.
You were just guessing?
Yes.

Elsee Stillman.

Elsee Stillman stated that he was a first cousin of Mr. Stillman. He was a resident of Seymour Township, and on the day of the accident was driving from his home to Peterborough.
Did you see Diamond's car?
No.
Have you had any talks with Diamond about the accident?
Yes. That evening.
Where?
In the hospital.
What did he say?
He said, "We were just going along when the car left the road. I just lost my head—don't know whether I stepped on the brake or the gas."
Did you see the car?
Not on the day of the accident.

Thomas Heffernan.

Thomas Heffernan stated that on June 25 he was travelling on the Keene road on his way to Peterborough.
Did you see Diamond's car?
Yes. It passed me three or four miles back of the scene of the accident.
How fast was he going?
I wouldn't think he was going over 40.
Cross-examination by Mr. Payne.
You say the car wasn't going over 40. Are you prepared to say how much under.
No.

Maynard Coward.

Maynard Coward stated that he was a farmer. On June 25 he was coming into Peterborough to see the circus.
Did you see Diamond?
Yes.
Where?
He passed me on the road about 3 or 4 miles back of where the accident happened.
What speed was he going?
About 35 miles an hour.

Albert Lowes.

Albert Lowes stated that he was coming to Peterborough to see the circus on June 25.
Did you see Diamond?
Yes.
Did you know him?
No.
Where did you see him?
He passed me 3 miles south of where the accident occurred.
What speed was he going?
At a pretty good gait.
How fast?
I have no idea, but it was 35 or 40, and it may have been quite a lot more.
Where this accident happened there is a dangerous curve?
For anybody going fast.

E. Dolman.

E. Dolman stated that he was a resident of Campbellford. He saw Diamond after the accident.
Where?
In hospital.
When?
At various times.
Was there any talk?
Naturally.
About the accident?
He bewailed the accident and seemed worked up and sorry that it happened. He said he must have lost his head and didn't know whether he had put his foot on the brake or the accelerator.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker.

Provincial Constable Norman F. Maker stated that about four minutes after 1 o'clock on June 25 he received a telephone message informing him about an accident on the Keene Road. He proceeded to the spot and saw a car in the ditch. It had run against a tree. On one side of the car he saw a lady lying on the ground with her face in the grass. She appeared to be dead, although blood was flowing from the nose. He felt her pulse and judged that she was dead. On the east side of the car he found Stillman lying on the bank. The road by this time was jammed with traffic, so he proceeded to clear it up. "I came back and saw Diamond walking around and holding his chest," continued Constable Maker. "He told me he was the driver of the car and that he did not know whether he had stepped on the brake or the accelerator." He also said that he had been travelling about 30 miles an hour all the way. He measured from where the car had gone into the ditch to where it struck the tree and found that the distance was 30 yards. The force of the collision tore a fence post from the ground, after which the car struck the tree. The fence post measured eight feet six inches, and was twenty-two inches in circumference; three feet of the post being buried in the ground. "I was informed that Mr. Stillman's watch and chain had been taken, probably for safety purposes, so I recovered it, the time then being 1.35 p.m."
This concluded the case for the Crown.
No evidence was presented on behalf of Mr. Diamond.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

CANADA'S FIRST SHIPMENT OF WHEAT

Q—When was Canada's first shipment of wheat?

A—Canada's first shipment of wheat from the West was fifty years ago when 857 bushels were shipped from Winnipeg to Toronto, first by Red River boat to Duluth and then by rail to Toronto. Today Canada is the greatest wheat exporting country in the world. The anniversary of this initial shipment from the West was recently celebrated in Winnipeg.

LITERARY SOCIETY AT CAMPBELLFORD

Large Crowd Present at Open Debate Held on Friday.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 12. — The Literary Society of the High School gave an open literary meeting in the Assembly Hall on Friday evening. A large audience was present and an excellent programme was given. The High School orchestra, Gerald Bailey, Ted Blute and Staunton Archer, entertained the audience with several selections before the programme was given. Stuart Carr, as President of the Literary Society, in a few well chosen remarks extended a hearty welcome to all present and gave a few of the benefits derived from these meetings, which are held every two weeks in the school. He also explained that the proceeds of the evening would go towards the High School Hockey Club. The following programme was then given:

Opening chorus—Members of the school.
Minutes of the previous meeting—Given by Jack McAvoy.
Piano solo—Roxie Wilson.
Vocal solo—Irene Dunk, accompanied by Irene Stephens.
Current events—Donald Kidd.
Violin solo—Ted Blute, accompanist Monica Blute (piano).
Piano solo—Mary Fowlds.
Recitation—"Raiding the Treasury," by Rita Palliser.

An interesting feature of the programme was a debate, "Resolved, that eight Scotchmen have done more for the welfare of humanity than eight men from England and Wales," the affirmative side being taken by Rosina Clarke and Percy Honey and the negative side by Margery Ackerman and Cecil Stephens.

Miss Clarke, as leader of the affirmative side, spoke of David Livingstone and his work in Africa, his efforts, which were finally successful, to abolish the slave trade and through his great work there established trade with Africa, which is rcih in diamonds, mineral, etc.; William Patterson, another great Scotchmen, who was the first to establish a banking system, also urged the union of England, Ireland and Scotland and upheld free trade; James Watt, who introduced to the world the steam engine in 1785, thus making transportation easier and in this way opening up new countries, and Alexander Graham Bell, noted scientist, who introduced the telephone, which is beneficial to mankind.

The leader of the negative side, Cecil Stephens, refutes his opponent's statements of the invention of Watt and Bell and claimed they both worked and were assisted by Englishmen. In upholding his side, Cecil took as examples William Wilberforce, through whom, he claimed, slave trade was abolished, schools were erected for the poorer classes of the country, better wages given to curates and missionary work started in India; Doctor Harvey, a great doctor, who first traced the circulation of the blood, thus giving to the world the ways and means of combatting disease; Michael Farraday, who through his electrical inventions made possible the motor cars of today and many other electrical devices, and he also discovered ether as an anaesthetic; George Stevenson, who originated the steam engine, thus helping trade and commerce and making railroads possible.

The second speaker on the affirmative side, Percy Honey, also refuted some of his opponent's statements. He spoke of the work of Doctor John Hunter, who did much in the work of medicines to help Canadians; George Brown and John A. MacDonald, who early came to Canada, and through whose efforts a Coalition Government in 1864 was formed and the B. N. A. Act, July 1, 1867, brought forth the union with Great Britain. MacDonald brought British Columbia into the union by building a transcontinental railroad, and Brown founded The Toronto Globe and introduced representation by population. Donald Alexander Smith also came to Canada, and it was he who assisted MacDonald in the building of the railroad. Smith was the first man to successfully grow potatoes in the Western Provinces, gave liberally to McGill University and aided in the emigration from Great Britain.

The second speaker on the negative side, Margery Ackerman, refuted her opponent's claims as to the work of Watt, Patterson and Stevenson. She told of the work of Doctor Jenner, who was responsible for the discovery of vaccine, thus leading to inoculation and preventing disease. The Seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, who passed laws in Parliament to assist the poorer classes. He built better homes, industrial schools, and through his efforts acts were passed abolishing child labor, and many other nations followed this good example. William Booth of the Salvation Army, who was the means of bringing Christianity to all parts of the world, was a friend to the common man, helping the poor, the exiled prisoners, and of the wonderful work the Army did throughout the war. Sir Isaac Newton, the wonderful scientist and mathematician, who discovered the law of gravitation, and also the telescope.

Miss Clarke then replied for a few minutes, claiming science did more for the rich than the poor, and although Stevenson may have originated the steam engine, he still needed steam to run it.

While awaiting the judge's decision, the rest of the programme was given:

Violin solo—Franklin Linton, accompanist Isabel Bygott (piano).
Piano solo—Irving Clemens.
Recitation—Jean Nelson.
Instrumental duet—Dorothy Henson and Nellie Haig.
School song—By the school.
Recitation—Jean Nelson.

Music by the orchestra.

The critic for the evening, Major Bygott, paid a glowing tribute to Stuart Carr, and thought the school should be proud to have a representative in the Boys' Parliament. He congratulated all the musicians of the evening, urging the boys to sing heartier in the choruses and not leave it all to the girls. Major Bygott said he was greatly interested in the debate, and advised the boys to get to the front of the platform, as the girls, and "hammer their ideas home."

Doctor Watson, on behalf of the judges, then gave the decision to the affirmative side. He congratulated the debaters on the excellent way in which they gave their debate, and said it was very hard to choose between the two sides.

Cecil Stephens spoke a few words of thanks to the critic and the judges, and congratulated his opponents on their victory. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

This meeting was enjoyed by all present, and the High School Literary Society should continue the good work and make it a rule to give an open literary meeting often. In this way the public have an idea of the way the pupils advance in their work, and it is also an aid to the pupils in public life.

Miscellaneous Shower.

About one hundred friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson, of Seymour West, who were recently married, met at their home on Friday evening and tendered them a miscellaneous shower. The evening was spent in cards and dancing, Harry Ayrhart and Ray Archer providing the music for the evening. Lunch was served during the evening.

Smith, B.S.A., of Brighton, Agricultural Representative of Northumberland and Durham Counties, was in Warkworth on Thursday and again on Monday, and completed the arrangements for the short course in agriculture, which is to be held in the Council Chamber from January 18 to February 11. Several registrations have been handed in and it is expected that there will be thirty or more students in the regular class and that dozens of other persons will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending on special days. This is the second time that such a class has been held in Warkworth and considerable interest is being manifested in the work, which has become an established thing in many parts of the country. C. Hiram Curtis, George Poole and the Representative interviewed the Council concerning the securing of a suitable place to be heated and lighted by the township. Mr. Smith and O. L. Sager, of St. George, will be the two permanent lecturers and will be present throughout the four weeks of the school.

Other speakers for special days are: H. W. Pearson, seed branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Belleville, who will speak on January 27; Dr. John Spencer, of Bowmanville, on vetinary science, on January 28; co-operation and markets, by F. C. Hart, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on February 2; bees, T. H. Shield, Peterboro, on February 3; and plant diseases, by John Tucker, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, February 10. January 31 and February 1 will be given to a special course in sheep marketing, for which the speakers and demonstrators will be A. E. McLaurin, sheep and swine division, Ottawa; Harry Hilliard, meat demonstrator, Ottawa, and J. D. Thompson, wool grader, Ottawa. On January 24 and 25 there will be a special course on swine marketing, which will be in charge of Eric D. McGreer, B.S.A., sheep and swine promoter, Kingston; Gavin Barbour, hog grader, Brantford, and W. G. Dunsmore, animal husbandry division, Ottawa. These special four-day courses are being put on by the Dominion Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The course as outlined includes:

Co-operation and markets — Clubs, buying, selling and advertising.

The class that was anticipated for young women has been deferred until the summer vacation on account of a number who would desire to take the course now being in attendance at the Continuation School.

It is estimated that a sufferer from colds loses three days' time from work in a year.

At work, in the "movie," or at any entertainment, if your neighbor has a cold and sneezes or coughs, the air is full of germs and if you are not in good condition, you may become ill. The only protection you can have is to build resistance against disease forces. Take that splendid herbal tonic,

A NIGHT filled with a maddening weariness, distressful and restless—a fagged-out morning that brings no appetite—a nervous irritability that is not conducive to work, and so throughout the day the unhappy reactions from insomnia follow, robbing us of energy, health and achievement.

Nature's Way

Sleep is part of Nature's plan to nightly restore body and mind. It is essential to health, happiness and success. But it must be restful sleep. What Ovaltine Is Ovaltine contains, in concentrated form, and in correct proportions, all the elements for restoring, building up and maintaining brain, nerves and body. It is prepared from Nature's tonic foods—rich, creamy milk, fresh eggs, ripe barley malt, flavoured with cocoa.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Bob Hathaway's stenographer lowered her voice and betrayed herself by glancing apprehensively toward the door marked "Mr. Robert Hathaway, Private." "No, he isn't in. Would you like to leave a message?"

"I'll wait—" Faith began, but was remaining seated, her gloved hands folded primly in her lap, her brown eyes friendly and guileless.

"Oh, I don't think he'll be back until the middle of the afternoon," the girl said hurriedly, but still in a muted voice. "He's got a luncheon appointment with—with his uncle, Mr. Cluny, and then he's going out to Enfield, I believe."

"I'll wait—" Faith began, but was interrupted by the opening of the door into Bob's private office. "Hello Bob!" she rose, smiling serenely for the benefit of the scarlet-faced stenographer, who had backed up to her desk, and was imploring Faith, with agonized eyes, not to tell on her.

"I thought I heard your voice, Faith!" Bob's blue eyes sparkled with joyous welcome. "How awfully kind of you to stop by. I've wanted you to see my dump. But let's go to lunch now. It's nearly twelve, and I'm always hungry."

Faith glanced at the frightened stenographer and decided that it would be better to confront Bob with the whole wretched story where she could not be overheard by the obviously guilty girl, who would certainly not scruple to listen at the keyhole.

"All right, Bob," Faith nodded. "A quiet place, where we can talk."

"If anyone calls, I'll be back in about an hour, Miss Gonzales," he threw over his shoulder at the girl who had finally seated herself at her desk, with her profile turned toward Faith and Bob.

"Rather an unusual name of this girls'—Gonzales, isn't it?" Faith asked as they waited for an elevator.

"Yes, rather," Bob answered, his eyes still beaming upon her with fondness and joy. "Father is a Mexican, believe, and her mother an American. She's a cracker jack stenographer, which is all I'm interested in. How have you been, anyway? Lord, it's good to see you, dear."

"Where did you get Miss Gonzales?" Faith persisted, so that he looked at her curiously.

"She used to work for Uncle Ralph and Mr. Neff," Bob answered, surprised. "He let her go for some slight offense, and I felt sorry for the girl and gave her a chance. But why all the hectic interest in my stenographer? She's a good one, I admit, but let's talk about you. You look stunning in those clothes. New, aren't they? I've never seen you in black before. Makes you look like a woman of the world, but I like it."

The stopping of the elevator spared Faith the necessity of answering other than her warm blush of pleasure. But she was steeling her heart against his gay happiness in having her with him.

"Let's eat at the Athletic Club—just around the corner. We can find a quiet corner there. It's early and there won't be a crowd."

In spite of her mixed feelings of suspicion and hurt at his long neglect of her, it gave her a warm, glowing sense of pleasure to see with what genial comraderie he was greeted by lounging members of the Athletic Club as he escorted her through the reception rooms and library on their way to the dining room. Every man's eye brightened as he passed, and she was not conceited enough to believe that her own distinguished smartness, in her new black coat and hat, had anything to do with their eagerness to greet Bob Hathaway. She thought, tenderly, that these business men looked at him as if they loved him.

He led her to a dim corner of the big, somber dining room, rich with dark panelling, heavy, upholstered, high-backed dining chairs, and with enormous oil paintings carefully spaced between the thickwk,ine-red silk draperies of the broad, deep windows. She had never before been in such an atmosphere and she relaxed a little, breathing a deep sigh of content as Bob studied the menu.

After he had ordered for both of them, he looked at her with smiling, direct inquiry. "Well, spill it, Faith, dear. There's something on your mind. Cherry in trouble again, I suppose? I'd like to flatter myself that you simply wanted to see me, but I know my Faith too well for that." He reached across the table and touched her cold fingers, toying with the long-stemmed water goblet. There was tenderness in that fleeting touch, and Faith felt the blood rush to her cheeks.

"I—I have something to tell you," she faltered, reaching into her lap for her handbag. "But first, I want to show you something."

He watched her with suddenly serious but singularly clear and guiltless blue eyes as she drew from the bag the four anonymous letters which Cherry had received—letters which Faith had found under Cherry's matress and had taken without her sister's knowledge—the envelope of the business letter which had come to her father on the same day as the fourth of the anonymous letters, and finally, the sheet of paper, the envelope and the piece of used carbon paper which she had filched from the desk of the sloe-eyed Miss Miss Gonzales.

"Do you know anything about these letters, Bob?" she asked quietly but her voice was a littleu nsteady. She had drawn the blackmailing letters from their envelopes and now laid them, opened, in a little stack, upon his plate.

"Why—what in the world?" he asked blankly. "Of course I don't—never saw them before—why, good God, Faith, this is blackmail!"

Faith watched him intently as he read hastily through the sheaf of four letters, muttering exclamations of incredulity, anger and astonishment as he did so. Before he had finished—indeed, from the first minute of her inquisition of him, she was utterly convinced that he was as innocent of blackmail or of intent to harm Cherry as she was.

"What in the world made you think I knew anything about this dastardly attack on the poor kid?" he demanded as he laid the letters to one side of his plate and rubbed his fingers vigorously with his napkin, as if to remove pollution. There was so much disgust and hurt surprise in his voice and eyes that Faith could have wept over him. But her heart was singing with joy. It hadn't been Bob! She had really known all the time that he couldn't have done such a thing, but now—now—oh, the dear! But she braced herself to explain.

"They were written in your office, Bob, by your stenographer," she told him very quietly.

"Good Lord! Are you crazy, Faith? Lola Gonzales! You don't know what you're saying!"

Before she could reply, the waiter interrupted by appearing with the melon.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This shows the simple way in which many of the smart dressmakers are using the flower printed taffeta. The edges are finished with a cord of the silk and there is an enormous bow of the silk at the left side.

• • •

Some women have a deep antipathy for printed fabrics, at least when it comes to wearing them. They explain that printed materials make them look stouter, or that they detract from the graceful bodily contour, or that they make them look or feel conspicuous.

Two or three of the leading dressmakers share this prejudice against prints. They feel that the plain-toned fabric shows their skill in designing to better advantage. They do not like to share their laurels with the fabric designers. And then the frock made of printed material can so easily be copied by any manufacturer of ready-made clothes. Perhaps some of this prejudice is well grounded—still there is much for most women to gain by the possession of an occasional frock of printed material.

Many of the printed materials are amusing—and the element of amusement in dress should not be overlooked. There are silks showing quaint pictorial designs that are pleasing to behold. If the printed fabric detracts from the perfect symmetry of the figure, so too it detracts from sundry imperfections of contour. And, wisely chosen, the printed material may detract from a too substantial form.

Sometimes a printed fabric actually makes greater simplicity possible, for printed materials are at their best when used with little or no trimming. The sketch shows the way in which one dressmaker has been making taffeta in pompadour print for little evening frocks. The silk may be had in background of soft green, mauve, lemon or pink with delicately colored floral designs.

Printed crepe de chine may be used to excellent advantage in making negligee pajamas. Very large and vivid designs are frequently used. Vividly colored printed silks are used to make some of the new bathing suits and beach wraps. Dainty designs in are printed on the georgette or crepe from which some interesting new lingerie has been made. As the season advances there will be many dinner frocks of printed materials which will come as a pleasant contrast to the metallic and beaded gowns that have been worn so extensively for evening.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

Lizard skin is appropriate for country or sport wear or for town wear. Well-dressed women often select lizard skin shoes of substantial build to go with tweed suit or tweed coat. Although usually regarded as a "fancy" leather, lizard is really durable—real lizard—and the imitation sort also wears well for it is made of calf. Care should be taken in matching the stockings with the exact tone of the lizard skin of the shoes.

THE UNWELCOME MOUSE

Once housewives seemed to take mice almost for granted. There was no special disgrace attached to having a few of them. Nursery rhymes and stories are full of references to mice and children liked these stories because they were familiar with the "wee timerous beast," who came out after dark to nibble the crumbs. But the thoroughly up-to-date child usually learns about him largely from the pictures in the story books.

If, perchance, you have been visited by any of these unwelcome rodents, you should have got rid of them earlier in the season. Experts on such matters tell us that a single pair of mice may, within a year, have six litters of mice, each litter containing six or seven little mice. That means thirty-six or forty-two mice who, of course, soon begin producing their own progeny. So the time to get rid of them is before they start raising their young.

Mouse traps are still considered a very good means of catching mice. The traps, we are told, should be set against the wall because mice prefer not to run about in open spaces.

It is a mistake to think that cheese is the best bait. Some mice seem to prefer plain bread and good results have even been obtained by placing a little raw oatmeal within the trap. Put a few crumbs about the trap to entice the mice. Some old mice seem to be trap-wise and smell the traces of human hands about the traps. Experts say that this scent may be covered up by a drop of aniseed dropped on the trap after it has been baited.

There are some excellent "rat poisons" that may also be used to exterminate mice. But great care should be exercised in using these if there are children or pets in the household.

A sweeping victory was registered by the Peterboro juniors last night over the Lindsay Midgets in the initial junior O.H.A. game of the season on Brock street rink when the locals won easily 6 goals to 2.

The blue and white had the better part of the play on the night's game and in fact only for lack of a little more combination the score would have been much larger.

The Lindsay team for the most part are new at the game as it is the first season four of them have played junior hockey and this lack of experience showed up frequently around the mouth of the net.

The Petes had too much speed and checking ability for the Lindsay crew. They played very smart hockey on the attack and their checking, for juniors, made it practically impossible for the Lindsay boys to get through the Petes defence in the first two periods. Both goalies turned in a good game with Mein appearing to be a little more sure of himself and this made the game a tough proposition for the visiting attack although to give them credit in the last period they should have been awarded with a goal for they carried a strong offensive attack right into the blue and white territory.

It was a nice exhibition of hockey all the way but the Petes carried off the most penalties with LeBarr and Calladine being the worst offenders. Ten penalties were handed out by Referee Norman Albert with seven of these going to the home team.

Lindsay was by no means outclassed. Lead by the sturdy Forbert brothers and Gerster, who all played a good individual game throughout, they uncorked several attacks which if they had had more luck they would have been rewarded with goals especially in the last period. They lacked combination however and were not as speedy skaters as blue and white. They also bunched around the puck too much and failed to play their positions.

The Petes lead 5 to 2 at the end of the first period and got the only marker in the third period. Neither teams ran in any goals in the second but several fine saves were made by both goalies.

Both teams showed a tendency to hold the puck too long and if they had shown a little more combination both the net guarders would have had a much more strenuous evening.

It would not be wise to pick out individual stars on last night's playing but Bernard Jones, who scored four of the local's goals, seemed to be always on deck to push the puck into the net when it came in front of the goalie. The three starting forwards White, Kenneally and Calladine teamed fairly well together in the first period and it was then they played their best hockey. Both Allin and LeBarr played a fine game together on defence and LeBarr was always dangerous with his rushes. He was tripped several times just as he got through the defence. On each play he failed to score and the offender was sent to the penalty box.

Forbert brothers and Gerster played well for Lindsay. They were dangerous on the attack, especially in the final period. Golden the Raybestos net guardian in the city league last year, although beaten six times, had a host of nice saves to his credit.

The Game

The game opened with a goal for Lindsay, scored by Ross Forbert in the first twenty-seven seconds of play. On the face off, the puck was shot into Lindsay territory and after a skirmish in front of the Lindsay goal Forbert secured the rubber and made a fine rush up the left boards and drilled a fast one into the left hand corner of the net. Seven minutes later the Petes broke into the scoring column when Lefty White drilled a fast one through the Lindsay defence. Floyd Forbert was then given a penalty and while he was off Jones came back in a little over a minute with the Petes' second goal of the evening. LeBarr was then given a penalty and while he was off the Lindsay boys carried out a strong offensive attack but they were badly outclated by the locals. After fourteen minutes of play LeBarr gave Jones a nice pass who pushed the rubber into the net on one that was hard to beat. Pat Calladine was then given a penalty and as he came onto the ice Reeves and Floyd Forbert exhibited a little combination and scored their second and final counter of the evening. Ted LeBarr came back with another counter and Jones came back with his third goal in ten seconds more of play.

The second period saw fast hockey with numerous chances on the part of both teams to score but both failed to have the punch around the mouth of the net and no goals were scored in this period although Lindsay had a fine opportunity when they were playing five men to the Petes three.

In the third period Lindsay had the best of the play as they seemed to be making a determined effort to score some goals but they were beaten several times by Mein after they had gone through the defence. Then when the period was half up LeBarr took the puck from the mouth of the Petes' goal and made a nice rush and a neat pass at the right moment to Jones enabling him to score his fourth and the final goal of the game.

As a result of last night's win the locals will take a four goal lead with them to Lindsay on Friday night when they go there to play the second game of the double schedule on the Lindsay ice. A week from Friday night the Lindsay crew will be down here for the final game of the schedule.

KITCHENER WINS FOURTH STRAIGHT

KITCHENER, Jan. 12—Kitchener-Waterloo senior O.H.A. team won its fourth straight game in group No. 1 by defeating Galt Terriers 4 to 1 at the Auditorium here last night before a crowd of 3,000 fans. Recalling the rather hectic opening in Galt, which the Green Shirts won 4 to 2, it was expected by some that there might be fireworks last night, but Referee Rodden kept the teams playing hockey all the time, with the result that there was an absence of rough stuff. Body-checking was conspicuous by its absence.

The winners played steady hockey and earned the verdict, having a margin in all three sessions, and had it not been for some loose playing in the final stanza the visitors would have been shut out. The Terriers earned their lone counter, but with a tightening of the defence the goal could have been avoided. The group leaders notched one goal in the first period, one in the second, and two in the third, with the visitors getting the final counter of the game.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER SIX.

Then followed exciting days and nights for me on the Bowery.

Jack Dempsey took me under his wing and got me interested in a big amateur tournament at Madden's saloon. He entered me at my request in the lightweight class.

I was so dumb I thought the lightweight class was the lightest in the tournament. I weighed only 118 pounds.

My first opponent was Mike Leary and there were several prominent characters connected with that opening fight. For one thing, the referee was Charley Mitchell, the English heavyweight. He was just after fighting and knocking down the great John L. Sullivan and he was quite a drawing card.

Then Mike Leary brought Charley Norton, the pretender to the lightweight crown, along as his second. Norton and Dempsey renewed their feud and Dempsey took off his swell clothes and got into my corner and Norton was across the ring. The two seconds were smiling at each other and Dempsey said things to him that would have made any man fight but Norton was wise enough not to get too nasty.

Well, Leary and I finally went at it hammer and tongs. At the end of the scheduled three rounds Mitchell called it a draw and ordered an extra round. And there I was, only 118 pounds, having to go back and fight an extra gruelling session with a 140-pound opponent. Dempsey was yelling bloody murder at Mitchell for favoring Leary but I went the extra round and won Mitchell's decision.
